The most remarkable winter weather on record is favouring equally Austro-Germans and allies, as preparations go forward on both sides for impending impact. Where a year ago the entire front east of Lake Carda was buried under nine feet of snow, to-day the rocks were bare, except peaks. The air is clear as crystal. The sun shines brightly. The cold is hard and dry and intense. When winter eventually does break it will be the Austro-Germans who will suffer under the greatest handicap. They must transport supplies for great distances over difficult mountain regions.

Inspired by the knowledge that they are fighting over the same historic battlefields where a dozen former French armies in Italy have attained their greatest glory, the present day Poilus are taking up contact with the enemy with a degree of enthusiasm unequalled since 1914.

CHICAGO IS PREPARING TO RENDER AID

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

CHICAGO, Ill., Dec. 8. — Mayor Thompson has appointed a special committe to take charge of the Halifax relief work here. The committee will hold a public meeting to-day.

The Halifax Disaster

On Sunday evening, at Murray St. Baptist Church, Rev. T. R. Webb will speak on the subject, "Some Things God Cannot Do," with special reference to the Halifax fire. The subject is timely, and when our entire Dominion is shocked at the dreadful calamity of a few days ago, and moved with sympathy for the thousands who have been plunged into increased sorrow, many will welcome the opportunity of considering the question indicated by the topic advertised.

LADIES' AUXILIARY OF THE G.W.V.A. FORMALLY ORGANIZED

Mrs. (Col.) Mills is Elected President of New Organization Which Will Look After the Welfare of Peterborough's Returned Soldiers — Enjoyable Addresses Given.

SUB. COMMITTE REPORTS

The plans of the sub-committee of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Great War Veterans' Association were placed before a large and representative body of Peterborough's citizens for their ratification in Victoria Hall last night, and the following officers elected for the Auxiliary:

Hon. Pres., Mrs. W. R. Morris.
President, Mrs. (Lt.-Col.) Mills.
1st Vice-Pres., Mrs. (Dr.) Young.
2nd Vice-Pres., Mrs. Fessenden.
Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. Massey-Cooke.
Recording Secretary, Miss Jane Layfield.
Treasurer, Mrs. R. J. Devey.

On the Platform.

Mrs. Knox, whose interest and activity is largely responsible for the organising of the G.W.V.A. Auxiliary, the members, sub-committee, and the executive of the G.W.V.A. occupied the platform.

Mayor Duffus, Chairman.

His Worship Mayor Duffus, who occupied the chair, said whilst there was no need to eulogise the Canadian soldiers and what they have done, they having made an immortal name for themselves by their deeds at the Front and bringing Canada to a place she never occupied before, he felt that no effort on the part of the women could be too great for the benefit of the Veterans. He said that in connection with the paying of the rent for the War Veterans' quarters, which he had hoped would be done by the Council, he found that a special Act must be passed by the Council or that the Province could provide a general rule authorising every Council to give such a grant. However, the rent question was secondary, and the War Veterans would be seen through.

Mayor Duffus suggested that the ex-officers of the Board of Trade should act as a committee to take up the work of raising funds.

Mrs. John Allan.

Mrs. Allan, in a very able speech outlined the reason for organising the Auxiliary of the War Veterans. She spoke of the undying debt of gratitude Canada owes her heroes who have fought for the great principles of freedom, without which life would not be worth living. We sent the boys away with great promises, and now we must not countenance the slight danger of forgetting the sacred promises we have made. Club rooms which are homes for the heroes to fight their battles over again, to meet for social hours, and to spend many happy hours, must be provided not only for to-day, but to last as long as our thankfulness lasts, which means for ever.

The Cross Roads.

Mrs. Allan spoke of the cross roads which confronted the women at the beginning of the war—the easy primrose path of gaiety or the stern and austere road of sacrifice. Most women took the rough road. The national life of a country lies largely

ARTILLERY FIRE TAKES BIG TOLL FROM THE GERMANS

British Guns Have Been Concentrated on the Evacuated Zone and Are Inflicting Heavy Casualties Upon Masses of the Enemy

INFANTRY ACTIONS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Dec. 8. — The British artillery fire upon the evacuated zone in Flanders is very heavy and the Germans have suffered considerable casualties. Something like 2,000 Germans were killed at one place north of Flesquieres yesterday afternoon by artillery fire. These had pushed forward and were exerting pressure against the British near Orival Wood. The British fell back slightly and the Germans also retired to a position behind the wood, where they assembled in large numbers. The British artillery put down a heavy barrage and badly smashed the entire force. Yesterday afternoon the Germans also attacked again about Lavacquerie, but were repulsed with machine gun fire. British still hold the high ground near here, and the Germans continue infantry assaults in an attempt to oust the defenders.

U. S. Navy Supplies For The Sufferers

(Special to the Toronto Star and the Peterborough Examiner).

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—Twenty-five thousand blankets and six hundred stoves from the Portsmouth, N.H., Navy Yard were to-day ordered sent by Secretary of the Navy Daniels to relieve the suffering of blizzard-swept Halifax. He also despatched a hospital unit from Provincetown, Mass., and informed the Red Cross that everything the navy yard has available for relief work is at the disposal of Halifax.

OTTAWA, Dec. 8.—A proclamation is issued to-day, calling the first draft of selected men under the Military Service Act to the colours on January 3rd.

"It was originally hoped to put the first draft on active service by Dec. 10. It would probably be possible, it is pointed out here, to make the call about Dec. 24 or Dec. 25, but it is felt that members of the draft should be accorded the opportunity of spending the Christmas season with their families and friends."

AERIAL BATTLE

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

GENEVA, Switzerland, Dec. 8. — first aerial battle between Allied and German airmen over Swiss territory occurred around Basle yesterday. It appears that the Germans hard pressed by their opponents entered Switzerland on purpose. The fight took place at a great height, and the number of airplanes is not known. The encounter lasted twenty minutes. Seven bombs were dropped on Swiss territory, but only material damage resulted.

DEVASTATED HALIFAX.

The Halifax horror, in its instant awfulness, its warningless suddenness, and its enormity of suffering, is first of all an appeal to our hearts, to our pity and our purses. Thousands of people of the oldest city in the Dominion, reduced in a moment to the sufferings of pain and privation, hunger and cold, that cannot be exceeded by the horrors of the most bloody and blighted battle area in Europe, speak to us and call our help.

The full extent of the catastrophe is not yet known, but as the details trickle in over the wires, the situation grows in seriousness. There is no need, however, to await details; enough and, unfortunately, more than enough, is known, to call for universal cooperation in every part of Canada.

Appeals have been sent from the stricken city to the mayors of all Canadian towns and citizens to help supply the most immediate necessities—all sorts of building material—so that the work of restoring the wrecked and shattered homes to shelter the sufferers from the rigours of winter weather may be as speedily done as possible.

But this is only "first aid"; the need for food supplies and clothing and for money to purchase these and other necessities, will be urgent; and the people at large are called upon to, each in his or her ability, to contribute to a relief fund which should at once be organized in every city, town, village, hamlet and township in the country.

Let each one picture the suffering in many acres of shattered city, with more than two thousand dead and more thousands wounded, and more thousands homeless, unsheltered and unfed! and contrast it with our own comfort and our own ability to help. If our hearts and our purses are not touched by this consideration, we can lay no claim to the possession of human compassion or the grace of charity.

The Victory Loan both permits and justifies the government in being chivalrously generous to the relief of the Halifax sufferers.

THE REAL ISSUE.

The electors of Canada—those not disfranchised by the Borden Government—are called upon to decide one of the most momentous issues ever presented to the country. Stripped of all is glaour of appeal, stripped of its pseudo-patriotic disguises, the issue is the endorsation and return of the Borden Government, with all its sins upon its head.

The issue is the retention in power of a Government which so muddled and mismanaged war administration that their Minister of Militia roundly and repeatedly denounced, the graft, delay, and ministerial interference, that hampered war work and imperilled the health and lives of soldiers, so much that the results could not have been more sinister if the German Kaiser had concocted the obstructions.

The return of a Government, headed by a leader whose "inactivity" was the excuse for Hon. Robert Rogers, who doesn't often stick at trifles, retiring from the Government. It must have been very bad when he couldn't associate with it.

This same Government, afraid to meet the people in its real name, now coes before us as a Union Government composed of Conservatives and Liberals—fifteen Conservatives and eight Liberals.

Among the strongest claims submitted that the Borden Government is a real Union Governmen, is the fact that it has abolished patronage, the crowning curse of the Government, in whose name graft, corruption, and waste ran riot.

Rubbish! The very foundation stone of the Borden Union Government was graft and the most brazen and dishonest patronage.

While luring Liberals, under the specious plea of burying the political hatchet to secure co-operation, while he was roping Liberals into a non-partizan Union Government, Sir Robert Borden committed the most stupendous single stroke, the greatest composite crime, of patronage graft ever perpetrated in this graft-ridden country.

While confiding Grits were considering his oily invitations to help form a non-partizan Government, Sir Robert Borden was breaking faith, outraging decency, abusing his moribund power and authority by pitchforking about two dozen political parasites as permanent leeches upon the public chest.

He made senators of retiring Tory members by the score, and bribed members of his Cabinet with fat offices to perform the patriotism of retiring—upon pension—to give place to Grits, so that a non-partizan Union Government could be formed.

In another place on this page are the names of these partizans who were given fat places in the very act and moment of invitations to Liberals to form a non-partizan Government.

No wonder The Globe becomes enthusiastic over the Carvell crusade, that promises a death blow to patronage graft. Sir Robert Borden has left no material. For the moment the resources of graft have been exhausted. Sir Robert Borden has filled all the fat places by distributing to his colleagues and partizans two dozen offices, imposing a permanent charge of $100,000 a year on the people of Canada—enough to add a dollar a day to the pay of 100,000 soldiers or add $100 a year to the pensions of 1,000 soldiers.

Yet we are asked to believe in a Union Government, founded on graft patronage, hypocritically claimed as non-partizan—with the same old crowd of camp followers—the big interests, the pork-fed profiteers, the munitions grafters, and the predatory elements that have for the past three years preyed on the public resources, weakened Canada's conributions to war winning, killed the spirit of recruiting in Canadians, who saw wealth, graft and grab flourish under Government patronage, and the common people ground between the upper and the nether millstone of permitted and unpunished plunder in high places, and the results of almost inaccessible food and necessaries of life.

No matter how much Government may do for stricken Halifax, there will be much left for the people to do.

PARTIZANSHIP AS PRINCIPAL ELEMENT IN NON-PARTIZANSHIP

One of the first professions of the new Government was that patronage was to be abolished. The degree of sincerity of this profession may be gauged from the following list of partisan appointments made during the period of Union negotiations and thereafter:

J. H. Fisher, Conservative Member of Parliament, appointed to Senate at salary of $2,500.00.

Richard Blain, Conservative Member of Parliament, appointed to Senate at salary of $2,500.00.

Lendrum McMeans, a prominent Conservative, appointed to the Senate at salary of $2,500.00.

D. O. Lesperance, an ex-Conservative Member of Parliament, appointed to the Senate at salary of $2,500.00.

G. G. Foster, a Conservative, and Director of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, appointed to the Senate at a salary of $2,500.00.

R. S. White, a Conservative, and owner of the Montreal Gazette, appointed to the Senate at a salary of $2,500.00.

R. H. C. Pringle, a Conservative, appointed to the Senate at a salary of $2,500.00.

A. C. Macdonnell, a Conservative Member of Parliament, appointed to the Senate at a salary of $2,500.00.

Aime Benard, a Conservative, M.P. P., appointed to the Senate at a salary of $2,500.00.

Clarence Jamieson, a Conservative Member of Parliament, appointed to the Civil Service Commission at a salary of $5,000.00.

Hon. W. J. Roche, a Minister in the Borden Government, appointed as Chairman for the Civil Service Commission at a salary of $6,000.00.

A. A. McLean, a Conservative Member of Parliament, appointed as Controller of the Royal West Mounted Police at a salary of $5,000.00.

C. H. Barnard, a Conservative Member of Parliament, appointed to the Senate at a salary of $2,500.00.

J. D. Taylor, a Conservative Member of Parliament, appointed to the Senate at a salary of $2,500.00.

F. L. Schaffner, a Conservative Member of Parliament, apointed to the Senate at a salary of $2,500.00.

W. B. Willoughby, Conservative Leader of Saskatchewan Legislature, appointed to the Senate at a salary of $2,500.00.

E. N. Lewis, a Conservative Member of Parliament, appointed as Junior Judge at a salary provided by statute.

E. J. Hearn, a prominent Conservative, appointed as Junior Judge, at a salary provided by statute.

A. C. Boyce, a Conservative member of Parliament, appointed to the Railway Commission, at a salary of $8,000.00.

G. H. Brabazon, a Conservative Member of Parliament, appointed Supt. of Reservoirs, Upper Ottawa System, at a salary of $2,500.00.

Hon. F. Cochrane, a Conservative Member of Parliament, to be appointed Chairman, C. N. R. Board, at a good salary.

Hon. J. D. Hazen, a Conservative Minister in the Borden Government, appointed Chief Justice of New Brunswick, at a salary of $7,000.00.

Hon. Geo. H. Perley, a Conservative Minister in the Borden Government, to be High Commissioner for Canada in England at a salary of $10,000.00.

A study of the whole history of Union makes it plain that its one purpose and aim was to perpetuate the Border Government, and to continue the reign of special privilege which had characterized the whole of the Borden regime. Liberal members who entered have "placed the mantle of respectability" upon all the nefarious acts of the Government, and must share its responsibility for them.

It is still the "Borden Government."
—Brockville Recorder.

"LILAC TIME" GREAT PLAY

Will Be Repeated at the Grand Opera House To-night and Theatre Goers Should Not Miss the Opportunity

Theatre-goers of Peterborough should not miss the opportunity of seeing "Lilac Time" at the Grand Opera House to-night. This striking play, written by Jane Cowl and Jane Murfin, was the attraction at the Grand last evening and proved an altogether delightful production, saturated with the war atmosphere and containing a pretty love story as well. The plot is not an ambitious one—the story revolves around the love of a little French village girl for an English officer who is billeted at her home—but the play gives an adequate portrait of life behind the lines in war-stricken France. Many of the characters are in the khaki of the British expeditionary force — the others are French villagers. All are drawn from life and cleverly drawn, too, the result being an impressive production.

Miss Adelaide French scored heavily in the part of Jeanine, the French heroine, being at her best in the emotional scenes, especially in the parting with her lover and in the scene when she is informed that he has been killed—happily a false report. Miss French handled the French-English dialect cleverly and was altogether pleasing throughout. Alphews Lincoln gave a good account of himself as Lieut. Phillip Blythe, the soldier hero, proving manly and likeable in his different scenes. Charles Henderson's portrayal of the part of Major Halloway, was a masterpiece. He made the role of the Major more realistic and convincing. Veno Falkner also starred as Lieut. George Smylie. He was a real flesh and blood subaltern of a type found everywhere in the British army, a rollicking, jolly youngster who die just as gayly as they live. Chas. Adams contributed a splendid bit as Hawkins, the "grousing" old Tommy who is never satisfied with anything. All the other roles are in good hands. The play is beautifully staged.

Little Progress Made At The Court Of Appeal

A Few Names Were Added to the Voters' List Last Evening—Court Will Sit Tonight

Very little progress was made last evening at the initial sitting of the Court of Appeal to hear complaints against the voters' lists. There was everywhere a lack of information or anything that would materially assist the court. Mr. Guise Bagley represented the Burnham interests, and Mr. O'Brien appeared for R. R. Hall. Mr. O'Brien succeeded in having a number of names placed on the voters' lists, while a few appeals entered by Mr. Bagley were allowed by the Court. Some of the appeals entered by Mr. O'Brien and allowed by the court were as follows:

Roland Gordon, William Lavery, L. Lettelier, George Maloney, Mrs. E. Martin, E. Murphy, J. Picard, William Rose, George Watson, John Austin, E. S. Mitchell, Kate Mitchell, Bert Howden, Mrs. M. Howden, William Flood, H. Flood, Mrs. J. Gifford, Isadore Goselin, M. Goselin, John Pilling, Ethel Pilling and a number of others. The enumerators who worked with Mr. Bagley admitted these names to the lists and they were allowed by the Court. Mr. Bagley objected to all foreign sounding names and they were left open for further investigation. Looking over the lists compiled by the enumerators it is hard to see how some of them could have done any worse than they did.

One list in the Centre Ward contains the name of a man who has been dead for some time, and also the name of Carl Shmuck, former proprietor of the Grand Hotel, who has been out of the city for a year, while his successor, Mr. R. Winch, is listed as a labourer. Included in this list is the name of a former employee of Cressman's, who left Peterborough six months ago.

Judge Huycke referred to the list compiled by the lady enumerator in sub-division number one as one of the best of the four lists that were reviewed last evening. Mr. Bagley asked the Court to delay hearing the appeals for a day or two so as to enable both sides to get together and if possible eliminate from the list of appeals all names that could be mutually agreed upon. "We will not get through in a month, much less five days, at this rate of going," observed Judge Huycke. The first few lists were scanned and a number of names were adjusted to the satisfaction of all parties.

The Court will sit to-day, and it is altogether probable that a night session will be held.

The Food Value of Good Milk

That is—Pure, Clarified and Pasteurized Milk

This is a matter that every person should understand for reasons of Economy, as well as for its relations to Health.

Milk is one of the most wonderful foods. It is one of the cheapest foods on the market. It is also one of the most easily digested foods. It is very nourishing. It contains the chief parts of the different foods commonly used on the table.

Milk is the equal to a meal consisting of meat and eggs, sugar and cereals, oils and fats, with salt and water. A milk diet, therefore, is like a mixed diet. Milk contains all the elements necessary to sustain life. As to the comparative cost of milk as a food, it gives more for the money than any animal food you use.

To get the nourishment contained in a quart of milk—according to Prof. Rosenau of Harvard—you would have to buy and prepare ¾ pound of beef, or 8 eggs, or 2 pounds of chicken, or 2 pounds of codfish. Each of these cost you more, to say nothing of the time, labor and fuel required in preparation.

BEGIN TO-DAY TO DRINK MORE MILK. TEACH YOUR FAMILY TO KNOW ITS VALUE.

A Graphic Story Of The Disaster Told By Survivor

"By this time, firemen were rushing about and confusion was so great that I decided that it was useless to go further, and began to help pick up injured lying in all positions in the street. It was a hideous nightmare. Everywhere smoke and flames were swirling about and in them bodies writhed and screeched inhumanely and then were quiet. In some instances I helped pull little mites from under mangled, bloody bits of human bodies.

TOO STUNNED TO REALIZE.

"The horror of the whole thing even then did not dawn on me at first. I suppose I was too stunned. It was when I began to gather up the things that had been men and women, a little while before, that I began to regain my full senses. I can recall seeing many bodies lying in pools of blood, where they had been struck down by flying timbers and bricks as I had. In not a few instances did I see a head or a foot, and something more, lying in piles of debris. I worked until I was driven from the scene of carnage by fire and smoke. By that time I began to get dizzy and I did not know until later that I had been bleeding steadily from my wounds. My hands were torn from digging in the wreckage.

"Men were working like fiends to head off the flames and render succor to the men, women and children who lay helpless under the ruins, in many instances conscious and watching their approaching death by fire.

"Sometime in the afternoon I gave up. I was stumbling about in a daze from loss of blood, and as I fell it became harder each time to struggle to my feet. My lungs seemed on fire and my eyes were like hot coals. It all seems like an incredible dream now.

"Even then—in the afternoon—all about me were women streaming blood, clasping bandaged babies to their breasts, who moaned and wandered about aimless. Men, torn and bruised, and I think insane from despair and grief, were everywhere clawing among the ruins, utterly regardless of everything else.

"When I left Halifax yesterday (Friday) there were still many victims alive under the wreckage. All estimates of the dead must be only guesswork, for it is absolutely impossible at this time to make calculations."

Ladies' Auxiliary Of The G.W.V.A.

in the hands of women, for example Rome, which, when the women became idle and lax, began to crumble. It is up to the women to-day to set Canada through to great things, and it is in their hands to save or not save the men overseas by voting on the 17th with consideration and careful thought. It is not a political issue we face, but a question of keeping Canada out of the mire and placing her on a pinnacle, and it is a sacred question the women are privileged to vote upon on their first use of the Federal ballot.

Mrs. Allan concluded by wishing the Veterans God-speed in their plans and assuring them the women of Canada are behind them in their work.

Nursing Sister Douglas.

Mrs. Douglas, who has lately returned for a short furlough from several years' experience with the hardships of a frontier nurse, gave a graphic description of her activities in the English, French and Lemnos military hospitals. Outlining her trip when she crossed to England with the 21st Battalion, through the military hospitals in France and England to her return, she told of the magnificent courage of the Canadian, British and Australian soldiers on all the battle fronts. She felt anything women could do was very little in comparison with what the boys have done for us. This is not the men's war, she said, but the women's war, too, and the fortitude with which women in England and Canada have risen to the occasion is wonderful. In Lemnos, for the work of which Mrs. Douglas volunteered in 1915, the work was stupendous, the hospitals being overcrowded with from 300 to 1,000 patients. Scarcity of food, sickness, and terrible numbers of flies added to the horrors of the nursing; but through all, the boys kept up a bright and cheerful face and were anxious to get back to the fight. Mrs. Douglas spoke of the need on the Italian front of the steadying influence of the Canadian boys.

In conclusion, Mrs. Douglas spoke of the feeling of the boys on board ship coming out, all anxious to get here to vote for a Government which will send the boys quickly to the aid of those who have gone before.

The Programme.

A splendid musical programme was provided by the committee. Mr. Douglas Carlisle's solo, rendered in his customary acceptable manner, was warmly applauded. Mr. Charles Coleman, who sang in costume, was greatly enjoyed in a Suffragette solo; while Mrs. Nicholls won many friends by her solo, rendered in her particularly sympathetic style.

Report of Committee.

The report of the Club Room Committee was read by Mr. Dobbin, stating that $1,500 would probably be a conservative estimate of the expenditure for furnishing the rooms, and also cover the rental.

The rooms over the Royal Bank were practically decided upon.

A vote of thanks to the speakers and those taking part in the programme was moved by Lieut.-Col. Mills and seconded by Mr. C. Fessenden.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

Bank Of Montreal Receives Centenary Balance Sheet

Annual Meeting Also Marked Completion of Fifty Years of Uninterrupted Services in the Bank by Sir Vincent Meredith, Bart — Sir Frederick Williams-Taylor Draws Attention to the Developments That Have Had Special Effect on Canada's Economic Position During the Past Year—Tribute to Men Overseas.

MONTREAL, December 8.—(Special)—The 100th Annual Meeting of the Bank of Montreal proved one of the outstanding historical events in the long career of the Bank.

The reports presented indicated that the Bank is in a stronger position to-day than perhaps it has ever been.

Coupled with the celebration of the 100th anniversary was the completion of fifty years of uninterrupted service in the Bank of Sir Vincent Meredith, the President.

The high esteem in which Sir Vincent is held by the shareholders was manifested by the warm tributes made to him by the shareholders present.

Mr. Nelles, one of the oldest shareholders, in drawing attention to the 100th anniversary, referred particularly to the stalwarts of to-day at the head of the Bank, mentioning particularly Sir Vincent Meredith, R. B. Angus, and Lord Shaughnessey, and hoped that when the history of another 100 years was ended that they would be included among the stalwarts.

Sir Frederick Williams-Taylor referred particularly to the great number of men the Bank had already sent overseas and made the statement that at the present time 42% of the staff of the Bank were women clerks.

The members of the staff overseas have established a most honourable record and in conclusion Sir Frederick referred particularly to the great loss both the Bank and Canada had sustained through the death overseas of Captain David Jellett Barker, who had been assistant to the General Manager of the Bank. His loss had been a deplorable one.

The annual meeting of the Bank of Montreal always attracts a good deal of interest owing to the important announcements made at it regarding commercial and trade conditions in Canada. This should be particularly so this year, as it is recognized that the Dominion has been thrown on its own resources almost entirely as the result of the developments in connection with the European war.

Owing to the 100th anniversary, Sir Vincent Meredith, the president, drew attention to some of the features of expansion the Bank had enjoyed and expressed the view that he was warranted in stating, that never during the Bank's long course was its prestige higher, its business in sounder or more elastic condition, and its earning power greater than he believed them to be to-day. He also expressed pleasure in believing that the Bank had never enjoyed a wider measure of public confidence.

Business Conditions in Canada.

Sir Vincent referred particularly to the general conditions in the country, stating that business conditions in Canada continued buoyant.

"There has been no recession in the great wave of industrial and commercial activity of the past few years, and trade in all lines is highly prosperous. Sir Vincent pointed out that Canada's chief concern was to prepare for the period after the war, and recommended that Canada's trade should be extended in all directions during the period of the post-bellum reconstruction, either through commercial intelligence acting directly for the Government or a board approved by the Government.

Canada to Meet New Conditions.

"Our country is one of the most productive in the world. Our gold holdings per capita almost equal those of the United States. Our natural resources are unbounded, and our credit is irreproachable. There are no doubt difficulties and anxieties ahead which we shall still have to face, but I think you may look forward with confidence to providing without undue strain for the burden of our patriotic endeavour.

Taking Optimistic View of Future.

Sir Frederick Williams-Taylor, the general manager, in referring to the great privilege that was afforded him to present to the shareholders the centenary balance sheet, drew attention to the fact that it was also the anniversary of the president, Sir Vincent Meredith, who had completed fifty years of uninterrupted service in the bank, and it was therefore opportune that they should extend to both heartiest congratulations.

Sir Frederick referred particularly to the developments during the year that had effected the business of the Bank and the country. He pointed out that above all other events the entry of the United States of America into the war stood paramount, and bore upon the Canadian economic and banking position with a force, the effect of which is only now commencing to be felt.

"Shortly after the outbreak of war," said Sir Frederick, "Wall Street took the place of the London market for our country's public loans, and continued in that place until a few months ago. Now the influx of American capital is scanty, the inflow of borrowed money from the United States—which we had come to look upon as a matter of course—is suspended, it may be until the end of the war; and Canada is 'on her own.'"

Sir Frederick took the view that such developments would be regarded too seriously by some and not seriously enough by others. On the one hand, industrial developments would be checked, but on the other hand the inability to borrow may prove a blessing in disguise, once we have adjusted our affairs to the changed conditions.

Policy of the Bank Fully Justified.

Sir Frederick drew attention to the necessity of the banks of the country to keep themselves in particularly strong shape owing to the difficulty there was to gauge the future. This permitted Sir Frederick to draw attention to the position of the Bank of Montreal, when he said:

"Thanks mainly to the soundness of our banking system and to the healthy condition of our banks, Canada can still hold up her financial head. Our own Bank's ratio of quick assets to liabilities is 75 1-2 per cent. compared with 75 per cent. a year ago, and 64 per cent. the preceding year.

"We have heard it remarked by certain friends that the Canadian banks are too strong, and your own Bank particularly so; but permit me to express my clear conviction that the sheet anchor of our Canadian national ship is the Canadian banks, and that the anchor must be strong to hold against wind and tide. The Banks have kept strong in an endeavour to prevent currency inflation, while at the same time they have made war advances to the Canadian and Imperial Governments to an amount that would have been regarded as impossible three years ago. Such advances are naturally included among liquid assets. The loans made by the banks to the Canadian and Imperial Governments have enabled the business of the country to be carried to an extent otherwise impracticable."

Tribute to Staff and Men Overseas.

Sir Frederick Williams-Taylor, in responding to the vote of thanks to the management and staff, took occasion to pay a special tribute to the services of the men at home and to the record of the members of the staff overseas, saying:

"As an indication of the extent to which our male officials enlisted, I may mention that 42 p.c. of our present staff are women clerks.

Both our men and women clerks have worked ungrudgingly early and late, with but the briefest holidays, actuated by a high sense of patriotism and by an admirable sense of duty to our Bank. It may truly be said that we enter this, the second century of our institution, with a staff whose loyalty has never been surpassed, not only in our history, but in the history of business corporations in this country.

As for our splendid contingent with the colours they are above praise. We follow their future in France with anxious pride, and will welcome them back when the war is won. Many have been wounded. No less than 100 lie under the reeking sod of shattered Flanders. The names of these splendid Patriots will stand forever both in the records of our Bank and of our Empire which they have served so well. It would be remiss not to refer to the great loss we have sustained in the recent death at the front of Captain David Jellett Barker. I can find no words with which to express my personal regret, while to the Bank and his country the untimely closing of a career such as his, is deplorable indeed.

City Assured Of An Adequate Supply of Coal

Reporting to the Council last night the result of his coal mission to Ottawa, where he interviewed Deputy Fuel Controller Peterson, Mayor Duffus stated that Peterborough is assured of an adequate supply of coal. Only as a last resort will the Controller's Department assent to the confiscation of private supplies, and it is expected that this extreme measure will not have to be employed.

In the meantime, if the Mayor could present an affidavit from one citizen that he or she had been refused coal by all the local dealers, the Deputy Controller intimated that the Department would immediately take charge of the situation. In this connection a woman swore to an affidavit that she had been unable to get coal from four local dealers, but this morning she received a supply.

The situation is grave, according to the information the Mayor obtained, but is not alarming. Two hundred thousand tons of coal is the allowance for Ontario for November and December, and with the turn of the year it is expected that the coal receipts will gradually increase.

The Mayor has instructions to see the Ontario Controller, and will go to Toronto on Monday.

The city's fuel depot is assured of one car a week, according to Ald. Stratton's report, and the first one will be forwarded next week.

SUSPICIOUS ACTIONS OF CHARLIE GRANT AT THE BORDEN MEETING

Charlie Grant, the pickpocket suspect who was arrested at the Borden meeting by Detective Newhall, was remanded for another week by Magistrate Dumble in spite of the objections of his counsel, Mr. G. N. Gordon. He is charged with vagrancy.

Grant or Greaves, whichever his name may be, is dchited to Montreal. Chief Thompson stated that the Millbrook police wants Grant held for examination there. A number of the neighbours went home from the Borden meeting in the Cavan town minus their rolls.

"They've already had a week to think it over," Mr. Gordon said. "Some of them are looking for a little Christmas money."

Detective Newhall, first witness, stated that he met the prisoner Grant on Friday night, November 30th, on Charlotte street, coming from the direction of the G.T.R. station. I listened to his conversation at the White House for some time. After supper he left and walked up George street to Murray street.

"Every little way he would stop, turn around, look into windows and up and down the street, apparently trying to see if he was followed. When he turned the corner of Murray street to go west he ran as fast as he could and entered the large crowd which had assembled on the south side of the armouries. He pushed his way well into the crowd and commenced jostling an old man."

"Constable Blade, who was in uniform, said something about the mushing. The prisoner immediately backed out, came around the back of the crowd, and as he was attempting to go into the crowd again he met me face to face. He made a quick spurt down toward the sidewalk. I grabbed hold of him. He said, "What are you taking me for? I've done nothing."

I then said, "What are you doing in that crowd?"

He said, "I came here to hear the old gentleman speak."

"Was that Rowell?" Mr. Gordon asked.

"You had lots of chance to get in there," Detective had said. "I saw what you were doing. He told me he came from Montreal. I heard him distinctly tell another man he came from Toronto, and he registered from there. I handed him over to Constable Deannard and he brought him to the police station."

"When I searched him at the station I found the name on letters and note book in his pocket was Charles Greaves. He said his real name was Charles Grant and that the letters were given to him by another man to be handed to Greaves when he met him. He wound up by saying he was drunk and he was sober as I was."

Chief Thompson testified that after warning the witness he asked him where he came from. He said he came from Montreal, where he ran a gaming house and followed the races. He had $25 in his possession.

Mr. Gordon argued that while there might be ground for regarding Grant as a suspicious character it had not been proven that he was a vagrant.

REVOLUTION IN LISBON

MADRID, Dec. 8.—A revolution has broken out in Lisbon, the Capital of Portugal, according to a despatch received by way of Oporto and Tuy. Outbreaks also are said to have occurred at Oporto.

Give Her the Gift She Loves

NEED OF GREATER FOOD PRODUCTION IS STRONGLY EMPHASIZED

Mr. R. R. Hall addressed a large and enthusiastic audience at the Township of Ennismore last evening, in the Town Hall.

He poited out that Great Britain had especially requested Canada to furnish her with all the cereals, meats and fats that Canada can produce.

The British government sent out to Canada and the United States special representatives to urge upon Sir Robert Borden the importance of sending food stuffs to Great Britain to make sure that the British people and her Allies would not be forced into submission to Germany through starvation.

But Sir Robert Borden has taken no steps whatever to encourage by government assistance the production of food stuffs, which the British Government [illegible] said Mr. Hall, "it is only yesterday that I saw a letter written to the wife of a Canadian Peterborough soldier that he was withdrawn from the trenches because he had contracted the terrible disease of trench mouth.

It is very contagious and results in a bealing mouth and bealing gums and causes the teeth to fall out.

The disease is caused through living in the open air and not having sufficient fats and sugars to keep the system healthy.

The food situation in Great Britain and in our Canadian army must be serious when cases arise that our boys so want for fat in the trenches that their bodies become so run down that they will conract this terribly painful disease.

The sad part of the whole matter is that Sir Robert Borden will not listen to the appeals of Great Britain for the very food that will enable her to keep our boys healthy in the trenches and enable them to perform their duties.

No wonder the vote is going strongly against Sir Robert Borden among the soldiers in the trenches, whom they roundly condemn.

No wonder the Halifax Chronicle wired the Toronto Star that the soldier's vote was going against the so-called Union Government on account of the intolerable conditions under which our boys were living in the trenches through the shortage of all kinds of supplies.

Even Sir Robert Borden has adopted the "do nothing" policy of Mr. H. Burnham.

to them. Sir Sam Hughes well said a letter to Sir Robert Borden two years ago that the agents of the German Government could not have taken more active steps to bring disaster to British arms than those that were taken by Sir Robert Borden, in the holding up of supplies.

Those words are true to-day. What better and more effective steps could be taken by German agents to force Great Britain and her Allies into subjection to Germany than by withholding from Great Britain the food stuffs that she calls upon us to produce to supply her wants for the coming year.

Sir Robert Borden, in the Peterborough Armouries, laughed at the policy of increased food production. The words used by the Chairman were "cereals and meats and fats." These words produced a laugh.

Halifax People Like a Procession of War Refugees

Canadian Press Despatch:

MONTREAL, Dec. 8.—Rev. George Adam, pastor of Emmanuel Congregational Church, was in Halifax when the city was wrecked. He returned to Montreal this morning.

"Halifax seemed the most peaceful place in the world as I looked from the Halifax hotel at a quarter to nine last Thursday morning across the harbour toward Dartmouth," he said. "About ten minutes later there was a violent tremor which shook the building, and I imagined that half the hotel had collapsed. Three or four seconds passed and then came a terrific crash. The windows of my bedroom crashed in, frames, glass and blind; table and chairs were pitched over like ninepins. Instinctively then, I concluded that the town was being bombarded.

While I continued dressing rapidly I could hear the people running about the streets shouting and weeping. The hotel corridors were strewn with plaster and broken wood, while half-dressed, hysterical guests were running about asking excitedly what had happened.

On reaching the street, the first rough information, "an explosion," was heard passing from mouth to mouth. A walk through the streets revealed awful damage. In Barrington street, which is the chief street in Halifax shopping centre, I saw only one glass that was not blown in. Jewellery, clothes, fruits, sweets, cakes, had all been flung into the street and mixed up with a sea of broken glass, making a strange picture. People, who like myself, had gone into the street to look around, were suddenly warned by shouted instructions, to proceed to the south of the town, as another explosion seemed to be imminent.

PROCESSION OF REFUGEES.

In front of the Lieutenant-Governor's residence was an open space, which seemed to be safe enough for me, so I waited there to watch the streams of fleeing folk seeking shelter. All that had been pictured and written of the fleeing Belgian refugees, flashed across my mind as I witnessed the stampede. There were nuns, who had left the cloistered quiet of their convents, old bed-ridden women were being carried along in sheets, half dressed mothers with babies wrapped in blankets hurried past. Blind men were being led by little boys.

It was pathetic, too, to see little girls, clutching their cats and pet dogs, hurry past. Many, very many, of these pedestrians, were streaming with blood from cuts on face and hands. There were motors, too, and carts and waggons and perambulators in plenty in this flow of frightened people.

"Soon the story of the disaster began to shape in my mind as I had conversations with people passing who had come from the scene. The first actual tale of horror was from ex-Comptroller McKeen, who, with many tears, spoke of deaths, maiming and burning in the north end district.

The fear of a further explosion passed as the result of the valiant efforts of the fire fighters, and with that relief some of the people turned backward to their wrecked homes. The majority of them could not, however.

There are many stories of families wiped out, of burned children seeking vainly to awaken a dead mother; of workmen husbands racing home to find ruin, and their families dead. Maclean's chauffeur, with one little sister are all that are left of a family of nine. A railway man at the roundhouse who found his wife and children dead, went back to his post to do his duty."

MISTAKE IN SIGNALS WAS CAUSE OF THE DISASTER

stopped some distance outside of Richmond, to see what the trouble was. The railroad yards were full of cars, and he could see little of the city. He went into a caboose of a freight train standing nearby for information and began questioning a brakeman who was sitting on a bunk with a pipe in his mouth. When the man did not answer March touched him. He was dead. Others of the train crew examined the body and declared death must have come swiftly from concussion, as the man's pipe was clutched tightly between his teeth. Walking about the yards March saw whole box cars lying many feet away from the tracks, where they had been hurled by the blast. A few hundred yards ahead of the passenger train a steel bridge had crumpled into a tangled mass of steel.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

HALIFAX, December 8.—All buildings of the Exhibition have been destroyed. Hundreds of pitiful tales are being told.

REPORTED KILLED.

Jack Ronayne, marine reporter of the Halifax Chronicle, telephoned his office at 9 a.m. Thursday that a vessel was burning in the harbour. He ran to the spot to get the story and was killed in the explosion. His corpse was borne to an infirmary. A little later a girl reporter from his paper went there to get a list of injured. She found Ronayne among the dead.

Relief work started immediately. By noon an organization of leading citizens had been formed in a meeting at the City Hall. The schools were made relief centres. The Shebucto Road school was made a temporary morgue. Automobiles and waggons were commandeered to carry the dead and injured.

FOOD DEPOTS OPENED.

Three food depots were opened. The Academy of Music and the churches were made into shelters for the destitute. Citizens opened their homes to the survivors. Every house was crowded. Some of the refugees are trying to live in what remains of their homes to-day. The Rev. N. Lenoine is pastor of St. Mark's Anglican Church in the north end. His house is gone, his church is gone, there remains but the cellar of his Sunday school. And there the pastor is now living. Half of the members of his parish are dead. All but two of his choir have perished. Not a single vestryman remains. Practically the same is true of St. Joseph's Roman Catholic parish.

Forty-six children died in the Protestant Orphanage. With the matron and three domestics two children survive.

Two hundred and fifty little children were taken into the train and doctored up as well as possible. Many are permanently blinded. One woman covered with blood, was hugging two babies to her breast, both dead. Four children died on the train on the way to Truro.

A Car Shortage Now Inevitable

An Upward Revision in Prices Coming Soon—Interview With Mayor Duffus, Ford Car Dealer

In order to get information regarding the automobile situation, which has been reported to be affected as to production and future prices, the Examiner secured an interview with Mayor Duffus this morning relative to Ford cars and the Smith Motor Truck, which he represents.

Mr. Duffus stated that "there is an absolute certainty of there being a shortage of cars, even for practical purposes; and in addition, before six or seven weeks have elapsed, there will be a raise in price."

"But there has been a raise in price in the case of most other cars, except the Ford, and now that the winter has set in, the impression has been that the Ford price would not be raised until summer. You think it is absolutely certain that the Ford people will have to advance?"

"Nothing surer, and that before many moons. The seriousness of the situation to the man who expects to buy a car this year is obvious. And it is equally obvious that unless the prospective buyer acts reasonably soon, he may find it a difficult matter to obtain a car at any price."

From other sources it has been learned that a serious curtailment of the production of Fords is inevitable and the demand is soon likely to far exceed the output.

Mr. Duffus also stated that he has "endeavoured to advise all intending purchasers of the existing conditions with a view of doing everything possible to procure such automobiles and motor trucks as will be absolutely necessary for the coming season before the price advances."

Mr. Duffus is making a special effort at the present time to get into contact with all prospective buyers, and states that his staff is always on hand, both day and evening, for the purpose of taking orders and giving the necessary information. 1d-1w

Has The Ex-Czar Made His Escape?

Canadian Press Despatch:

American Destroyer Is Sunk

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8. — The American destroyer Jacob Jones was sunk by a submarine at 8 o'clock on Thursday night while patrolling foreign waters, and only thirty-seven survivors have been picked up, the Navy Department announced this afternoon.

This would indicate that about sixty men were lost, although others may be safe.

The Jacob Jones was commanded by Lieut. Commander David Worth Bagley, brother of Mrs. Josephus Daniels, the wife of the Secretary of the Navy.

Tender Is Thought To Have Sunk

OTTAWA, Dec. 8.—Word has been received by the Marine Department here that S.O.S. calls have been received from the Government lighthouse tender Simcoe, which is reported disabled in a heavy sea ten miles from the Magdalene Islands. As no further messages have been received from the vessel, it is feared she has been lost with her crew of 40 persons.

CHERNIAVSKYS

The Greatest Success Toronto Has Ever Heard

Leon, Jan and Mischel Cherniavsky play here on Tuelsday next at the Conservatory Hall. The public and press of Toronto, Canada, were unanimous in agreeing that the Cherniavskys created the greatest sensation in the world of music in the history of Toronto.

The Toronto Globe of November 15, 1915, said: "Toronto has heard many great and wonderful musicians, but Toronto has never heard anything more exquisite in music than was heard on Saturday night in Massey Hall, Leo, Jan and Mischel Cherniavsky, the young Russian musicians played here for the first time."

"It is safe to augur the next time they come to Toronto every seat in the music hall will be wanted twice over. They seemed very young, particularly Jan and Mischel. Jan played the piano, Mischel the cello and Leo the violin."

"They impress one as taking life very seriously. They are deeply and gravely in earnest. When they play their faces especially Jan's, have a rapt expression, which takes them into the very heart of the music. You feel that they do indeed play from their souls, that they feel every vibrant and exquisite note."

REGENERATIVE PROCESSES IN RUSSIA

Canadian Press Despatch:

LONDON, Dec. 8.—In reiterating his former statement that regenerative processes are going on in Russia, the Petrograd correspondent of the Morning Post says: "The real Russia is silently and steadily working for reconstruction and the inevitable return to common-sense which we may hope is near at hand.

AWFUL SIGHTS IN HALIFAX

Canadian Press Despatch:

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—A. J. Goldberg, of this city, has arrived at Boston with the first train of refugees from stricken Halifax, and tells a graphic story of the first incidents of the explosion. His train was 8 miles from Halifax, when there was a slight explosion followed by a terrible one, all windows in the train being smashed. When the train pulled into Africville, one of the divisions of Halifax, which was destroyed, he says the sights were awful. "The platform of the station was crowded with wounded people," he said, "mostly children. They were groping about and couldn't see owing to splintered glass in their eyes. Many of them were cut about the neck just as if slashed by a knife.

ALD. DUNCAN A CANDIDATE IN 1918 MAYORALTY ELECTIONS

Has Been Informed By Prominent Citizens That Ald. Stratton Has Already Begun Electioneering and Responds to Many Urgings to Enter the Field.

At the request of many ratepayers, Ald. George Duncan announced today that he would be a candidate for the Mayoralty honours in 1918.

It was brought to his attention by prominent citizens that they had already been canvassed for their support by Ald. Stratton, whose intentions during the past two years have evidently resolved into a decision to place himself in the mayoralty field at the coming elections.

Ald. Duncan has received the assurance of many ratepayers during the past year, and especially during recent months, that if he would come forward as a candidate they would give him every support in recognition of the long service he has given the city as an alderman.

Ald. Duncan first entered the Council in 1905, and his experience has covered every year since then except in 1908 and 1914. He has been chairman of all the committees, except the Finance, and is schooled in all Council work. During the past three years he has been chairman of the Board of Health, the duties of which included the administration of the Isolation Hospital, and the sanitation of the city.

The prospect of a mayoraly election includes Ald. McIntyre, another veteran of the Council, who has not yet stated whether he will enter the field or not.

A Simple Way To Reduce Wrinkles

Remember that wrinkles and bagginess of cheek or chin are due to the muscular tissue losing its strength and shrinking. The skin is then too large in area to fit such tissue smoothly. It wrinkles or sags.

To remedy this condition, there's nothing so effective, so quick-acting, as a simple wash lotion easily made at home. Just get an ounce of pure powdered saxolite at your druggist's, and a half pint of witch hazel, mix the two and bathe your face in the liquid. This at once tightens the skin and solidifies the underlying tissues—which, of course, smooths out the lines and draws in the sagging skin. It also stimulates capillary circulation, bringing natural colour to faded cheeks.

COLD WAVE IS GENERAL

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

TORONTO, Dec. 8.—All Canada from the Atlantic to Winnipeg seems to be in the grip of a fierce blizzard accompanied by very cold weather. There has been no communication with Halifax this morning owing to the storm, but St. John, N.B., reports near zero weather, which must greatly increase the suffering of the stricken, wounded people.

SCENE FROM THE MOST THRILLING DRAMA EVER PRODUCED, "THE 13TH CHAIR."

Twenty-one dramatic critics representing as many publications were present at the opening night of "The Thirteenth Chair," Bayard Veiller's mystic melodrama which William Harris, Jr., will present here on Thursday next, December 13, and twenty-one dramatic critics went back to their offices after the play and wrote that it was the greatest play of the kind they had ever seen. It is doubtful if there has ever been a play produced that received so unanimous a verdict of approval.

SYNOPSIS OF PROPOSED BY-LAW

ENTITLED "A BY-LAW TO REPEAL BY-LAW NUMBER 1498 OF THE CITY OF PETERBOROUGH, AND TO PROVIDE FOR THE ELECTION OF ALDERMEN OF THE CITY OF PETERBOROUGH BY A GENERAL VOTE OF THE ELECTORS, INSTEAD OF BY WARDS."

THE purpose of the proposed By-Law is that if it receives the assent of the majority of the electors of the City of Peterborough voting thereon, the Council of the Corporation of the City of Peterborough, will finally pass the same, and if the said By-Law is so finally passed, the Aldermen of the City of Peterborough, will, instead of being elected by two members from each ward, one of which is elected each alternate year, be elected by the general vote of the City and not by wards as the said ALDERMEN are elected at the present time.

IF the said By-Law is so assented to and finally passed as aforesaid, the election of the said Aldermen, by the general vote of the said electors, will take place on the first day of January, 1919, but during the year 1918, and at the election of Aldermen on the first day of January, 1918, the election shall be by wards as heretofore.

IF the By-Law is so assented to and finally passed as aforesaid, all the ALDERMEN who have been elected by wards, shall cease to hold office from and after the first meeting of the Council elected by general vote, under the provisions of this By-Law for the year 1919.

THE said proposed By-Law further provides that in case of an election by general vote, the six Aldermen who obtain the highest number of votes at the said election, shall be elected to hold office for a term of two years, and the six Aldermen who obtain the next highest number of votes, shall be elected to hold office for a term of one year, and thereafter one-half of the Aldermen composing the said Council shall be elected each year and hold office for the term of two years.

NOTICE.

TAKE NOTICE, that the foregoing is a synopsis of the proposed By-Law of the Corporation of the City of Peterborough, to be submitted to the vote of the electors of the said City, on the 1st day of January, 1918, commencing at the hour of nine o'clock in the forenoon and closing at the hour of five o'clock in the afternoon, at the polling sub-divisions and places fixed and named by By-Law of the Corporation of the City of Peterborough providing for the annual election of the Mayor, Aldermen and Members of the Board of Education and Public Utilities Commissioner, for the term of office commencing with the year of 1918.

AND TAKE FURTHER NOTICE, that on the 31st day of December, 1917, at the hour of eleven o'clock in the forenoon at the City Clerk's Office, in the said City of Peterborough, has been fixed for the appointment of persons to attend at the polling places and at the final summing up of the votes of the electors, and on the 2nd day of January, 1918, at the hour of eleven o'clock in the forenoon, at the office of the City Clerk, the Clerk of the said Municipality will attend and sum up the votes given for and against the said proposed By-Law, and if the assent of the electors is obtained to the said proposed By-Law, it will be taken into consideration by the Municipal Council of the said Corporation at a meeting thereof to be held after the expiration of one month from the date of the first publication of this notice, and that such publication was made on the 8th day of December, 1917.

BY-LAW TO ABROGATE WARD SYSTEM OF ELECTING ALDERMEN WILL BE PRESENTED AT JANUARY ELECTIONS

If the ratepayers desire to return to the system of electing aldermen by a general vote of the city instead of by wards they will have the opportunity of expressing their decision at the municipal elections. A by-law providing for the change received its three readings last night, but must be ratified by the ratepayers, otherwise the ward system will be continued.

By this action, the Council lost no time in acceding to the request of the Trades and Labour Council, who have complained that during the past two years, by the acclamations in some of the wards, they were deprived of a choice of their representatives on the Aldermanic Board.

Ald. Smith contended that even the Trades and Labour Council was not unanimously in favour of returning to the general vote. Personally, he was not in favour of the change. The question, he said, was too important to be summarily dealt with at the end of the year, and should be left until 1918, when it could be thoroughly considered.

Ald. Dobbin pointed out that the electors wouldn't have a chance to vote on it until 1919, and if it passed it would not come into force until 1920.

Mayor Duffus stated that it might be included with a factory or some other by-law that might come up during 1918. His own attitude was that if the ratepayers wished to vote on the question, they should be given a full opportunity of doing so.

Ald. Lougford stated that when Ashburnham joined the city, it was assured of two representatives in the Council. There were some years, he declared, when the East Ward had no representatives.

Ald. McIntyre disputed this statement, and on referring to the records it was found that in 1904 there was no aldermen elected from Ashburnham. During the year, however, Mr. Geo. Ball resigned, and Mr. Harry Morgan of the East Ward succeeded him.

An amendment to the formal by-law passed by the Council was moved by Ald. Smith and seconded by Ald. Saunders, but was defeated. It was supported by Aldermen Langford and Weir, and those voting against it were Aldermen Dobbin, Taylor, Duncan, McIntyre, and Stratton. Ald. Worth was absent.

The by-law, which was introduced by Aldermen McIntyre and Stratton, in the first reading carried.

APPELLANTS ARE STRONGLY URGED TO APPEAR TO-NIGHT AT CITY COUNCIL CHAMBER

The Board of Appeal for the electoral district of West Peterborough will meet this evening in the City Council Chamber at seven-thirty o'clock, where appeals respecting errors and omissions in the voters' list will be heard. Persons who have any complaints to make, or who are entering an appeal, are strongly urged to appear this evening and have their claims adjusted. Counsel for both sides were in session to-day with the object of reducing the large list of appeals to the lowest possible minimum. In many cases both Mr. Bagley acting for Mr. Burnham, and Mr. O'Brien acting for Mr. R. R. Hall, are willing to agree to certain names being placed on the voters' list. The Board of Appeals would much prefer that all appellants appear before the Board in person and state their reasons for appealing. In this way the work would be simplified and the Board would have a fair chance of getting through by Wednesdty, which is the last day for hearing appeals. To-night should be a good time for workingmen and others to appear before the Board in person and have their claims properly adjusted. Do not fail to appear in the City Council Chamber to-night if you want to make sure of being placed on the voters' list.

Fire Precautions.

John A. Robertson, secretary of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, has issued his usual warning to the city that precautions be taken to have the fire fighting apparatus in good condition and the hydrants in working order. It was referred to Fire Chief Grange.

Appeal for Sailors.

The Navy League of Canada appealed for assistance. Last year the city gave $3,000 and the county gave $4,000. The fund is used for the relief of the British and Canadian sailors, the sailors' homes and hospitals.

Mr. Vincent Eastwood is secretary of the local branch.

Ald. Stratton moved, seconded by Ald. Duncan, that the Navy League in this city be requested to assume charge of this work.

Gave Money to Patriotic Fund.

Lieut.-Col. W. R. Smith, of the 238th Forestry Battalion, wrote that his unit had been broken up and because the battalion fund was practically too small to divide among the men, he had turned it over to Patriotic Fund. Contributions from Peterborough amounted to $19, and there were twenty recruits from this city. At that rate each man would have received less than one dollar.

City Solicitor Gordon reported regarding the closing of De Laval Street that the agreement had been executed by the Henry Hope Co., and did not need to be executed by the city.

Mr. Steinberg Gets Fish.

Mr. S. L. Squire, of the Sales Branch of the Ontario Government's Fish Department, wrote that, at the request of the Council, Mr. Joseph Steinberg's name has been placed on the sales list for retailing of the Government fish supply.

Council Appropriates $500 For The Relief Of Halifax Citizens

Responding to the vicarious appeal of Mayor Church of Toronto, who, on behalf of the Mayor of Halifax, is endeavouring to co-ordinate the assistance Ontario is anxious to forward to the stricken city, the Council last night appropriated $500 to be expended by a special committee composed of Mayor Duffus, Ald. Duncan and Ald. Stratton.

The appeal for aid particularly mentioned glass, putty, beaver board, bedding and blankets. Of the material required to replace the broken windows in Halifax it was believed that Peterborough had but a scanty supply. This morning the committee interviewed the local lumber companies and planing mills, the hardware companies, the Auburn Woolen mills and other supply houses here without uncovering any material relief. It was also decided to appeal to the citizens who desire to give anything, or who have suggestions that will be useful to the committee in obtaining the articles desired.

Mayor Duffus expected to go to Toronto on Monday and will ascertain from Mayor Church how Peterborough can give the most effective assistance within its means. It is believed the local committee will wire the $500 to Halifax as the most expeditious plan of giving immediate aid.

D. J. BRADLEY WAS INJURED

The report in the Examiner last night that it was Sergt. J. Bradley of the 93rd Battalion who had been injured in the Halifax disaster, was an error. Sergt. Bradley is in Kingston. It was his son, D. J. Bradley, who was invalided home from overseas, some time ago, and who recently joined the navy, who was hurt at Halifax.

BODY HIDDEN IN THE BUSHES

BELLEVILLE, Dec. 10.—On Wednesday, while doing some road-work, on the 3rd Concession of Rawdon, some men went for shelter to a clump of bushes at the front of Mr. F. Williams' farm and were astonished to find a corpse hidden in the bushes, and covered with an overcoat. By the clothing, a neighbour identified the remains as those of a river-driver, middle-aged, who stayed at his home on the night of January 17th last. On that occasion he kept his face covered with an extension cap, and remarked that he was ashamed of himself. The next morning he refused to eat and walked away. One of the boys shortly followed him, but saw no trace of him. He evidently climbed the fence and lay down to die.

Millions of folks bathe internally now instead of loading their system with drugs. "What's an inside bath?" you say. Well, it is guaranteed to perform miracles if you could believe these hot water enthusiasts.

There are vast numbers of men and women who, immediately upon arising in the morning, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This is a very excellent health measure. It is intended to flush the stomach, liver, kidneys and the thirty feet of intestines of the previous day's waste, sour bile and indigestible material left over in the body which is not eliminated every day, become food for the millions of bacteria which infest the bowels, the quick result is poisons and toxins which are then absorbed into the blood causing headache, bilious attacks, foul breath, bad taste, colds, stomach trouble, kidney misery, sleeplessness, impure blood and all sorts of ailments.

People who feel good one day and badly the next, but who simply can not get feeling right are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store. This will cost very little but is sufficient to make anyone a real crank on the subject of internal sanitation.

Just as soap and hot water act on the skin, cleansing, sweetening and freshening, so limestone phosphate and hot water act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels. It is vastly more important to bathe on the inside than on the outside, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do.

Was In Charge Of A Machine Gun Section

Further Particulars in Regard to Sergt. Jas. W. Marsh, Killed in Action

As announced in the Examiner a few days ago, Sergt. Jas. W. Marsh, son of Rev. Dr. Marsh, formerly of Springville, has been killed in action. Sergt. Marsh received his High School education in Peterborough, and at the time of enlistment was mechanical superintendent over 1,000 miles of the new Grand Trunk Pacific. The Pickering News has the following reference to Sergt. Marsh's death:

On Friday morning Rev. Dr. Marsh received the sad news from Ottawa that his son, Sergt. James W. Marsh, had been killed in action at Paschendaele on 15th November.

SERGT. JAMES W. MARSH.

Sergt. Marsh enlisted with the 227th Battalion, and qualified for a lieutenancy and captaincy, and left in April in his lieutenant's uniform. On reaching England he was asked to wait for a time before proceeding to France with a commission. Being anxious to reach the firing line as soon as possible, he reverted to the rank of private and at once crossed over to France, and before long was promoted to the rank of sergeant, and was in charge of a machine gun section when he paid the supreme sacrifice. Just prior to his departure for overseas he was married to Miss Bertha Whitfield, of Peterborough. Prior to enlisting, Sergt. Marsh held a luerative position as mechanical superintendent of the thousand miles of the Grand Trunk Pacific just west of North Bay. The deepest sympathy is felt for Dr. Marsh and family, and Mrs. Marsh, in their bereavement.

For Your Motorist Friend

A Fitting Christmas Gift

THERE is no need to worry about what to give "him" if he drives a car. Whether it's a Rolls-Royce or a Ford, you can settle the gift problem right now by buying him a Goodyear Tire-Saver Kit.

This neat little Kit is probably the most appropriate present any one can give a motorist. Because it fills a real need, it will be appreciated even more than something of a "personal" nature costing twice as much.

The Goodyear Tire-Saver Kit is packed with articles for the conservation of tires—patches, putty, blowout protectors, even an air-pressure gauge. Your motorist friend will at once recognize the value of each thing. Afterwards, when he actually uses the Kit, he will wonder how he ever got along without one before.

You, too, will enjoy giving him a Tire-Saver Kit. For you will experience the satisfaction of giving something eminently fitting. You will be expressing your gratitude, in a practical way, for those pleasant motor drives last summer.

He will probably receive some "motor presents" from his other friends. You can be the one to give him the "motor present" he needs most—a Goodyear Tire-Saver Kit.

The Goodyear Tire-Saver Kit comes in two sizes — one for small and the other for large cars. Just tell us the make of "his" car.

Price:
(3½-4 in.) - $4.75
(4½-5 in.) - 5.00

See them in our window to-day.

If you order Early we can lay aside your KIT GIFT, to be delivered any time before Christmas.

ALSATIAN LOYALTY IS WHOLLY FRENCH

Exiled Mayor Derides the Idea of a Plebiscite to Decide It Ballots Would Be More German "Scraps of Paper," He Tells Wallace Irwin.

VOTE WOULD BE A FARCE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—In an interview with Wallace Irwin, issued through the Committee on Public Information, Daniel Blumenthal, the ex-Mayor of Colmar, Alsace, who escaped the clutches of the Germans when the city was occupied by the advancing army, gives his views of the proposition made by certain pacifists that the future status of Alsace-Lorraine be decided by a plebiscite of the inhabitants.

"A German-made plebiscite would be pretty to see," he observed to Mr. Irwin with a smile. "Alsace could vote with scraps of paper, but never by fair election. Why? Because she is French to the heart to-day, and since 1871 she has never forgotten her loyalty to the free republic to which her soul belongs. German editors write editorials full of learning to show that the children of Alsace-Lorraine to-day are different from yesterday, because they speak the language which Berlin has forced upon them.

30,0000 Alsatians in French Army.

"Eh bien! Do you know how many Alsace-Lorrainers deserted from the German army when war broke out and are now fighting with France? Thirty thousand. It is an honour to say that they are the bravest among the French; but that is so. Because, if they are caught as prisoners, what then? Pouff! M. le Kaiser is not famous for his kindness to deserters. The poor Alsatian may change his name and pretend to be French. You can tell an Alsatian by the opening of the mouth when he speaks. It is as different from French as the patois of the Scotch.

"Therefore you can see how much those 30,000 love the Germans. 'Stay in the rear where you will be safe,' say the kind French commanders. 'No, Monsieur—put us in front where we can shoot!' say the Alsace-Lorrainers. Perhaps that is loyalty to Berlin.

"German papers will tell you that because we speak the language that has been forced down our throats we are content. That is the thinking of Prussia. But can the Prussian tell us why, while we were a part of France, we never spoke bitterly of the Government. Why under that kind of German rule we have protested by our representatives at the Reichstag? Why our young men have emigrated to escape military duty, while our citizens innumerable have gone to imprisonment for expressing their affections for France?

Provinces Overwhelmingly French.

"Despite the mills of industrious Kultur, which strive forever to pour everything into a hideous German fold, Alsace-Lorraine is to-day overwhelmingly French. If you wish, I will recite some figures. Our population is 1,900,000 all together. Of those 1,500,000 are natives, almost without exception totally French. There are 400,000 German immigrants or descendants of immigrants. There is no difference whatever between those who speak French, in Lorraine, for instance, and those in Alsace, who speak a patois mixed with German, but which the Germans cannot understand.

"German logic is able to think both ways, like a donkey with two heads. She has well learned the speech, 'What is yours belongs to me and what is mine is my own.' Since the beginning of the present war the German Generals have made no hesitation about declaring that they consider Alsace-Lorraine an enemy country. How much better than Belgians have we been in the sight of Prussia? Look at the thousands of Alsace-Lorrainers who have been deported to slavery and answer for yourself. We have been told we speak the French language in a provoking manner. Therefore it is taken out of our mouths, so that we may worship the Kaiser in his own sweet words. The prisons are full of my people who were arrested during those first awful days of the war.

"When they are candid — which happens seldom—the Germans admit that they have no faith in the loyalty of Alsace-Lorraine. They mistrust us because we do not admire the goose step, do not regard the sign 'Verboten' as more beautiful than our mountain scenery. Thus it is that Germany longs for der Tag when we shall be dragged by the hair of our heads into further despotism. Endlessly her papers discuss our future and what they will do to dismember us and what constitution we shall have as a monarchic and autonomous State of the empire. We are uncomfortable to her, like a little stone in the big military boot.

"Monsieur, loyalty and love are not bought without price; that you know. The martial courts have sought to silence us with frightful grimaces. We have spoken our love for France at the cost of our lives. Executions have been many, and thousands of years of imprisonment have been ordered by their councils of war. And it is not alone a matter of language, this longing for the Motherland of the people of the upper Rhine, who speak the dialect, have suffered no less terribly than the others."

The Mayor's Narrow Escape.

After describing the stupidity of the German military authorities, who, having arrested him after they entered Colmar, permitted him to join a company of Swiss women on their way to the Swiss frontier. M. Blumenthal recalls his narrow escape on the threshold of freedom.

"I had one foot on German territory," he says, "the other on Swiss, when a great clown of an Alsatian soldier, one who knew me at home, began saluting very politely.

"'Ah, Herr Lieutenant,' he says, intending to pay me a great compliment, 'you are letting pass a very great man—the Mayor of Colmar.'

"I awaited no more courtesies, but descended the stairs into Switzerland by leaping nine steps. Nom d'un chien, but it was—what you call it?—a very slender escape."

BE PRETTY! TURN GRAY HAIR DARK

Try Grandmother's Old Favourite Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, at a small cost.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy and attractive.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire dark hair and a youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

Voice of the People

Peterborough, Dec. 8, 1917.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,—About Mr. Burnham and the lost leg.

The letter published on the front page of the Examiner last evening refers to the case of Mrs. Webb of this city. A woman who has received unlimited kindness from Mr. Burnham and also some of his money, which has never been returned. I know Mrs. Webb. All connected with charity in Peterborough know her. She has got more and been less grateful than any woman I know.

F. W. MILLER,
Relief Officer.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Would you allow me a small space in your valuable paper as I am a little anxious to know how much was forfeited to Mrs. W.—— for that old letter of Mr. Burnham's, and also why people are so anxious to publish his faults and are not willing to point out to the public any of his good deeds, because I can personally testify of many kindnesses which Mr. Burnham has done towards helping soldiers' families.

I would like the citizens of Peterborough to know that this same kind lady who was so good to allow that letter to be put in print has been helped by many societies of this city.—Signed by A Soldier's Sister.

Dear Sir—Haven't the Flavelle family got plenty of nerve when Sir Joseph Flavelle's Company, the Williams Davies Packing Company gets eighty per cent. profit on its bacon and pork, and then one of the Flavells comes to Peterborough and sits on Mr. Burnham's platform, and endorses Mr. Burnham. Has Mr. Burnham ever told the Flavelles to keep off his platform? This election in this city seems to be Flavelle and Burnham, and sixty-cent bacon. — Yours truly,

Housewife.

VINOL MAKES GOOD BLOOD

Positive—Convincing Proof

Many so-called remedies for anaemia are only so in name. Their makers are afraid to prove their claims by telling what their medicines contain.

The only way to be honest with the people is to let them know what they are paying for. Here is the Vinol formula. When the doctor knows what a medicine contains, it ceases to be a "patent" medicine.

By Cod Liver and Beef Peptones, Iron and Manganese Peptonates, Iron and Ammonium Citrate, Lime and Soda Glycerophosphates, Cascara.

Any doctor will tell you that the ingredients of Vinol, as named above, will enrich the blood and banish anaemia and create strength. When the blood is pure and rich and red, the body is strong and robust.

You can prove this at our expense because your money will be returned if Vinol does not improve your health.

"THE FILM OF FEAR"

By ARNOLD FREDERICKS

"No," replied the bald-headed man, gravely shaking hands. "She is not here this morning. It is rather surprising, too, for she usually is on time."

"What sort of a looking woman is she?" Duvall inquired.

"Oh— a rather significant looking girl of about twenty-five. Small, slender, not very prepossessing, but clever—enormously clever. One of the best film cutters we have. I should be sorry to lose her."

"Exactly. But why? Has she gotten into any trouble?"

"No—I hope not. I merely wanted to see her."

"Well—of course she may show up later, although as I say she has usually been very punctual. I shouldn't be surprised if she is sick. She's been acting rather peculiarly, the past few days."

"How so?" asked Duvall, quickly.

"I can't say—exactly. I got the impression from her manner that she was nervous, excited, out of sorts. Merely an impression, but such things count."

"Telephone me, Emmett," Mr. Baker said, "if she comes in during the next hour. Come along, Mr. Duvall, you can wait in my office."

They returned to the other side of the immense building, and Duvall sat down to wait. He felt sure that they were on the right track, and was impatient to get back to New York and try to locate the missing woman. The description given by Mr. Emmett left little doubt in his mind that she and Miss Marcia Ford were one and the same. He sat in Mr. Baker's office, reading the paper, waiting anxiously for the hour the latter had specified to pass.

"It is ten o'clock, Mr. Duvall," he announced. "Miss Ford has not come, or Mr. Emmett would have notified me. I do not see that there is anything ffuhther to be accomplished here."

As he spoke, the telephone bell rang sharply. Mr. Baker picked up the receiver, listened intently for a few moments, then slammed the receiver back upon the hook.

"Hell!" he ejaculated softly.

"What is it?" Duvall asked.

"Miss Ford has just reported for PART III.

CHAPTER XII.

The announement, made by Mr. Baker, that Miss Marcia Ford, the film cutter, had reported for work, filled Duvall with astonishment. He had expected nothing of the sort, so convinced was he that the girl in question was the one they were looking for, the one who had been persecuting Ruth Morton, the motion picture star, with threats.

He rose from his seat, in Mr. Baker's office at the studio, and turned toward the door. "If Miss Ford has reported for work," he said, "I had better take a look at her at once. If she is the woman who escaped from the cab, last night, I shall have no difficulty in recognizing her. But I am afraid it is out of the question. Knowing that both you and I had seen her, when she fainted at the theatre, she would not dare to put in an appearance here to-day. The thing is utterly incomprehensible."

"Still, she might suppose that we would not suspect her, that she could carry on her work in the studio without anyone being the wiser. I seldom go into that part of the building, myself, and she would certainly not expect to see you. In fact, it may not have occurred to her that we suspect one of our employees, in spite of the stolen photograph or the fake telegram."

"Suppose we take a look at her at once. That will settle the whole question," Duvall urged.

"Very well." Mr. Baker closed his desk and the two men crossed the corridor and made their way into that part of the studio building devoted to the developing and finishing of the films.

Mr. Emmett, the head of the department, was seated at his desk when they arrived.

"So the Ford girl is here," Baker said at once.

"Yes, sir. She came in about ten minutes ago, explaining her lateness by saying taht she was ill, when she got up this morning, and was not sure that she could get here at all. Shall I send for her?"

"No," Duvall interposed quickly. "Pardon me, Mr. Baker," he turned to the latter, "but if we send for this girl, it will arouse her suspicions. Of course I do not think she is the woman we are looking for, but she may be in league with her. Would it not be better to have Mr. Emmett and yourself conduct me through the room in which she works, as though I were a visitor to the studio? You can readily point her out to me as we pass, and that will give me ample opportunity to recognize her, in case I have ever seen her before."

"I think that a very good idea," returned Baker. He said a few words to Mr. Emmett, and the three men set out to go through the rooms in which the film cutting and pasting were done.

At one of the tables a girl of about twenty was at work. As they passed, Mr. Emmett turned his head and nodded. The girl did not look up, and the three men continued their way through the room.

When they again reached the hall, Mr. Baker turned to Duvall.

"Well?" he questioned.

"It is not the woman," the detective said. "I did not suppose it would be. There is some slight resemblance, of course. The colour of the eyes and hair is the same, and the features are somewhat alike. However, I am very much afraid, Mr. Baker, that I have wasted both your time and mine. And yet, I cannot get over my original impression, that the person responsible for these threats is connected, in some way, with your company."

Baker, puzzled and disappointed as well, led the way back to his office. Duvall, however, when they reached it, did not enter.

"I shall not remain any longer, at present," he said. "I have an idea that I can accomplish more in town. Perhaps I may discover something there—some clue, that will enable us to make progress. I have a plan that may result in something."

"What is it?" Mr. Baker asked.

"I prefer not to say yet. If anything develops, I will let you know. Good day."

The taxicab in which he had made the trip down was still waiting for him. An hour later he reached his hotel.

The disguise of the night before he had discarded. The woman in the cab had penetrated it. His presence, and that of Mrs. Morton at the uptown hotel, was known. There seemed to be no further purpose, for the present, in attempting to preserve his incognito. He went to his room at once, and knocked on the door which separated it from the apartment of Mrs. Morton and her daughter.

The door was opened by the maid, who ushered him into the little parlour.

"I will tell Mrs. Morton that you are here," the girl said, and went into the next room.

Mrs. Morton came out presently, her face pale and drawn. Duvall knew at once that she had been up all night, watching, no doubt, beside her daughter.

"How is Miss Ruth?" he asked.

"She is better. She had a fairly good night's rest, and her fever has left her."

"I am glad to hear that. I hope there have been no further threats."

"No. Not yet. But I never know at what moment something may happen. It is terrible—terrible, living under a shadow like this."

As she spoke, the telephone bell rang.

"You answer it, Mr. Duvall," she said, turning quickly to the door by which she had entered, and closing it. "I do not think I can stand anything more at present."

Duvall took down the receiver. Someone was asking for Mr. John Bradley.

"This is Mr. Bradley," he said, then suddenly recognized his wife's voice.

"Is this you, Richard?" she asked.

"Yes. What is it?"

"If you have time, to-day, come down and see me. I have something I want to tell you. Something important."

"Very well. I will be there in half an hour. Good-by." He hung up the receiver.

"Was it anything—anything more, Mr. Duvall?" asked Mrs. Morton.

"No. Nothing of that sort. Well, I must go along now. I merely looked in to ask after your daughter. There is one thing I want you to do, however, and that is, let me have a key to your apartment on 57th Street."

Mrs. Morton took the key from her purse, and handed it to him.

"Haven't you any good news, yet?" she asked, somewhat pathetically.

"Not yet—at least nothing very definite. I know the woman who is annoying your daughter by sight, however, and I think I can safely assure you that she will be under arrest before very long. Matters of this sort take time, Mrs. Morton. Remember that I have had charge of the case but three days, and these people we are looking for are shrewd, leaving few clues. But I feel that I shall have something definite to report very soon now."

"I hope so, I'm sure. Good day."

"Good day." Duvall left the room, and taking a taxi, drove down to see Grace.

He found her sitting at the writing desk, in the reception room of their suite, apparently busy over a letter. She pushed the sheet of paper aside, when her husband entered, and threw her arms about his neck.

"Richard!" he exclaimed, "I'm so glad to see you. It has been ages. What's the matter with you. You look dreadfully blue."

Duvall threw himself into a chair. "I'm a bit disgusted with myself," he said.

"What about? I may ask you, may I not? Is it about that wretched Morton case? I must talk to you about that. May I? You see, you rather got me into it, last night, and I got myself into it, too, by coming up to your hotel to see you, and now you've got to tell me how things turned out, after you left the theatre, or shall I not know just what to do."

"About what?"

"I'll tell you that, after I hear about last night."

Duvall laughed, although a trifle grimly.

"I'm not particularly proud of last night," he said.

SELF DEFENSE

DEFEAT BACKACHE AND KIDNEY TROUBLE WITH ANURIC.

Many people in Canada have suffered from rheumatism and kidney trouble and have found Anuric to be the most successful remedy to overcome these painful and dangerous ailments.

The lucky people are those who have heeded Nature's warning signal in time to correct their trouble with that new discovery of Dr. Pierce's called "Anuric." You should promptly heed these warnings, some of which are dizzy spells, backache, irregularity of the urine or the painful twinges of rheumatism, sciatica or lumbago. To delay may make possible the dangerous forms of kidney disease, such as diabetes or stone in the bladder.

To overcome these distressing conditions you should take plenty of exercise in the open air, avoid a heavy meat diet, drink freely of water and at each meal take Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets (double strength). You will, in a short time, find that you are one of the firm indorsers of An-u-ric, as are many of your neighbors.

Send Dr. V. M. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., or Bridgeburg, Ont., 10c for trial pkg.

St. Catharines, Ont.—For several years I suffered with gravel and with uric acid, causing rheumatic pains. Nothing ever helped me until I commenced to take 'Anuric,' and the first thing I noticed was that the gravel had disappeared and has never made a reappearance. My general health has improved and I have a better nerve condition and my eyesight seems better, too. I used to have such dizzy spells at times I thought I would faint, but these no longer trouble me. My only regret is that I did not know of Anuric before."

Defining a Wife.

The pretty schoolteacher had asked her class for the best original definition of "wife," and the boy in the corner promptly responded, "A rib."

She looked at him reproachfully and nodded to the boy with dreamy eyes, who seemed anxious to say something.

"Man's gliding star and guardian angel," he said in response to the nod.

"One who makes a man hustle," was the next suggestion.

"Stop there," said the schoolteacher. "That's the best definition."

Unpleasant Voices.

The roars of the jaguar and leopard are like "hoarse, barking coughs, an interval of about one second separating the expiratory efforts," says an observer. They may be easily reproduced or imitated by sawing a piece of thin board with a coarse-toothed saw.

The Workers of the World with hand or brain, in doors or out doors, under all conditions and in all climes, will find in Shredded Wheat the food that supplies all the material for building healthy tissue and good brain—a food that nourishes every organ of the body and keeps the bowels healthy and active—the one universal cereal food that appears on the breakfast table of most Canadian homes every day in the year. It is ready-cooked and ready-to-eat. For breakfast with milk or cream, for any meal with fruits. Made in Canada.

Mr HALL'S Committee Rooms Down Stairs Oriental Hotel

OPEN TO-NIGHT

And Every Night until after the Election. Every Opponent of the present Borden Government is invited to attend the Committee Meetings and assist in the organization necessary.

To the Electors of East Peterborough

Ladies and Gentlemen,—

I have the honour to accept the unanimous nomination of the Liberal Party to contest the election as a candidate to represent the people of East Peterborough in the House of Commons.

Now is the time in the history of this country when we should be guided by true Liberal principles and stand by the masses as against the classes; stand by the people who earn their bread by the sweat of their brow and against the classes who exact unjust profits and extortionate tolls out of even the very necessities of life.

The profits made by War Profiteers should be investigated. The profiteer should be made to disgorge his excessive profits to be used to increase the pay of our soldiers, their mothers, wives, sisters and dependents. None of them should ever be subjected to the indignity of cold charity by this grateful Nation on whose behalf they have suffered or died.

I have no confidence whatever in Sir Robert Borden who supplied our troops for many months with the Ross rifle and defective ammunition, which he must have known would jam and become a useless weapon after our Canadian boys had nobly entered the battle. The Ross rifle was used by our troops in six battles. In each battle the rifle jammed, and many a Canadian soldier was needlessly killed of wounded, and some of them languish to-day in German prisons justly cursing the Borden Gobernment without a chance of voting against it.

We must destroy the parasite, the profiteer, the grafter and the camp follower, who are our worst enemies, and fight our common foe with all the resources at our command.

I appeal to the women of this Riding, who are casting their vote for the first time, to act on the pure impulse of their hearts alone, and vote according to the dictates of their own conscience. My heart goes out in sympathy for them in these anxious times.

Let us unite our people in this Great War as the armies of Great Britain and France are united, marching and fighting side by side—the parents and guardians of Freedom and Justice.

With firmness in the right as God gives us to see the right, I appeal to you fellow electors to press on to a finish the great war in which we are engaged; to bind up the nation's wounds; to care for him who shall have borne the battle and his widow and orphan; to do all which we may achieve, and to cherish a just and lasting peace with all nations.

For these reasons I appeal to you my fellow electors for your vote and influence in the pending election on Monday, December 17th next.

Your Obedient Servant,

W. H. Johnston.

Ringworm on Child's Head

Caused Great Distress and Spread to Neck and Ears—Cure Was Speedily Effected When Right Treatment Was Recommended.

Grand Bend, Ont., Nov. 21.—There is no disease of the skin more obstinate than ringworm, and the mother who writes this letter does so fully realizing what it will mean to other anxious mothers to know about Dr. Chase's Ointment.

This remarkable cure was brought about two years ago, and as there has been no return of the distressing disease there can be no doubt that the cure is permanent.

Mrs. D. Stebbins, Grand Bend, Ont., writes: "I am going to tell you of my experience with Dr. Chase's Ointment. My little girl had sores come out on her head which looked like ringworms. They were spreading fast, and I tried home treatment, but nothing helped her. I took her to the doctor, and he opened some of the sores, which were as big as the yoke of an egg. The salve he gave me to put on was very severe, and the poor child would cry for an hour or more after an application. For six weeks it continued to spread all over her head, and came down to her neck and ears. She suffered terribly. At last some kind ladies told me about Dr. Chases Ointment, so I got a box, and the first time I put it on she was relieved of pain, and the second time the swelling was all gone. Before we had finished the first box the sores were nearly all gone. I have told all the people around here about your Ointment, and I cannot praise it too much. It is now two years since my little girl was troubled in this way, and it never came back, so you can see she is completely cured. You are at liberty to use this statement for the benefit of others who may be suffering in a similar manner."

Joseph Brenner, J.P., endorses this statement as follows: "This is to certify that I am personally acquainted with Mrs. D. Stebbins of Grand Bend, Ont., and believe her statement with reference to Dr. Chase's Ointment to be true and correct."

Dr. Chase's Ointment, 60 cents a box, all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Be suspicious of the druggist who tries to talk you into accepting a substitute.

To the Electors of East Peterboro

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—

I believe no greater disaster could, at the present time, befall our country than the defeat of the Borden Union Administration at the polls on December 17th.

The Policy of this Administration is the speedy and continuous reinforcements of our Canadian troops on the battle front; and the putting forth of all our National strength for the cause of civilization and freedom.

To carry out this Policy, a number of Canada's ablest Public men of vision—sinking for the present—all political differences now stand together—strong to battle for the right—united to WIN the WAR.

For over three years thousands of Loyal Canadians of many creeds and of different Nationalities, have stood shoulder to shoulder on the Battlefields of Europe, gallantly fighting a common foe, and sometimes standing; sometimes falling, have won for the name of Canada undying fame. Shall we, with all possible speed, send help to these, our heroic defenders now holding the battle-line or shall we, break faith with them as well as "with those who die"—delay—vote—while the enemy advances?

As a Union Candidate in this Riding, I am putting forth every effort to win East Peterborough to the support of the Borden Union Administration and if elected shall to the utmost of my ability support the same.

To this end I now earnestly solicit the co-operation and influence of every loyal, patriotic man and woman in East Peterborough.

I have the honor to be, faithfully yours,

J. A. SEXSMITH

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Matrimonial Lottery

In Which One Man Owned Most of the Tickets

By DWIGHT NORWOOD

There are in various countries curious customs with regard to matrimony. In Lapland the groom must chase his bride in a foot race. In Russia, which has a very large area, with many different peoples, one and all having their own peculiar methods, there are a number of varied customs. One of these is that a girl may go into the house of any man whom she wishes to marry and remain there till he marries her. If he refuses he is considered to have insulted her and her family, and they take revenge on him if they can.

Another Russian custom among a certain people is this: They have a lottery. A girl is put up as the prize. Sufficient tickets are sold to give her a dowry. The holder of the winning ticket is compelled to marry the prize he has drawn, but she may decline him. If she does they may divide between them the money paid for the tickets. If a married man is the winner he may give the prize to any bachelor he may select. In N., a village in the northern part of Russia near the Siberian border, there were four of these lotteries held each year, thus providing for four girls who had reached a marriageable age and had not the necessary dowries.

The simple people of this village, buried in the heart of what might almost be called a wilderness, naturally resorted to simple amusements. They were an athletic people, especially adapted to the management of animals. One of the chief recrentions of the people of N. was a sort of circus in which the young men performed in gymnastics and trained animals and feats of horsemanship were exhibited.

At one of these performances a slender young man named Ivan Ivanoff, with a figure fit for a statue, led the rest in riding. He would ride several barebacked horses at one time, stepping from one horse to another.

Among those who looked at the feats of this young man was Nina Dimitrieff, a girl barely sixteen years old. To her Ivan, standing erect with a foot on each of two horses, guiding them wherever he wished, was the most beautiful sight she had ever beheld. When he had finished his performance and stood bowing before the plaudits of his audience Nina Dimitrieff took from her girdle a bunch of hardy flowers that grew wild in the woods of that region and threw them at his feet. He picked them up, meeting at the same time her admiring gaze.

In that glance which passed between these two simple creatures was an instantaneous flash of love. No courtship was needed. The mingling of two spirits was complete. Long associations might strengthen it, as constant use will develop a muscle, but it was from that moment a perfect love.

These two children—they were not much more than children—did not stop to follow out the consequences of this newborn passion, the nature of which in their innocence they did not understand. Among these people parents regulate marriages, and no marriage is permitted except where the bride has a dowry. Nina's parents could give her no dowry, and Ivan could not afford to marry her without one.

Not that they would, if left to themselves, consider this as a barrier. They would consider nothing but their love and mate like a pair of doves. It was the older heads of their parents, foreseeing the wretchedness of poverty for them and their children, that would keep them apart. It was some time before their attachment was discovered, but as soon as it was known to exist Nina was forbidden to have anything to do with her young lover.

For some time there were clandestine meetings, usual in such forbidden affairs. Then, the two being caught together by Nina's father, he took measures to marry her off. One of the marriage lotteries was about to come off, and he arranged that his daughter should be offered as the prize.

It was a terrible blow to the lovers. A thousand chances were to be sold at 3 rubles a chance. If they were all disposed of the bride would have a dowry of 4,000 rubles, or $2,000 of our money, a very large sum in that region for a young couple with which to set up housekeeping. If the chances were not all sold the deficiency would be made up by the wealthier citizens of the village. In this case, where Nina was the prize offered, the chances would have doubtless all been sold had it not been that her love for Ivan was generally known. As it was, but a quarter of the chances had been taken up. So great was the deficiency that it was doubted whether those who usually made up such sums would do so in this case.

Almost directly north of N. is Kara, in Siberia, where political offenders are sent to work in the mines. N. is the nearest town of any importance on the western side of the border between Russia and Siberia. Not long before the drawing of the marriage lottery was to take place Ivan and Nina, by a preconcerted arrangement, met in a wood to the northward of the village. The meeting was not to devise a plan, but to lament together over their approaching separation. They were in the heart of the forest under snow laden branches when, hearing a stirring in a thicket near by, they turned and saw a face that caused Nina to shriek. It was the face of a man, but so wild looking that for a moment they thought it some creature of the forest. Then a figure stepped forth, a man with unkempt hair and beard, ragged, shoeless, with cheeks shrunken and eyes glaring like those of a hunted beast.

"My children," he said, "can you not hide me? If they get me they will take me back to the mines."

Ivan had once before seen an escaped prisoner from Kara who had been pursued and arrested in N. and had never forgotten the despair on his face when loaded with chains, he was taken away on his dismal march back to prison. Ivan knew well that this man was a fugitive, and the hearts of the children went out to him. They asked him what they could do for him, and after consultation it was arranged that they should return to the town and bring him food. This they did, and as soon as night came on they took him into the town, where Ivan hid him in his father's barn among the hay.

Early in the morning a number of officials entered the town looking for an escaped prisoner. But he whom they sought was safely hidden and ministered to by Ivan and Nina. After searching the village in vain the party left, and the fugitive as well as his preservers breathed more freely. Two or three days after the officials' departure Ivan took clothes and shaving materials to the loft, and the fugitive relieved himself of his beard, cut his hair and put on a peasant's suit. Then he asked Ivan to bring him pen, ink and paper, and he wrote a letter, which he addressed to some one in Moscow, and asked Ivan to put it in the post for him.

After this the fugitive occasionally left the barn and, growing more venturesome, at last took up his quarters at an inn. He invented a story that he had a little money, with which he proposed to buy a few acres of ground, and was looking about him for that purpose. This explanation of his presence in N. was weakened by his manner, which, since he was rid of his wild appearance, marked him for a gentleman. However, the people with whom he mingled were not very acute, and even had they known that he was an escaped political prisoner would have shielded him so far as was possible. After awhile he began to receive mail, which, of course, was addressed to him under an assumed name.

Meanwhile the lottery scheme by which Nina was to be disposed of dragged because so few tickets had been sold. But at last they were disposed of, and the drawing was announced to take place at once. Some curiosity was manifested to know who had taken them. But the managers of the affair would give no information.

On the evening of the drawing Nina was present, as was customary for the bride, with a despairing look on her face that excited the commiseration of all. Ivan had saved enough money to pay for ten tickets. But what were ten chances in a thousand? The same as one in a hundred. He could not bring himself to attend the drawing, so he remained away. During the drawing he walked back and forth before the building in which it took place, looking up at the place where the girl he loved was to be disposed of.

Presently he heard a commotion, which he believed followed the announcement of the name of the winner. A wild hope sprang up in his breast that one of his chances had won. He ran up into the hall and asked who had drawn the prize. He was told that the name was Nicholas Axelrod, but who Nicholas Axelrod was no one seemed to know. His heart fell. Wringing his hands, he was about to turn away when the manager of the lottery, standing on the platform where the drawing had taken place, advanced and read from a paper he held in his hands:

If I, Nicholas Axelrod, win the prize, being a married man, I give it to Ivan Ivanoff.

Shouts arose, and cries for Ivan were heard. A man caught him by the arm as he was leaving and, turning him around, led him up to the platform where Nina sat, a smile of delight on her features. He kissed her, and the shouting broke forth anew.

But who was Nicholas Axelrod? There were cries for him, but he did not respond. Persons looked about them, expecting to see him arise and make his way to the platform to receive the ovation which it was evident was awaiting him. But he did not appear, nor was he ever seen again in N. The happy couple sought him, but did not find him. It was rumored that he was a member of a noble family; that he had been pardoned by the czar; that he had been returned to Siberia. None of these rumors was ever proved. Both Ivan and his wife believe today that he bought all the unsubscribed chances in the lottery, thus having three out of four chances of winning, and that he had done this to repay them for succoring him.

Nicholas Axelrod's real name was Paul Gerowsky, a Pole, whose family, related to the kings of Poland, submitted only because they were obliged to submit to the partition of their country among the three powers—Austria, Germany and Russia. But the Gerowskys did not give up hope that Poland would be redeemed and were ever watching for an opportunity to assert its reunion and independence. Some years before the marriage of Ivan and Nina, Paul Gerowsky became the leader of a plot with this end in view. It was discovered, and he was sent to Siberia. His escape from there, his succor by the lovers, his purchase of the unsold tickets to the lottery, as has been stated, were all that was ever known of him by the people of N. Under his own name he spent the rest of his life as a citizen of the United States.

HOW MRS. BEAN MET THE CRISIS

Carried Safely Through Change of Life by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Nashville, Tenn.—"When I was going through the Change of Life I had a tumor as large as a child's head. The doctor said it was three years coming and gave me medicine for it until I was called away from the city for some time. Of course I could not go to him then, so my sister-in-law told me that she thought Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound would cure it. It helped both the Change of Life and the tumor and when I got home I did not need the doctor. I took the Pinkham remedies until the tumor was gone, the doctor said, and I have not felt it since. I tell every one how I was cured. If this letter will help others you are welcome to use it." —Mrs. E. H. BEAN, 525 Joseph Avenue, Nashville, Tenn.

More Shell Orders For Canada

The astonishing success of the Victory Loan will be a source of gratification to the country at large and will assure a continuance of prosperity. Canadian industries will benefit through the expenditure of this vast sum of money as it will be all spent in Canada. The munitions industry will benefit to a greater degree perhaps than any other as a considerable proportion will be appropriated for the manufacture of shells. Arrangements have been made to place large orders for shrapnel, 4.5 inch and 6-inch shell, which will keep a number of plants actively employed for several months. As a result of these shell orders, another period of activity in the machine tool business may be looked for. The iron and steel trade is rather quiet just now due to the difficulty that is being experienced in obtaining material for any purpose other than that required in the production of war equipment. As a result private consumers are handicapped in their manufacturing operations and the output is being restricted. The steel mills on the other hand have all the business that they can take care of and are enjoying great prosperity. Prices of steel products are holding firm with the sole exception of galvanized sheets which have declined. Prices of pig iron are unchanged. In the States the shortage of pig-iron is becoming serious as it is curtailing the output of steel. The situation in the scrap metal market is unchanged. There is a fair demand for iron and steel scrap but copper and non-ferrous metals are dull. Tin is still very scarce although some relief is looked for in the near future. Success of the Victory Loan will benefit Canadian industries. More shell orders to be placed. Steel and metal markets quiet.—"Canadian Machinery and Manufacturing News."

PIMPLES AND RUNNING SORES
Would Hold Head Down Face Was Such a Sight

Pimples are caused by the blood being out of order. Those festering and running sores appear on the forehead, on the nose, on the chin and other parts of the body, and although they are not a dangerous trouble they are very unsightly to both you and your friends.

There is only one way to get rid of this obnoxious skin trouble, and this is by giving the blood a thorough cleansing by the use of Burdock Blood Bitters.

This sterling remedy has been on the market for over 40 years, during which time we have received thousands of testimonials as to its curative powers over all skin diseases.

Mrs. Victor G. Fry, North Battleford, Sask., writes: "I used Burdock Blood Bitters when I was about eighteen. I was so bad with pimples and running sores, that when I went down town, I would hold my head down when I would see anyone coming, my face was such a sight. I got two bottles, and my face began to clear, so I kept on until I had a beautiful complexion. I have recommended it to everyone who is in a run-down condition, as it builds up the blood, and when the blood is A1 the face is clear."

Stilettos And Bayonets Used By The Italians

Italian Headquarters in Northern Italy, Dec. 6.—The importance of the fighting adound Asiago is not underestimated, but it is believed the line of resistance on which the Italians have retired is capable of holding the Franzella and Gadena passes leading into the Brenta Valley and the open plains miles below. The fighting has been of the most desperate character, and while the enemy has paid dearly for its success the Italian losses also have been very heavy.

FOUGHT WITH STILETTOS.

Enemy reserves were poured in until the Italians were far outnumbered. They continued to struggle desperately, however, and in each case a small detachment of Bersagliern met the shock of an entire Austrian regiment. Austrian Kaiser-jaegers displayed un, recedented ferocity, using stilettos as well as bayonets in fierce hand-to-hand fighting.

But the greatest single instance of heroism and loss was in the case of several detachments of Alpini, which held Monte Castelgomberto against overwhelming odds until surrounded completely. Thus encircled they made repeated charges, but the heavy surrounding lines held, and the entire party was still on the mountain when the remainder of the line fell back.

ENEMY LINE STRONG.

The extent of the enemy reserves is shown by their concentration in the average amount of a division for every kilometre. The Artillery fire also has been the heaviest of any since the new Italian line was formed.

DEATH BEFORE SURRENDER.

The latest reports at this hour (7 p.m.) show that detachments of Alpini, surrounded on Monte Castelgomberto, preferred death rather than surrender, and either fell by their own hands or were cut topieces in the fierce assaults by the enemy columns which had completely surrounded them.

It is estimated that the forces employed by the enemy were about twice as large as the Italian forces before the Italian line was retired to its present position.

RUSSIANS TURN ON BRITISH.

Feeling of Resentment Has Shown Itself In Petrograd.

LONDON, Dec. 7.—The Petrograd correspondent of the Times says there is only too good reason to corroborate the statement of Leon Trotsky, the Bolsheviki Foreign Minister, regarding the existence of a feeling of resentment against British residents in Russia. The feeling, he adds, is nowise universal, but is growing daily among the Bolsheviki. British workmen in a Petrograd factory lately were warned by their Russian comrades that they had better leave the country, as trouble may be brewing.

INSECTS, LIKE BIRDS, CALL.

Bees Mean Something When They Hum Louder and Louder.

Insects, like birds and animals, have their calls. But the sounds they produce include the rubbing together of their limbs or wing covers and the vibration of their wings, so they cannot always be spoken of as voices. Flies and bees undoubtedly mean something when they hum louder and louder.

Landoise, the famous naturalist, has calculated that to produce the sound of F by vibrating its wings, they vibrate 352 times a second, and the bee to create A vibrates 440 times a second. A tired bee hums on E sharp. This change is, perhaps, involuntary, but undoubtedly at the command of the will, and is similar to the voice.

When seeking honey a bee hums to F sharp. Landoise noticed three different tones emitted by insects—a low one during flight, a high one when the wings are held so that they cannot vibrate, and a higher one yet when the insect is held so that none of his limbs can be moved.

No music is as familiar as that produced by the locust, grasshopper, and crickets, and, although they are not produced by the mouth, they answer as calls, and are undoubtedly a language to a certain extent; and, indeed, their calls have been reduced to written music. The music of grasshoppers is produced in four different ways, according to Scudder.

First, by rubbing the base of one wing upon the other, using for that purpose veins running through the middle portion of the wing; second, by a similar method, by using the veins of the inner part of the wing; third, by rubbing the inner surface of the hind legs against the outer surface of the wing covers; and, fourth, by rubbing together the upper surface of the front edge of the wings and the under surface of the hind legs.

Taxing Young Bachelors.

Australia may have failed to put conscription into effect, but it has never failed to share the burden of the war. Its contribution is beyond calculation, both in men and in material. Now it intends that the weight shall not fall entirely on the shoulders of the willing, so it has ordered a tax of 10 per cent. to be placed on the taxable income of all unenlisted men who are eligible for service in the ranks. This is only fair to the men who are fighting the battle to keep the enemy from the shores of the Commonwealth. Those who have the benefit of the music should help to pay the piper.

Old Fashioned.

"He's very old fashioned."

"That so?"

"Yes. He still shines his own shoes and spits on the dauber when he does it."

The man who is always trying to save himself trouble is likely to save a lot more than he can take care of.—Youth's Companion.

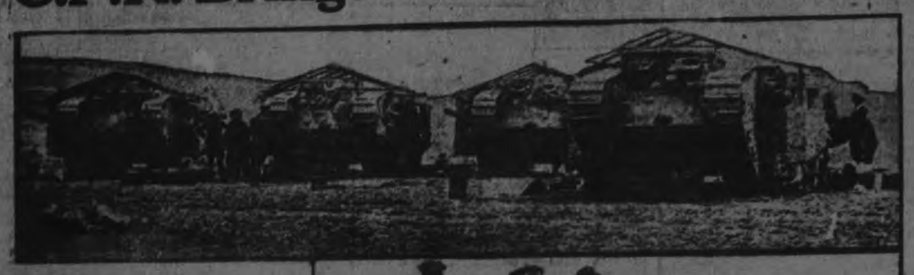
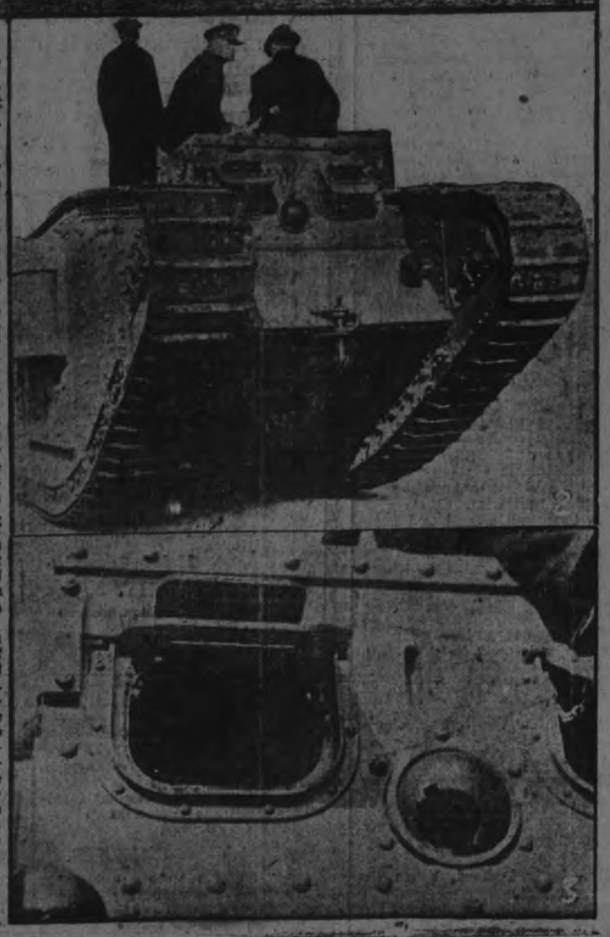
C.P.R. Brings a Tank to Canada





(1) British "Tanks" moving for a charge on German trenches.
(2) The "Tank" is equally at home on the level or climbing hills.
(3) The side that faces the foe. The shells are poured from the opening on the right.

EVERY one remembers the sensation produced on the battlefront in Flanders by the appearance of the land-battleships familiarly known as "Tanks." Through the efforts of Lord Shaughnessy of the C. P. R., who undertook to cover the heavy expense of transport, the British Government has agreed to send one of the "Tanks" to Montreal to take part in a great parade for the Victory Loan. Owing to the urgent need for this "Tank" elsewhere, its stay in this country cannot be for long, so that Montreal will be the only city in Canada to have the privilege of seeing this wonderful weapon of war. It carries six machine guns, and will be manned by a crew of gunners, all of whom have been wounded in actual "Tank" service at the front. The Tank will be manned and guarded night and day by its own crew, who will be assisted by a large squad of C. P. R. police.

King George, while recently in Flanders, rode with the Prince of Wales in a "Tank" almost identical with the one coming to Montreal. The strain of riding in a "Tank" under action is so terrific that after one day each man gets a week's leave to recuperate his nerves. Such, however, is the competition among volunteers to ride in the "Tank" that there is a large waiting list of men who have put down their names for the privilege of fighting the Hun in this way. It will be noted from the close up illustration that the shield of the machine gun is just like a human eyeball, but no human eye was ever more watchful than that of the man behind the gun.

Three Canadian Historic Spots

(1) Inside the old fort at Annapolis Royal. (2) Martello Tower, West St. John, N.B. (3) Evangeline's well.

THREE unique and interesting historic spots are to be found in the Maritime Provinces of Canada. Each tells its own story of a romantic past as it links us up with generations that have long since passed away.

The three are: the old French gate and barracks at Annapolis Royal, the ancient Willows and well-sweep of Grand-Pre, and the massive Martello tower, overlooking the Bay of Fundy from the heights of West St. John.

Each of the trio is worthy of a pilgrimage, and no better objectives could a traveller have in this delightful maritime land than to visit each in turn.

Let us, in the meantime, visit them in imagination. The Annapolis of to-day was the Port Royal of the olden times. It was one of the first European settlements in America, the only habitation of civilized man on the great continent on the fringe of a vast wilderness, stretching from Florida to the North Pole. Champlain and de Monts visited Anhapolis Basin in 1604, as did many another hero of the old French days.

So the little settlement was formed, and for a century and a half there after it tells the story of attack, capture and recapture. It witnessed many a baptism of blood, did this ancient French stronghold, until in 1710, England won it at the hands of a force of New Englanders. Again, in 1781, it was captured by an American force, but to-day it is a picturesque corner of Canada situated in one of its garden spots, and facing a long arm of the sea.

Next let us go to Evangeline's land, where the apple blossoms make a beautiful world in the summer time and where a glamour still rests over the valleys in memory of an Acadian maiden who was only the dream child of a poet. Here is the site of the old French farmstead, there the ancient well near the older French willows where real Acadian maidens drew water, while hard by is the smithy's forge that figures in the poem, as well as the little church. What a story the willows could tell if they had the power of speech, of the days when France ruled half of the continent and England was challenging her supremacy.

And finally there is the old thick-walled martello tower perched on a high rock above the City of the Loyalists, as St. John is known. These miniature fortresses still carry an aspect of strength and dignity, as they remind one of the old Napoleon era, when they were built in England as means of defence, and later in Canada. Similar specimens are still to be found in Quebec, Montreal and Kingston.

WILSON GETS SHELL CASE.

Souvenir of First Shot Fired by Our Gunners is Presented.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—The case which held the first shell fired by American artillerymen on the Western Front was presented to President Wilson to-day by the party of Representatives who recently made an unofficial visit to the battlefield. They also conveyed greetings from King Albert and President Poincare.

Each member of the party has a shell case from the first bombardment. The first one was saved for President Wilson, the second for General Pershing, the third for General Sibert, and those fired after the first three were distributed among the party.

Major-General John L. Biddle, Acting Chief of Staff of the Army, presented this letter, dated 5th November, from Major-General William L. Sibert to Major-General Tasker H. Bliss, Chief of Staff:

"I am forwarding to you case of first shell fired by our artillery against the enemy, fired by there is given the designation of the unit deleted in accordance with the voluntary censorship regulations), on Oct. 13, 1917.

"It occurred to me that this would be an acceptable souvenir to the President. If this meets your approval I request that it be given to the President in the name of the First Division, American Expeditionary Forces, France."

An ounce of gelatin will jelly a quart of liquid.

Black soy beans for soup should be soaked over night.

Testing Aero Engines.

In testing an aeroplane engine of 200 horsepower a Detroit company mounted it upon a heavy motor truck, and the aerial propeller sent the truck flying along a boulevard at the rate of over forty miles an hour, says the Popular Mechanics Magazine. This was a speed that the truck could not begin to develop under its own motor power, and the method furnished a better practical test of the twelve cylinder aeroplane engine than was possible in the testing laboratory or in any stationary trial on blocks. As an additional test the rear wheels of the two ton truck were locked, so that they could not revolve, and in this condition it was driven across a ball park by the aeroplane engine and propeller through heavy drifts of snow and over ice. The motor weighs 800 pounds and develops power sufficient to drive a twelve passenger aeroplane at forty miles an hour.

Lord Brougham's Dream.

Lord Brougham was one of the most stubborn believers in the "common sense" explanation of ghostly appearances as dreams. At Edinburgh university he and an intimate friend drew up an agreement written with their blood that whichever of them died first should appear to the survivor. Years passed; the friend was in India, and Brougham had almost forgotten his existence. Arriving late one night at an inn in Sweden, Brougham had a hot bath and was going to get out of it when he looked toward the chair on which he had left his clothes and saw his friend sitting on it. Brougham seems then to have fainted. On getting home he received a letter announcing that the other had died in India at the very time. Yet this incident, which most people would put down to telepathy at least, was dismissed by Brougham as a mere dream and pure coincidence.

Unpleasant War Bread.

Reports of illness through eating war bread are being received from all over the country, and the news that Lord Rhondda has instituted an inquiry into the cause will come as a relief to many. The bread is said to have given rise to digestive troubles and then eruptions in many districts. This is said to be due to the fact that some bakers are using imported flour that contains beans and rice—ingredients which are quite unfit for bread making. The inclusion of the germ sets free a large percentage of fat, which is unsuitable for weak digestions. Then, of course, regulation flour does not possess the keeping properties which wheaten flour does, and this fact again gives rise to disorders. The grey loaf can never be as palatable as the white one, but it can be made equally digestible and nourishing if the necessary precautions are taken. Still, English bread of to-day with all its defects, is not as bad as that which the Parisians had to satisfy their hunger with at the time of the siege of Paris, when a quantity of straw was mixed with the flour in order to help eke out the supplies of grain.

HEART WAS BAD NERVES ALL GONE

Very important it is in this age to have a clear cool head, a strong heart and steady nerves.

Too much rush and bustle, work and worry, fall to the lot of women attending to their household duties and social obligations. The constant strain under which they continue day in and day out will soon shatter the strongest system. Before long the heart gets weak, flutters and palpitates, the nerves become unstrung, you start at the least sound, the pulse becomes weak and irregular, then finally comes physical breakdown or nervous prostration.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are the remedy you require to strengthen your heart and steady your nerves.

Mrs. Jackson, 457 Bolivar Street, Peterborough, Ont., writes: "Fifteen years ago I was so bad with my heart I could not walk across the house, my nerves were literally all gone, and I was frightened at my shadow. I commenced to take Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and was soon able to do my own work. I have told dozens of people about them, some as bad as I was, and to-day they are also doing their own work. If more people would take them there would not be so many weak hearts."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c per box at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Dog Traces Huns.

The dog has played many roles in the Great War. For a long time the French have used him to drag small ambulances and to carry relief to wounded soldiers and the men in the trenches. Several stories of heroic conduct on the part of the canine species have been recorded. Scotland Yard, London, for years has looked to the dog to track down murderers, and not a few criminals have been safely landed behind prison bars owing to the keen scent and sagacity of the bloodhound. Two German airmen recently escaped from an internment camp near Maidenhead, and for some days no trace could be found of them. England, though small, is a large place for men to hide in, and just now, when every town and countryside is darkened owing to the frequent attacks by German flyers, these two men had greater opportunity to conceal themselves. A big mongrel dog, however, proved their undoing. He belongs to police constable Thomas Cleever, and is the terror of wrongdoers in the neighborhood. He has been taught by his master to distinguish between the law-breaker and the good citizen with remarkable skill. The airmen were discovered by the animal in a deserted lane at West Wickham, Kent, miles from the internment camp.

A Siberian Wonder.

The scientists have for years been perplexed over the wonderful frozen well at Yakutsk, Siberia. As long ago as 1828 it was announced that the ground was frozen to an abnormal depth at the place referred to. In the summer of 1829 a Russian merchant set a gang of men to the task of ascertaining the depth of the frozen stratum. They gave up the job after digging some thirty feet in solidly frozen ground. The Russian Academy of Sciences took the matter in hand and between 1838 and 1844 dug to a depth of 382 feet and then abandoned the shaft because the earth was still frozen as hard as a rock. Natural cold could never penetrate to such a depth, and the phenomena is still unexplained.

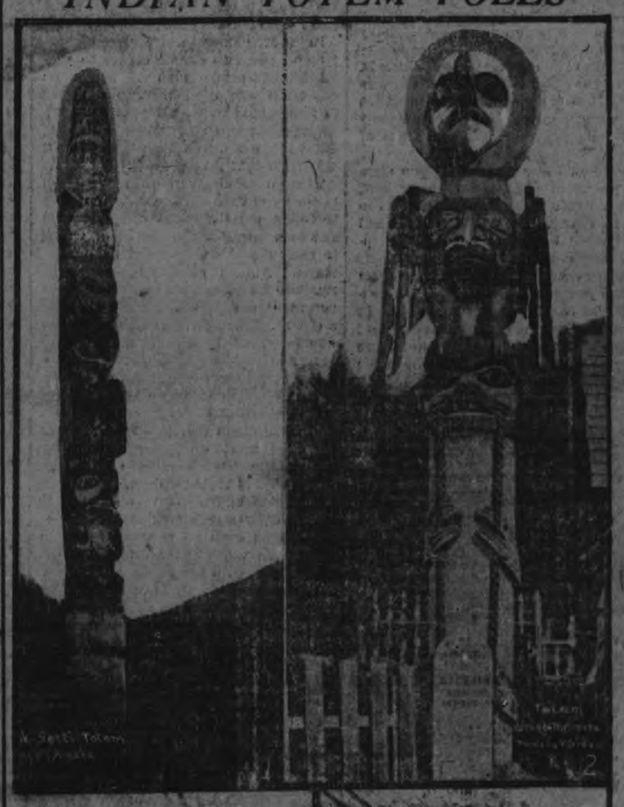
INDIAN TOTEM POLES



(1) Kik-Setti Totem, Wrangell, Alaska.
(2) Totem, Wrangell, Alaska.
(3) Bear Totem, Kling-wan, Alaska.

THE clan totem of the Indian is one of the most interesting productions of the red man. These strange specimens of wood sculpture are still to be found in British Columbia, especially along the Pacific Coast, as well as in Alaska. In many a waterside village these curiously crested poles stand in prominent places, or along the main street, as in Alert Bay, or over the graves of bronze warriors who have gone to their happy hunting grounds. To the white man they are as mysterious as the druidical stones, but to the Indian they tell the clan to which the dead Indian belonged, as well as his tribal status.

Each clan of the Indians of Alaska and British Columbia has its own totem, from which it takes its name. Thus there is the clan of the wolf, the clan of the raven, the clan of the frog, and so on. All the members of the clan are supposed to be descended, actually and literally, from the animals whose names they bear, and to conduct themselves always with due remembrance of the fact. For example, a man isn't supposed to kill or eat his father, and, therefore, the Indians of the bear clan, for instance, are not supposed to eat or kill bear. That animal is sacred to them, and the medicine man or "shaman" of the clan will invoke the direst penalties on any member who dares to transgress that rule.

The marriage customs of the clan are regulated by their totem. It is absolutely unthinkable that two members of the same clan should ever marry. With them a bear must mate with a raven, or a fox or a beaver or a shark or a member of some other clan, and never with a bear.

Ususally these poles are very large and have a doorway cut through them at the level of the ground, through which access is had to the solidly-built wooden house in which the clan or clans live. Among some of the Pacific Coast tribes, even within the memory of men, not unfrequently the posts of the chief's house were set in holes in which were placed bodies, through the superstitious belief that this would drive away evil spirits, protect the chief, and conduce to success in fishing, hunting and victory in war. When the posts were placed in position and the house finished, the ceremony was generally ended by a feast. For selection the slaves were gathered into the new house which was always the largest in the village. The chief with his principal "tyees" entered, dressed as demons, in bear and wolf skins, and decorated with horns, bones, skulls, eagles' claws, and panthers' teeth. A bandage was then placed over the chief's eyes, and thus blindfolded, to the sport of his "tyees," he chased the terrified creatures through the house until he had caught the number agreed upon to be made sport of.

The accompanying illustrations are striking specimens to be found in Alaska, and while the art is crude, from the white man's point of view, yet they are not to be despised as a revelation of the artistic spirit of those original Americans.

BOLSHEVIKI REGIME IN RUSSIA IS IN DANGER

Every Indication That Lenine-Trotsky Combination Are Making Desperate Effort to Jam Through Peace With Germany Before Being Toppled Over ---Peasants' Committee Against the Bolsheviki ---Little News From the Fighting Fronts To-day

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, December 10.—Sir George Buchanan, British Ambassador, in an interview with Russian pournalists according to a Reuter despatch from Petrograd, assured them of British sympathy for the Russian people, and denied absolutely the reports that Great Britain contemplated coercive and punitive action in the event of Russia making a separate peace. The British Government, the Ambassador is reported to have said, was entitled to complain of the action of the Bolsheviki Government in negotiating with the enemy, but did not wish to induce an unwilling ally to continue to share common effort by appealing to treaty rights. Great Britain, he added, was ready as soon as a stable government was established, to examine with it the aims of war and possible conditions for a just and durable peace. She wished to stand by Russia in this critical hour.

Every indication to-day was that the Bolsheviki are making a last desperate effort to jam through their peace with Germany before being toppled over. The Constituent Assembly, as it is recognized by the Trotsky-Lenine combination, will immediately curtail much of their power, even though the Bolsheviki obtain a majority.

JERUSALEM IS TAKEN BY BRITISH

Surrounded on All Sides the City Has Surrendered, Bonar Law Announces in the House of Commons This Afternoon

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, December 10.—Andrew Bonar Law, Chancellor of the Exchequer, announced in the House of Commons to-day that Jerusalem, after being surrounded on all sides by the British troops, had surrendered.

The capture of Jerusalem by the British marked the end with two brief interludes of more than twelve hundred years' possession of the seat of the Christian religion by the Mohammedans. For 653 years the Holy City has been in undisputed ownership of the Turks, the last Christian ruler of Jerusalem being the Ferman Emperor Frederick II., whose short-lived domination lasted from 1229 to 1243. Apart from its connection with the campaign being waged against Turkey by the British in Mesopotamia, the fall of Jerusalem marks the definite collapse of the long protracted efforts of the Turks to capture the Suez Canal and invade Egypt. Almost the first move made by Turkey after her entrance into the war was a campaign against Egypt across the great desert of the Sinai Peninsula.

LONDON, December 10.—Jerusalem has fallen. The capture of the Holy City, Christendom's most hallowed spot, by General Allenby's British expeditionary force, was announced here to-day. The capture of Jerusalem brings the Holy City under Christian control again for the first time in 401 years.

During all that time it has been under the sway of the Turks. Since the founding of the ancient city about 1400 B.C., it has been fought over, captured, ruined, rebuilt under fire and bespoiled by a dozen armies in wars and struggles dating from 1000 B.C., to the crusades of the Eleventh Century.

The British armies began their sweep up the valley of Palestine from the Suez Canal early last spring almost unnoticed. First General Murray and later General Allenby pushed steadily upwards against the Turks. Jerusalem's fate was sealed when this British expeditionary force on November 7 captured Gaza, immediately after taking the ancient City of Beersheba. General Allenby sent his forces rapidly north and a fortnight later they took Jaffa, the olden City of Joppa and seaport to Jerusalem. From Joppa the British began their encircling movement around the Holy City itself, striking north and east. At the latest reports last week they were within about nine miles of the city. Bethlehem, where the Saviour was born, lies a scant six miles due south of Jerusalem, and is presumably also now in British hands.

Jerusalem's fall will be a tremendous blow at the Turkish morale according to belief here to-day. The loss of this shrine, the possession of which has been the boast of the Moslems for centuries, will have far-reaching effects throughout Turkey. Recent despatches have indicated Envoy Pasha, Turkey's ambitious war minister, and the man who conceived the Turko-German alliance, was tottering from his place of power, while the British armies were sweeping all before them in Mesopotamia and Palestine.

A PEN PICTURE OF HALIFAX BY PREMIER'S SECRETARY

Catastrophe Too Dreadful to Admit of Description—Worse Than Flanders Towns After a Heavy Bombardment Has Wrecked Them

PIERS DESTROYED

Canadian Press Despatch:

TORONTO, Dec. 10.—George Yates, Premier Borden's private secretary, who toured the devastated district of Halifax within 24 hours of the explosion, has written a graphic pen picture of this terrible tragedy. Following is part of his story.

The catastrophe is almost too dreadful to admit of description in coherent matter of fact English, and too complete for adequate portrayal by means of the indiscriminating camera. To properly appreciate it one must be able to conjure up a picture of what once was in contrast with what no longer is. I have visited Halifax on many occasions, have seen North Street Station area, Richmond and Willow Park, in normal times, and when swollen with abnormal flox of war; I have seen the panoramic beauty of Dartmouth shore at all seasons, and always in restful contrast to the somewhat sombre, decidedly crowded, and for the most part, frame constructed district that sloped back from the tracks up the hill on which this historic old city stands. It was a district of working classes, with here and there an isolated though stately relic of other times. It was this hard-working, wage-earning community that Thursday morning's tragedy wiped out—wiped out is exactly the proper phrase.

In the hard shelled towns of Flanders, some walls do stand after intense bombardment. Here, a single devastating blast passed up hill and, in the twinkling of an eye crushed the breath of life out of two thousand people and rendered twenty thousand homeless and destitute.

A FLATTENED HEAP.

This morning I walked over what had been a dwelling, among the debris of which an old man worked alone. It was merely a flattened heap of wreckage, offering no obstruction to the eye and very little to feel. Only imagine ye within intact rooms, with snug double windows depriving the influence of a terrific gale of wet, clinging snow sweeping over the city, with scarcely a pane of glass intact and carrying its chill contact in a chilling temperature over thousands of beds of pain.

On a shore less than 200 yards away lay the wan-grey prow of a steamer—all of it we was left of the Mont Blanc, as I was informed. To the right, over on the Dartmouth shore, hard

TROOPER V. A. HENRY.

Mr. William Henry, City Assessor, has received word that his son, Trooper V. A. Henry of the Fort Garry Horse, is officially reported wounded and missing. Trooper Henry enlisted here in the 8th Canadian Mounted Rifles, and was promoted to the rank of Sergeant. He reverted to the ranks and subsequently joined the Fort Garry Horse. Trooper Henry evidently was engaged in the famous attack of the Fort Garrys on the Cambrai front when the Canadian cavalry made a two-mile advance into enemy territory and captured a German battery.

LIEUT. P. J. MALONEY.

Lieut. P. J. Maloney, son of Mr. Eugene Maloney of Emily, is reported wounded. Lieut. Maloney was a member of the Royal Flying Corps, and has been overseas some time.

A party of three returned soldiers reached Peterborough on Friday evening, and were met by Ald. Duncan on behalf of the city. The party consisted of Pte. W. Lewington, formerly of the 57th Battalion, who was wounded in the chest at Ypres last May; Pte. H. Mellmoyle, who was wounded in the arm; and Sapper Wm. Hamilton, who left here with the 30th Battalion, and has been in France for nearly two years.

St. John's Choristers assembled in the vestry after evensong to say goodbye to Mr. Skinner, of the tenor section, who has joined the 70th Battery, Montreal, and is in the city on leave. The honour roll of St. John's choir now contains the names of twenty-six boys and men who have enlisted since August, 1914, several of them not yet twenty years of age.

ALL GERMANS IN HALIFAX ARE BEING ARRESTED TO-DAY

A Call To Our People To Help Halifax

Halifax, to-day, as a city rivals the devastated lands and places of Belgium and Northern France. The disaster that has overtaken the city is the greatest in the annals of Canada. All the continent of America joins in rushing to the city in ruins, prompt and practical relief.

Peterborough is asked to join in the movement. To our sister city we must not fail to answer the call.

The City Council, here, has made an appropriation to be at once expended in providing such things as are most urgently needed and as specified in a communication from the Mayor of Halifax. These were to be materials to render such houses as would admit of temporary repair, habitable. Glass, beaver board, roofing materials, etc.

Bedding and such things as will contribute to household use are desperately needed. Many offers have been made to Mayor Duffus to contribute. Mrs. James Kendry makes a gift of fifty pairs of blankets. From the appropriation one hundred pairs will also be procured. There cannot be too many.

The 57th Chapter I.O.D.E., has advised that it will hand in a large number of pairs of socks. The Red Cross Organization has promised to contribute most liberally. Other local bodies are arranging to assist, each in its way. Bedding, clothing, etc., will be most acceptable.

General contributions are asked. Anything that is sensible and helpful will be valued. The Council is arranging to have a car loaded and despatched, if possible by Wednesday. All contributions may be reported to the City Clerk's Office, and they will be sent for, or anything that can be delivered can be left in charge of Chief Grange at the Fire Hall. That building will be headquarters until the car is loaded.

Let Peterborough do its share and do it quickly. Those who can contribute funds may do so to the City Clerk, and the money will be used to purchase additional quantities of such materials as the Council is providing.

Please act promptly. He who helps quickly helps most.

BY ORDER OF THE MAYOR.

Unsecured Bonds Amounting to $147,803,745.54 Were Bought By Some Lucky Ring at 37 Cents on the Dollar and Borden Government Forced Through By "Gag" Method to Redeem Them at Par—Mr. R. R. Hall Calls Attention of Electors to Grave Matter.

ADDRESS ON SATURDAY NIGHT

In the absence of Mr. D. F. Boyd, K.C., of Toronto, who was prevented by Saturday night's snow storm from coming to Peterborough, Mr. R. R. Hall addressed a large audience in Victoria Hall, discussing in detail some of the important issues that are involved in the approaching elections. He reviewed the results of his campaign in the city and townships, stating that he had been amazed by the large number of Conservatives who had volunteered their support.

"Some are assisting us quite openly," Mr. Hall said, "others don't like to desert their party, but they can't endure the Borden government any longer. Many in both the city and country have declared that they are voting Liberal for the first time. Some were attracted for a time to the Union Government until they found they had been mislead by the peculiar form of deceit with which Borden had influenced their minds, and are gradually coming over."

THE PEARSON TELEGRAM.

Mr. Hall stated that the voting overseas was now in progress. The bulk of the votes would be cast in England and France, but there were also Canadian soldiers to be heard from probably in Italy, the Balkan States and Mesopotamia. "We have been fed on the reports from the head of the army, men who were placed there by the Borden Government, and who owe their positions and advancement to that government. The private soldiers in the ranks are not allowed to cable their opinions across the Atlantic to influence public opinion. Their only communications are their letters home and these are not made public. But recently certain reports have leaked through from the heads of the so-called Union Government, and these reports are causing considerable alarm."

On Sunday, December 2nd, Mr. G. Fred Pearson, publisher of the Halifax Unionist party, wired to Joseph Unionist party, wired to Joseph E. Atkinson, proprietor of the Toronto "Star," and one of the fathers of the Union idea, the following confidential telegram:

J. E. Atkinson, The Star, Toronto.

HALIFAX, Dec. 2nd. — Trustworthy advices received here from overseas indicate very strong resentment among the soldiers at the treatment they have experienced from Perley and the headquarters staff.

This feeling, coupled with the war weariness, is likely to result in their voting very strongly against Union Government, Borden being very generally condemned.

What do you think of the idea of Liberal newspapers supporting the principles of Union government joining in a cable message to overseas forces to the effect that our attitude had been dictated by our desire to back up the boys at the front, and that, we believe, if returned to power, the Union Government will become an effective instrument TO REMEDY THE INTOLERABLE CONDITIONS WHICH HAVE SO FAR OBTAINED. Message to be published prominently in all the British papers. If you agree, will you take the matter up with Ontario papers? Am writing Dafoe (Editor of the Winnipeg Free Press.) Please advise if possible what you think."

Known dead—1,000.
Identified—800.
Missing—2,000.
Wounded—8,000.
Homeless—25,000.

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

HALIFAX, N.S., Dec. 10.—All German citizens of Halifax are being arrested. They were ordered taken into custody, regardless of sex. Seven men and one woman had been arrested up to a late hour last night, ten more this morning, and others are being rounded up as rapidly as possible. The surviving officers and crews of the steamers Mont Blanc and Imo, which collided, resulting in the terrific explosion that wrecked part of the town, have also been ordered arrested.

Rescuers are working in a downpour of rain to-day, and every indication is that the death toll may be increased over the estimate of 2,000 or more than decreased.

Premier Borden to-day announced the cancellation of all of his political engagements and will devote his entire time to the relief of Halifax.

The Premier thanked the people of the United States for aid that has been rendered, in a statement issued to-day. "The people of Canada are profoundly grateful for the generous sympathy of the people of the United States in the terrible disaster which has overtaken the city of Halifax, and they most deeply appreciate the splendid aid which has been offered and sent from so many communities of our great kindred nation," his statement says.

Bodies have been brought to the general morgue in block of fifty and a hundred at a time. Some are being gradually identified.

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, Dec. 10.—Greater than the Halifax horror consequent upon 1,000 tons of T.N.T., a British artillery expert exclaimed to-day that what was wanting in the ordinary up-to-date advance barrage over a five mile front," it was stated.

Considerable apprehension had been caused in some quarters over reports that the Halifax loss in explosives might have some effect on the battlefield.

SPLENDID KITCHENER.

The heart of the city of Kitchener is sound. At a special meeting on Friday the city council instructed the Mayor to wire at once ten thousand dollars for the relief of the suffering in Halifax. A noble generosity that shames the reproaches of hysterical partizanship, over a few hoodlums preventing the address of Sir Robert Borden. True nobility of character and conduct are not shown in drum-beating and flag-waving; but in prompt reccognition of duty and prompt response to worthy appeal. Kitchener, from the heart, contributed to the help of stricken Haligonians in a greater way in itself compared with the action of other and larger cities. Two hundred times greater than the comparatively small grant of Peterborough and St. Thomas — $500 each; five times greater than the grant of the city of London, with five times greater population.

Kitchener refused to pass a resolution of apology for the misconduct of hoodlum citizens, thrust upon it by a set of irresponsible busy bodies, but later took action of itself. Will the "patriotic" ranters, who have abused and insulted the mass of honest citizens of Kitchener and soiled its good name, have the grace to apologize in turn?

Sir Robert Falconer, President Toronto University, says "we mustn't be too hard on Quebec—they were misled by their leaders"; and Sir Robert Borden and his government allowed, permitted, encouraged "their leaders"—Bourassa and the Nationalists—to mislead them.

KEEP FAITH WITH THE DE LAVAL.

Peterborough is the site of the general offices and factories of one of the most important industrial enterprises of the country—those of the De Laval Company, Limited—with sales branch offices in all the principal cities and provinces of Canada, and two thousand local agencies under the wise of fifty travellers, for the sale of the products of the company.

Its goods find sale in every part of Canada, and many shipments are made to foreign countries. Therefore, in the mere matter of publicity and advertising advantage to Peterborough, the success and prosperity of the De Laval Company have a close relation to the credit and advantage of Peterborough.

There are, besides, substantial advantages, not to be despised. The works give employment to about two hundred persons, and the pay roll, spent in the city, amounts to $200,000 every year.

The De Laval Company has, besides, more than kept faith with the city; and the city must also keep faith. When the company established itself in Peterborough it was assisted in the matter of site, etc., to an amount of about $20,000. It agreed to erect a modern factory, and employ at least fifty hands. It has done better than that. It employs two hundred, and has built a splendid group of factory buildings. The pay roll of $200,000 amounts every year to ten times the total of the city's help.

Now its expanding business demands more buildings—more than there is room for elsewhere on the present site.

The company needs more land for new buildings on the north side. When the city provided a site for the company it reserved a strip forty-eight feet wide on the north side for a street. This street is not necessary nor of much prospective use, as the Railway Commission refuses a crossing over the Grand Trunk, and the Henry Hope Company, the only concern interested in the street, has agreed to its being closed by transferring it to the De Laval Company.

Now, what the company asks of the city is only the ceding to the company of forty feet of this forty-eight feet of street, so that it can have needed space for needed new buildings, not available on any other part of their property.

The City Council has agreed to the reversion of the street to the De Laval Company, and a by-law to give effect to this agreement will be submitted to the vote of the ratepayers at the elections in January.

It is hoped that, for the credit and good faith of the city, in the interests of a liberal and loyal attitude towards our industrial establishments and in the interests of the company whose presence and constantly growing benefits to the city will be helped to enlarged usefulness by the granting of its request—that the vote will be, as it should be, unanimous.

The conveyance of the street reservation to the company will not cost the city or ratepayers a penny; it is a mere street on the map, and if kept will never be used as a street.

We owe it to the company, which has kept faith, and more than kept faith, with the citizens and ratepayers, to keep faith with it and give it room to grow.

The Canadian soldier boys in the trenches are not allowed to knock off for the Christmas holidays; yet the Union Government, with all the urgency for immediate reinforcements, are allowing conscripts, who have never smelt powder, to be exempt till after the holidays.

ASKING TOO MUCH.

Hon. N. W. Rowell, the self-constituted representative of Ontario Liberalism in the warmed-over Borden Government, urges the present evil dominance of Bourassa and Nationalism in Quebec as a reason why Liberals should vote for the Borden Government now appealing for white-washing under the title of a "Union" Government.

Speaking at North Bay, Hon. Mr. Royell, according to a verbatim report of his address, said:

"The present attitude of the Province of Quebec ma ybe due to several causes. Undoubtedly the persistent agitation carried on by Mr. Bourassa and his Nationalist associates against Great Britain and France and Canada's participation in the war has most powerfully influenced the feeling and attitude of the Province of Quebec."

He is right in saying that "the present attitude of Quebec" is due to Bourassa and Nationalism; and Bourassa, in his potentiality for evil, and Nationalism are due to the Borden Government. When, in 1910, Mr. Borden was Conservative opposition leader, he and his party sympathised assisted, and applauded the election of the first Nationalist member of Parliament as a means to "kill Laurier." In 1911 Mr. Borden brought the high priest of the traitorous cult of Nationalism, Bourassa, to loyal Ontario, and he was introduced from a Conservative platform as "one of our leaders." In Quebec, in the same election, Conservative election funds were used to circulate Bourassa's vile sheet, Le Devoir, preaching at the same moment treason and the support of Borden candidates. The result was that Quebec gave Mr. Borden twenty-eight Nationalist supporters.

It therefore paid Mr. Borden well to encourage Nationalism—the only thing that gave it force, and without which it would have died. In his gratitude he made three Nationalist traitors Ministers in his Cabinet.

Sir Robert Borden and his Government virtually created Nationalism. It adopted it, fed it, clothed it, rewarded it, salaried it ,and gave it the evil power and influence it has wielded, a power which Mr. Rowell declares is the cause of the "present attitude of Quebec in its hostility to war service." Further on in his speech Mr. Rowell said that "the surrender in the year 1911 to Quebec to Nationalist-clerical influence was a grave national blunder, from which our men suffered during the whole period of the war"—and are suffering still.

Yet Mr. Rowell asks the electors of Canada—such as the Borden Government permits to vote—to rally to the support of a Government which bears the guilt of having debauched the sentiments of the second largest province in the Dominion. Mr. Rowell asks a little too much. The people cannot forget and forgive at a minute's notice the crime of the Borden Government in making Nationalism a power for evil and an instrument of national schism, the chief factor in directly killing recruiting in Quebec and indirectly killing it in the rest of Canada.

Now Mr. Rowell asks us to swallow all this and all the other sins of the Borden Government, which was afraid to appeal to the people in its own name and on its own record, but presents itself in the diaphanous disguise of a "Union" Government.

It is possible to fool some of the people some of the time, but not to fool all the people all the time.

SHOULD LABOUR BE HEEDED?

The City Council has decided to submit at the annual municipal elections the question of the abolition or retention of the system of electing aldermen to represent wards or the substitution of the system of electing aldermen by a general vote of the electors.

The fact that the change is asked for by he Labour interests, creates interest in its fairness and desirability. It is admitted that concentration of effort upon a restricted and easily covered area like a ciy ward permits of the election of candidates, upon whose desirability general electoral opinion would be adversely divided. It stands to reason that a candidate with limited qualifications or strong "local pull" can secure as representative of a ward, election, which would be denied if offered to the general body of electors, when he would be judged on his merits and "local pull" would not be an element of success.

Without at all disparaging the general character as to qualifications or ability of representatives chosen by the ward system, it is undeniable that the general character of a city council is improved in representative quality and executive ability when it owes its election to the approval of the general body of the electorate.

We elect our School Board by general vote; and it is to be admitted that this system brings to the composition of the School Board a body of members marked by large business ability, breadth of view and knowledge of affairs. Without reference to any particular individual, it is evident that a candidate of limited ability and desirability can be elected by the ward system, who would not be chosen if his merits were pronounced upon by a general vote. His "local pull" would not count.

The general vote system is doubtless impracticable, or not practised, in regard to the election of members of Parliament or in large cities; but in a small city like Peterborough, it is entirely practicable; and desirable for the reason that it provides a higher character of representative, and besides gives fuller representation. Under the ward system the Council is composed of ten members, eight of whom the citizens at large had no voice in choosing; so that eight-tenths of the ratepayers are without representation in the Council. There are only two members out of ten, no matter what the sins of the whole body might be, that the electors can call to account at the polls and dispense with, by their votes if they prove unfaithful servants.

A local contemporary is afraid that the demand of labour for a return to the general vote system marks a desire of labour to get larger representation in the City Council.

If this is so, is not the action justified? The largest interest, the most important interest, of any city is the labour interest, because in its broad aspect it includes nine-tenths of the citizens.

Labour is organised for its special interests, but it lacks organisation for its representative interests; and it does not lie with any fair-minded man to discourage labour in seeking to protect and advance its interests.

We all know, we all admit, that in this war labour has borne the brunt of the fighting; its ranks are most largely represented in the ranks of Canadian soldiers. This is a condition which indicates that labour should have at least one bona fide representative in a Government that has to do with protecting the rights and advancing the interets of labour as so largely represented in our soldiers at the Front or under training.

Yet in the reorganised Borden Government, named the Union Government, Sir Robert Borden, while he has taken care to have Liberalism and the big interests permanently represented has not, as he promised at the beginning, appointed a real labour representative to the Cabinet —he keeps his promises by promising again—he will attend to the matter after the election.

After the election the voter who is whirled to the polls in a carriage or a limousine can walk home—he has voted, and is of no more use. After the election Sir Robert Borden will be the politician again—he is the patriot and pretended friend of labour now. After the elections, can we think that the "Big interests" behind the Borden Government will allow labour to put its "dirty fingers" into the administrative pie, with the risk of picking out a plum that by prescriptive right belongs to the big interests?

Whoever thinks of Canada withdrawing from the war, except the erstwhile Nationalist allies of the Borden Government?

How Will The Elector Vote?

If anyone is in doubt whether the Big Interests are behind the Borden Government, let him read this list of individuals who are supporting him without counting any of the big corporations:

Sir Clifford Sifton—(Kingmaker of Big Interests.)
Lord Beaverbrook—(The Uncrowned King of Monopolies.)
Baron Graham—(Baron of Trusts and Combinations.)
Sir William MacKenzie—(The Knight of Unseen Rulers.)
Sir Joseph Flavelle—(The Baron of High-Priced Meat.)
Sir Donald Mann—(The Knight of Secret Influence and Pull.)
Sir Edmund Walker—(The Knight of the Money Trusts.)
Sir Edmund Osler—(The St. Michael and St. George of Floating Capital.)
Sir John Willison—(The Big Interests' Ruler of Racial Hatred.)
Sir John Hendrie—(Lieutenant-Governor of German Nickel Dealers.)
Sir John Gibson—(High Priest of Niagara Power.)
Sir John Eaton—(The Millionaire Prince of What You Wear.)
Sir Thomas White—(Lord Treasurer of Unseen Grafters.)
Sir Charles Ross—(The Gartered Knight of the Ross Rifle.)
Sir Sam Hughes—(The Deposed Knight of the Allison Ring.)
Mr. J. H. Burnham—(The Hewer of Wood and Drawer of Water to the Big Interests.)

A vote for Mr. Burnham is a vote for Sir Robert Borden and the Big Interests and Higher Cost of living.

A vote for Mr. Hall is a vote against the Big Interests and for the Rights of the Masses and for increased food production and Lower Cost of living.

coterie who engineered the Union Government.

Mr. Atkinson sent copies of the telegram with a letter enclosed, to twenty-five or thirty newspapers in Ontario that are supporting the Union ist party. The letter was as follows:

Toronto, Dec. 3, 1917.

——— Editor,

———, Ont.

Dear Mr. ——: I am attaching co of a telegram received to-day from Mr. Pearson, proprietor of the Halifax Chronicle. May I ask you to let me know by return mail whether you think well of the idea?

The announcement in to-day's despatches that immediately after the election General Mewburn and the Hon. Mr. Rowell will proceed to England to confer with the Overseas military organization over there will do a great deal to re-assure our soldiers as to the future and give them to understand this is a new government. This announcement will perhaps be the most decisive factor in solidifying soldiers' sentiment. But my view is that such a message as Mr. Pearson suggests would also have a good effect.

Believe me, to be yours very truly,

(Signed) J. E. Atkinson.

SAME OLD PARTY.

"This is a new Government," Mr. Hall quoted from the letter. "The boys at the front will no more believe slap-trap of that kind than will the people at home. It's the same old party with a white-washed face. I'd rather trust the old government with its scars and its weakness visible than this so-called union government with a mask concealing its character, its crimes and its scars.

"This telegram conveys encouraging news from a union source that we can trust to the boys overseas that they are not going to be humbugged by empty clap-trap the Union Government leaders have been handing out."

A DO-NOTHINNG POLICY.

In all his experience of thirty years in election campaigns Mr. Hall had never seen the Opposition candidate follow such an extraordinary course as in this. "Mr. Burnham has published an election address, but I defy you to show me one policy mentioned therein. He has adopted a do-nothing policy and a do-nothing policy is no good in war or peace.

In the last six years what single, solitary public improvement has he accomplished that shows for itself. He proposed to erect a new Customs House and Post Office in one building. He bought a vacant lot on George street, and it is still vacant. He has followed a donothing policy as far as West Peterborough is concerned."

Mr. Hall declared that while millions of dollars had been spent by the Government on public works, the Trent Canal was not yet completed, and Mr. Burnham had been altogether too indifferent to the G.T.R. bridge obstruction which should have been removed at least a year ago. A fair share of the Government's expenditure had not come to Peterborough, nor had its rights and its needs been accorded proper attention. With the Canal open to Trenton this city might be enoying the advantage of bringing coal in from the lake to provide a sufficient supply here.

MIGHT HAVE HELD FACTORY.

Mr. Hall referred to the loss of the Metal Products Co. to this city. It had a pay-roll of $60,000 a month. It owed its existence to the shell contracts it received from the Government.

"The very moment Mr. Burnham heard this company was going to leave he should have gone to Premier Borden and demanded that if the Metal Products Co. pulled out of Peterborough to move to Montreal, then it must pull out without contracts, that it must now be given new contracts. It was very important that the employees should have been needlessly thrown out of their jobs at the beginning of winter, and that if some of them desired to retain their jobs they had to move to Montreal. But as usual, Mr. Burnham stuck close to his do-nothing policy. The Company alleged that it was difficult to get labour here, but if every Province had done its share in recruiting there should have been as great a scarcity of men in Montreal as in Peterborough."

And yet, Mr. Hall continued, the Borden Government proposes to take only 5,000 men from Quebec; to grant wholesale exemptions to the farmers and factory hands in that Province, but will take the remaining 95,000 men from the farms and factories of Ontario, and the rest of the Dominion. "This rank injustice will be perpetrated on Ontario."

A SHALLOW POLICY.

"The Borden Government's policy begins and ends with the idea 'get 100,000 Canadians to the trenches and the war is won.' I wish to heaven one hundred thousand men would win the war. I'd say 'get them over there just as fast as we can.' But, unhappily, 100,000 men count for very little in these days. Italy lost more than 100000 in her retreat, and the United States is transporting and training men by the hundreds of thousands. In spite of these facts that every man knows the Borden Government tries to tell the Canadian people to get 100,000 of their boys over and that ends it."

"But that will not end it," Mr. Hall emphasized. "It will neither end the war nor the work of the government. If Borden is elected the sending of 100,000 should take a comparatively short time to arrange, but what do the electors think this government will be doing in the next five years?

CANVASSING SOLDIERS' WIVES.

Mr. Hall warned his supporters to be extremely careful in their canvassing the dependents of soldiers. Certain reports of a heartless method of canvassing the wives and mothers of soldiers and he certainly did not wish to emulate it.

Certain ladies, Mr. Hall explained, who had constituted themselves as leaders of society in his city, have, with doubtless the best of intentions, been working among the soldiers' homes for the election of Mr. Burnham. "Coming from the most comfortable homes, handsomely clad in apparel of the latest style they visit homes that are not always well heated, and if they made further enquiries they would find that the cost of living bears heavily upon the small allowance the Government provides. They tell the soldiers' dependents that "unless you vote for Burnham you will never see your husband, your brother or your son again."

"I ask you could there be anything more heartless than that?"

Mr. Hall continued: "I would rather be defeated a thousand times than have a supporter of mine go to a soldier's home and add to the anxiety, the distress and the alarm of a mother or wife by telling her that unless she voted for me she would never see her husband or son again. But this method of canvass is quite in keeping with the character of the man who wrote the widow "to cut out the lost leg."

THE C. N. R. DEAL.

"The purchasing of the Canadian Northern Railway authorized last session should be opened up and investigated," said Mr. Hall.

The Act of Parliament, authorizing the purchase of this road, involving the payment of no less than 600 millions, was put through the House of Commons by Sir Thomas White by the use of the "Gag Law," by a moribund parliament dying of old age and dry rot.

Discussion was shut off and investigation was refused.

And yet the amount involved was nearly equal to twice our national debt before the War.

The purchase price of the road involved an amount equal to one-third of the total value of all the assessible property in the whole Province of Ontario.

According to the last issue book issued by the Government there were $147,808,745.54 of unguaranteed securities outstanding against this road.

Mr. Hall said "that for months and years there has been talk of this road going into insolvency, into the hands of the Receiver and of foreclosure proceedings being taken to squeeze out its creditors and unsecured bond holders.

Since the war began many of the holders of the unguranteed securities amounting to 147 million dollars, have sold out their holdings as low as 37 cents on the dollar, some as low as 30 cents on the dollar, and some as low as twenty cents on the dollar.

At one time the bonds of the Canadian Northern Railway were readily purchased by the small British investors.

The unfavourable reports regarding the rotten financial condition of the road induced the small British investors to sell out at any price, and at a great loss to the poor British investors.

Many a British family have felt the pinch of want through losing their life savings in this road.

"But who purchased these unguaranteed securities and bonds? That is just what I would like to know, said Mr. Hall.

Sir Thomas White has been asked this question and he refused to answer it. More than that, Sir Thomas White applied the "gag law" and, in effect, told the electors of Canada that it was none of their business who purchased these bonds from the British investors at 37 cents on the dollar, at 30 cents or at 20 cents on the dollar.

"But what do you think, Sir Thos. White has agreed to pay to the lucky purchasers of these unguaranteed securities amounting to 147 million dollars," asked Mr. Hall. He is going to pay these lucky purchasers 100 cents on the dollar.

If one man could have purchased all these unsecured bonds at 30 cents on the dollar he would have made a profit of no less than 100 million dollars and be wealthier than four Strathcona estates, and be wealthier than one hundred George A Cox estates.

Did any one or more persons get a "pointer" from Sir Thomas White, (the nominee of the big interests) that the government was going to redeem these unguaranteed securities and bonds at par?

Did any one get a "pointer" from Sir Thomas White that he was going to force through the House of Commons by the "gag law" the purchase of these bonds at par.

What group of Canadian Lords, Barons and Knights surrounded Sir Thomas White and heard "the call" to plunder and rob the British investors "in war time?"

What group of newspaper owners surrounded Thomas White and said: "Give us the advance copy of this gigantic steal and we will poison the rivers and streams that carry public news?"

What small group of profiteers, scribes and pharisees sitting in high places said to Sir Thomas White "is it really true that you will pay 100 cents on the dollar for these 147 million dollars of unguaranteed bonds that can be purchased from the British investor at 30 cents on the dollar. The answer readily comes: "If so Sir Thomas White, we will join your Union ring."

What group of leading society ladies rolling in wealth and luxury received a tip to purchase these bonds and to join the unholy union to rob the British investor?

Why did the Toronto Star, in the hands of wealthy Joseph E. Atkinson, proclaim that the purchase of the Canadian Northern Railway is a triumph or public ownership?

Why does the Toronto Globe, in the hands of Stock Broker Jaffray, not condemn this unrighteous deal?

Why does not the Liberal Manitoba Free Press, in the hands of Millionaire Sir Clifford Sifton not protest against this highway robbery of the British investor?

These are some of the questions Sir Wilfrid Laurier wants answered. It is the taxpayer who pays the bill who wants to know?

Sir Wilfrid Laurier made a bad break and antagonized the big interests when he declared that he would investigate this colossal steal and that if he were elected Prime Minister he would revise downward this Canadian Northern Railway agreement with the government.

He wants to save the people of this country tens of millions of dollars.

Are the electors going to stand behind Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his supporters or are they going to play into the hands of the Big Interests?

VERSATILE CROOK GETS FIVE YEARS

Was Apprehended on Seventy-Six Charges—A Sensation Producer

KINGSTON, Dec. 10.—James Henderson, who was turned over to the civil authorities here a week ago, for action by them on seventy-six charges of offences, ranging from desertion and impersonation, to highway robbery with violence, was sentenced to five years' imprisonment in the penitentiary here.

Henderson, a Detroit electrician, enlisted in the C. M. R. during early summer and was sent with other drafts to Ottawa. There his historic career as a sensation producer and confidence man began, with the copying of an officer's signature on a military pass. After leaving the barracks on this pass he obtained goods and money on forged cheques in Ottawa and embarked on a tour of Eastern Ontario and New York State, marked by the successful negotiation of no fewer than twenty-six cheques, chiefly for car hire and cash accommodation, in a dozen different centres. Upon the trail growing hot at Watertown he adopted the bolder game of holding up one automobile party and a few hours later blackjacking a chauffeur whom he had engaged and thereafter tapped on the head from the vantage of the tonneau. Bloodhounds were used unsuccessfully on the trail, but these he eluded, ultimately coming to grief at Tupper Lake, where an amateur detective — a medical man enjoying a summer vacation — succeeded in marooning him on a little island and then brought the district sheriff.

Promised to Fight.

Henderson was brought back to Kingston under military guard and at his hearing put up so eloquent a penitential plea that he was given but thirty days' "C.B.," with the unwritten addenda that he would go overseas with the first outbound draft and accept a place in the front line trenches.

He did not wait for the promised martial glory, but the day prior to the expiry of his term of confinement to barracks, slipped quietly away, having systematically prepared for a flitting by gaining possession of three automatic pistols, a sheaf of military department cheque blanks, two pair of handcuffs and a military police badge. The old plan of procedure was slightly, but very slightly, varied. He dropped the name of Henderson, the fame of the soldier, "Jim the Penman," having become embarrassing, and adopted the honest Scottish name of Sergeant Jock MacDougall.

Chartering a motor car, he announced himself as in search of deserters and at Castleman demonstrated his audacity by arresting two over-leave absentees, whom he marched to the local lock-up. Delivering them to the Chief of Police, he insisted upon a receipt, and later induced the Chief to honor a worthless cheque for $25, his own description, and the Provost Marshal's request for his arrest being at the time a decoration of the obliging officer's quarters.

Trail Led East.

The new trail led eastward, through Montreal, where an innosent private was forced to join him, all the way to Paterson, N.J., where the matter of many cheques ultimately was landed by the police. Upon the decision of the military authorities to pass his misdoings on the civil authorities, Henderson was arraigned a week ago and pleaded guilty to all charges against him, these totalling seventy-six. One of the more serious in the string was proceeded with, and the five-year term ordered.

VON TIRPITZ IS GLOOMY

Recognizes That British Sea Power Will Win the War.

LONDON, Dec. 7.—The Westminster Gazette, in a leading article on Admiral Von Tirpitz's recent admissions at Essen that Great Britain had hitherto won more than she had lost, says: "Von Tirpitz's gloom is due to his knowledge of the meaning of sea power. He sees no future for Germany if sea power succeeds in shutting her in and employing the tremendous economic weapon in its grasp and that of the allies. Von Tirpitz throws a salutary douche of cold water on Von Hindenburg's and Ludendorff's recent assertions about Germany's strength by saying that nothing could be decided until British sea power was broken, and pointing out the incontestable fact that this power was everywhere victorious in its own sphere."

C. W. MILLER HAS GAINED 32 POUNDS BY TAKING TANLAC

Improvement of Former Postmaster Surprises All of His Friends

Remarkable, indeed, was the statement made by G. W. Miller, of 232 McNab Street, Hamilton, who recently declared that he has not only gotten complete relief from rheumatism and stomach trouble by taking Tanlac, but that he has actually gained thirty-two pounds in weight besides. Mr. Miller was for twelve years postmaster and merchant at 69 Corners, Brant county, and is well-known and respected throughout Southern Ontario. Mr. Miller's complete statement follows:

"As a result of rheumatism and stomach trouble I had fallen off to one hundred and fifteen pounds. I now weigh one hundred and forty-seven pounds, which puts me even beyond my normal weight, and I don't think I have ever felt better in my life. I was so sick and crippled up that I had to sell out my business and get a man to take charge of the Post Office. My legs had perished away until they were no larger than my arms—I couldn't bend them—the leaders seemed to be tied in knots and hurt me so I could hardly bear anything to touch me. I just could manage to hobble around by the use of a walking stick. My stomach was so upset that I could hardly eat anything. My appetite was all gone and I just seemed to be slowly starving. Sometimes all I could take was a glass of milk, and even then I suffered.

"For several months I was under treatment at a considerable cost without getting any relief, but my improvement on a few bottles of Tanlac has astonished me and all who knew of my awful condition. It seems that everybody I see asks me what I have done to gain so much weight and make me look so much better. My appetite is so big now I can hardly eat enough to satisfy me, and I can eat anything—meats and all kinds of vegetables—and nothing hurts me. I was constipated, too, but by using the Tanlac tablets in connection with Tanlac I have been relieved of this trouble. The rheumatism is all gone out of my legs—I don't have to use a cane any more — and I can walk any place I want to go. My legs are getting back to their regular size, my muscles are getting firm and I simply feel altogether different in every way. Of course I owe my present good health to nothing but Tanlac, and am glad to make a statement that will reach others who may be suffering as I did, for I honestly believe Tanlac will help them."

CHRISTMAS IN BELGIUM

Women and Children Are Starving —Bowl of Soup the Holiday Diet

Belgium faces another Christmas on a bowl of soup and a slice of bread per day. How much more thoroughly we in Canada would enjoy our Xmas festivities if we could feel that we had done something to make life a little more bearable for those to whom we owe so much.

With all the events of vast importance being reported in our daily papers, we must not forget that it was the fathers of these starving children, the husbands of these famished women, who checked the Huns in their first terrible drive on Paris, on Great Britain—on Canada.

A statement by Baron Moncheur, head of the Belgian Relief Commission in the United States, says that Belgium has become for its inhabitants merely a cage, whose bars are formed of German bayonets.

"Go into the homes of the common people and even into the homes of the hitherto moderately rich, if you would find the real sorrow of Europe to-day, and all the sorrow of the world seems to be focused with dreadful stress upon poor little Belgium. If one person gets enough to eat some other person is bound to starve.

"Many a baby has died in Belgian cities from lack of milk, which used to come from the country nearby."

What can you do as a Christmas offering to Belgium?

Anniversary Services At George Street Church

Special Services Were Well Attended in Spite of the Severe Weather—Inspiring Sermons by the Rev. Alfred Brown, of Picton

The anniversary services at George street Methodist church yesterday were attended by large congregations at both services, in spite of the unusually inclement weather. The special preacher for the services was Rev. Mr. Alfred Brown, Picton.

The Sermon.

In the evening Mr. Brown used as the text of his sermon, John xii., 29-30 verses. "Then came a voice from heaven saying, I have glorified it and will glorify it again. The people that stood by and heard it said that it thundered; others said an angel spoke to him."

Mr. Brown said the interpretation and application of noises and voices depend upon our having ears to hear and a mind to understand. In higher realms of spiritual things it depends upon our spirit's discernment. It is not given to all to understand and discern the meaning of voices. It may not be our own fault if we are dull of hearing, slow to catch a meaning, hearing confusedly and not understanding. Inability may result from a variety of causes, nevertheless the ability to discern and hear aright is largely a matter of cultivation. Man owes it to God that he should hear and interpret rigth. Of this we have a striking illustration in the text.

When Jesus cried out to God from the Cross He was immediately answered—some who heard thought the answer to be thunder, others the voice of angels. Jesus knew it was the voice of God. All powers of nature are at God's command and are employed not only materially but to carry out his grace and to providence.

Let us listen for voices, not for the voices of familiar spirits, but natural voices, not in secret places, but in God's house. Man to-day is too much taken up with material and temporal voices to listen to the spiritual. The preoccupied state of his mind keeps him from hearing the voice of God. Let us look for the interpretation of voices and welcomen the man who can interpret the voice of God.

Many voices come with higher and lower interpretation. The lower leads to the higher. It was a long way from the interpretation of thunder to the interpretation of an angel speaking. Let us never be satisfied till we hear God speak.

Four Interpretations.

We may make application of interpretations on familiar lines. There is the interpretation of nature. Time was when the sighing of winds and roaring of cataracts were to the men who heard them voices of God's. Ignorant interpretation preceded the interpretation of the Angel of Science, which showed the possibilities of utilizing the elements. Then there is the interpretation of man's deeds— one deed appears to cancel another, but there is no mere cancelling in the end but an ultimate accomplishment.

In the interpretation of events God would teach us by what is passing, all events have a voice. Terrible things have passed, are passing and will pass. We hear the thunder of war and listen for peace, yet we may have to wait until all is over before we can interpret the meaning of which is shaping. Lastly we have the interpretation of the Scripture. Material interpretation has resulted in the foundation of gems of art, literature and sculpture. In interpretating the Bible the spirit of objection will find every reason to object. He who goes into the Bible will find himself face to face with the JJesus. The highest interpretation is the Cross of Christ and is easier to understand to-day than ever before with the crosses which are being borne by mothers who have given their sons, thousands of men who fill the rows of graves in the war zones, and desolated homes.

The materialistic will say the voice from heaven was a delusion. In the face of what happened on the occasion from which the text is taken, their error or inability to discern is proved. Man must strive to discern the voices in the daily march of life for his own guidance.

The Music

The music at the anniversary service was especially meritorious. Mrs. Renwick, whose voice is always received with great appreciation, rendered solos at both services. In the evening the magnificently trained full choir of talented choristers was heard to great advantage and supplemented by a particularly fine selection of a trio, consisting of Miss Emma Worth, Mr. Asa Huycke and Mr. Jones, also a quartette by Miss Armstrong, Mrs. Rehill, Mr. Walton and Mr. Dartnell.

Special Prayers.

Special prayers were asked for those who have suffered through the disaster in Halifax.

"JACK AND THE BEANSTALK"

Wm. Fox "Kiddie" Film to Be Shown Here

Coming direct from the Globe Theatre, New York, where it scored one of the most pronounced hits of the season, "Jack and the Beanstalk," William Fox's screen version of the famous fairy tale, will open a two days' engagement with a matinee, Friday, Dec. 14, at the Grand Opera House.

"Jack and the Beanstalk," as it is made into photo-drama, has a modern introduction during which two present-day children, Francis Carpenter and Virginia Lee Corbin, have the wondrous fairy tale read to them after which they elude their nurse and they go into the woods in search of the enchanted forest; night overtakes them and they fall asleep. Francis dreams, and in his dream he himself is the valiant hero Jack of beanstalk fame, and his little playmate, Virginia, is the beloved Princess Regina. The story of giant and fairies and pigmies we all love so well, is then followed closely.

Jack, as you all know, sold his mother's cow for a sack of beans. She was angry because of this and threw the beans out of the window. Next morning it was found that they had sprouted. An enormous beanstalk reached from the ground to the sky.

Jack, filled with the spirit of adventure, climbed it and landed in a country above the clouds, where dwelt thousands of diminutive people pigmies-fairies and a terrible giant, and a beautiful Princess. After many adventures Jack kills the giant, marries the Princess; and the scenes then fade back to the modern time.

The parents of Francis and Virginia have experienced an agonizing night; with searching parties have sought to find their little ones, their hearts filled with fear that harm may have befallen them, when just as the grey light of early dawn appears, the frantic parents discover their little darlings sleeping soundly—Francis with his tiny arms holding Virginia closely in childish embrace. So ends what is now acknowledged the screen sensation of the day.

Francis Carpenter and Virginia Lee Corbin, the little stars of "Jack and the Beanstalk," are said to be the two most remarkable children in screenland to-day, and pappas and mammas will soon be telling their little kiddies about them, and they will take them along to see this fascinating fairy fantasy, as alibis, but they will really want to see it themselves.

WOUNDED IN TRYING TO HELP COMRADES

Sergt.-Major Harry Wilford Succeeded in His Second Attempt to Carry Rum Out to Men Who Were Holding a Trench Full of Water Against Heavy Fire.

WAS HIT IN CHEST

Mrs. Wilford, Clive Avenue, has received the following letter from her husband, Sergt.-Major Harry Wilford, M.M., of Peterborough, who was wounded a short time ago. Sergt.-Major Wilford was at the Front with the 87th Battalion:

Base Hospital,
France, 17th Nov.

My Dear Wife,

Just a few lines to let you know the news, although I guess before you get this you will be officially notified that I am wounded.

Well, dear, don't worry, as it might have been far more serious than what it is; but thanks to the splendid handling that I got at the Casualty Clearing Station, I am going on first-class, and am nicely tucked up in bed between nice clean sheets again as comfortable as can be. And fancy, I am going back to England again on Monday next, 17th November; so I guess I am finished with the fighting part of the war and not sorry, for I have done my share.

It was on the morning of the 14th that I got it. The Hun had been giving us a very bad time with his artillery, and our boys were in a bad way; so I volunteered to get their rum out to them, as the trenches were full of water, and the lads were in a bad state.

The result was I got my poor corporal and two men killed and the rum blown up. I was the only one out of that party who got back. Well, we waited for him to quieten down a bit, when I went out again with two water bottles full of rum. I managed to get to the boys, and was making my way back, when I got a piece of shell in the right chest.

I am pleased to say that I am out of danger, although I was in a very serious condition when operated upon the same night; but now everything is O.K. So cheers for Blighty and perhaps Canada. Who knows?

Don't write until you hear from me again, as I will write next Monday or Tuesday from England, giving you the address and fuller particulars.

Your loving husband, Harry.

A FRENCH CANADIAN FAMILY OF WHICH THE CITY SHOULD BE PROUD

Sergt. Archie De Laplante

Gunner Godfrey De Laplante

A French-Canadian family, that of Mr. Ernest DeLaplante, 287 Wescott street, has one of the best records in connection with the war that this city can boast of. One of Mr. DeLaplante's four sons, Sergt. Archie De Laplante, of the Canadian Mounted Rifles, met death on the field of honour recently in France; Gunner Godfrey DeLaplante is at the front with the 17th Battery, Canadian Field Battery; Fred DeLaplante is with the United States Army at Portland, Oregon, and the fourth son, Mr. O. DeLaplante, has been placed in Class 2 by the Exemption Tribunal as a tribute to his family's war record.

Mr. DeLaplante's daughter, Mrs. Birdgenaw, has lost two of her brothers-in-law, Ptes. Dan, and Frank Birdgenaw, of the 93rd Battalion, in France, and his son-in-law, Mr. Louis Houedry, was invalided home two years ago, after being in an ammunition train explosion.

Sergt. Archie DeLaplante, who was killed in action on October 30th, enlisted here as a private with the 8th C.M.R., and won his sergeant's stripes in France. His commission was only a few days off when his death occurred. His father has received the following letetr from his company commander:

C. Co., 5th C.M.R., Nov. 6, 1917.

Mr. Ernest DeLaplante, 287 Wescott St., Peterborough:

Dear Mr. Laplante, — Before this reaches you you will have heard through official channels of the death of your son, No. 111568, Sergt. A. DeLaplante, who was killed in action on October 30th, 1917, when we were making our attack on Passchendaele Ridge.

Just as Sergeant Laplante was leaving ouh front line trench to cross "no man's land" he was struck through the heart by a piece of shrapnel from the enemy's shells.

As his Company Commander I wish to express my sympathy towards you in which all the other officers, N.C.O.'s and men join me. Your son was one of the most popular N.C.O.'s and he was admired for his efficiency and bravery, alike by the officers and men. He was one of the most capable sergeants that the battalion has ever had, and his Colonel had only a few days before approved of a recommendation that Sergt. DeLaplante should receive a commission that I had submitted to him. Not only shall we feel his loss, but the whole country has been deprived of a very promising soldier.

That night he was given the best burial that circumstances permitted.

Any personal effects and back pay will be forwarded to you through the official channels.

I remain, yours very sincerely,

GEO. PEARKES, Major, O. C. C. Co.

Mr. DeLaplante also received the assurance of the sympathy of the King and Queen, and of the Minister of Militia and Prime Minister and members of the Government of Canada.

CO. SERGT.-MAJOR HARRY WILFORD, M.M.

DIRECTIONS AS TO THE SOLDIERS' VOTE

MILITARY ELECTORS

Every man in khaki in Canada and every discharged soldier, is vitally interested in the result of the election. Many inquiries have been made as to the method by which a soldier can obtain the vote.

Soldiers at the Front, men in training overseas, men in training in Canada, returned men — these and other classes are affected.

The military elector has had his case provided for in the Military Voters' Act passed at the last session of Parliament. He does not need to pay any attention to the ordinary proceedings. He does not need to bother whether his name is on the voters' list or not.

The Military Voters' Act is intended to cover the whole class comprised in the term "Military Electors." caving aside the application of the Act overseas, the question arises: What soldiers in Canada will vote? Where and how are they to exercise the privilege?

Military Electors.

The "Military Electors" in Canada will comprise various classes. There is one necessary qualification common to all. They must be British subjects. They need not be ordinarily resident in Canada; they need not be of age. They include all those who have been enrolled in the Canadian Expeditionary Force, the Royal Canadian Navy, the Canadian Militia on Active Service, or the Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserve. Men who have been enrolled while in Canada in the Royal British Flying Corps, Royal Naval Air Service, or Auxiliary Motor Boat Patrol Service also come under the provisions of the Act. It does not matter in what capacity the service has been rendered, and females are included as well as males. The "Military Electors" also covers one who has been honourably discharged from any one of the above forces.

To illustrate the above classification, the following may be particularly enumerated as eligible under this Act:

(1) Returned men, wheth still on duty, or in convalescent homes, or discharged from the service;

(2) Men in units for overseas, or discharged therefrom;

(3) Men on duty in the active Militia or who have been on duty and have been discharged.

(4) Men of the Canadian Navy or R.C.N.V.R.

(5) Military nurses.

Need Not Register.

Military electors as defined above do not need to register or to be added to the voters' lists being compiled at present. They come under the military system.

Presiding officers will be appointed for the various camps and other places necessary to take the votes.

All the voting of military electors in Canada will take place on Election Day, 17th December.

No registration is necessary for these military electors. The soldier, sailor, or nurse, as the case may be, will go to the most convenient military poll, apply to the Presiding Officer, and be required to sign a statement setting out the qualification necessary.

He is then given a ballot paper and may vote for the Government or Opposition, or other party in general, or for the particular candidate in his district by name. His vote is applied in the district indicated in his statement.

It is to be noted that [illegible] charged man who is resident within Canada comes within the term military elector and does not need to register, his method of voting is slightly different from the above described. If he is in his home district, and on the lists he should exercise his franchise in the ordinary way. If not, he can qualify himself to vote by taking an oath before the Returning Officer at the poll in the polling division where the voter resides and by showing his certificate of discharge from active service.

TORTURING, ITCHING ECZEMA.

Mrs. J. B. Horth, Pamphlet, Bonaventure Co., Que., writes:—"Thanks to Dr. Chase's Ointment I have been completely cured of that horrible disease eczema. I was held as if in prison from going among other people, for I was ashamed of the raw, flaming sores. Doctors could do nothing for me and I was almost desperate with suffering when I began to use Dr. Chase's Ointment. In one month I was completely cured and think that this was little short of a miracle."

The Goddess That Betrays

By R. P. P. ROWE

Since the beginning of the war Germany has committed a number of actions which are regarded as immoral by, at least, the majority of the civilized world. Apart from the question of their immorality, they provide a field of interesting speculation. Their justification, if justification it can be, was expediency. Have they been expedient?

The world wisdom of the first of these actions; the repudiation of solemn treaty obligations, and the brutal invasion of Belgium, can hardly be proved or disproved at the present time. It must be left for the judgment of history to determine. Nevertheless it can be argued with some reason that, if Germany had trusted to her theory that no fortress of the pre-war type, could offer a prolonged resistance to guns of the largest calibre, she might have won rapid entry into France without adopting a policy which was bound to alienate the sympathies of every neutral nation. The policy which she regarded as expedient did more than this. It forced England into the ranks of her enemies, and has since made peace impossible at a time when she is desperately in need of it.

With regard to the many other actions of Germany which have been declared immoral by public opinion outside the Central Powers, there is no need, in judging their expediency, to wait for the verdict of history. It is remarkable that almost without exception they have already proved themselves to have been inexpedient. Even if we pass over the odium which Germany has incurred by these actions, the effect of which is likely to be felt for decades if not for generations, it can readily be shown that they have brought her no material advantage. To take only a few chief instances, what has Germany gained by the use of poisonous gas, or by the use of Zeppelins, aeroplanes and submarines for the purpose of civilian destruction? It is a question well worth consideration.

The device of poisonous gas can be dismissed in a few words. Clearly it discredited Germany to an unbearable extent and brought her no advantage. Her enemies, in self-defence, were forced to adopt the same method and, since their material resources are the larger, Germany has found herself the worse off for the bargain.

When we come to Zeppelins, a new stage is reached in the evolution of modern war. The morality of making war on civilian populations is a problem which does not enter into the present speculation, but it should be pointed out that Germany by her use of Zeppelins against civilians promoted a tendency which may eventually alter the whole character of the present struggle. If the Entente Powers should be forced to accept the principle that the civilian is fair game, it cannot be doubted which side will be the greater sufferer from the results that it must involve.

The Zeppelins themselves are a past incident. From every point of view they were a failure. They were built at huge expence, caused sufficient annoyance to promote recruiting in Great Britain at a time when recruiting wanted just this fillip, were responsible for on serious damage, and were subsequently proved so easily destructible as to be useless.

But Germany has not been content with this failure to prick her enemies into retaliation against her own population. She has gone a step further in her deliberate effort to bring about this consummation, by the use of aeroplanes for a similar purpose. This last practice, although little damage has yet been caused by it, has proved that aeroplanes, putting morality aside, may in the future be used with effect for such destruction. But if it becomes necessary, and it may, well [illegible] so to adopt this new method of injury as an adjunct to more normal warfare, to which side will advantage accrue? There can be no doubt about the answer. The resources of the Entente Powers, including America, are vastly greater than those of the Central Powers, and aeroplanes can in consequence, be produced and manned in far larger numbers by the former.

Germany, with a population already miserable and discouraged is daring her enemies to take a step which would in all probability destroy finally the endurance and spirit of her people. Against such retribution her own offensive action could avail little, the preponderance of air-power against her increases daily. Of all the logical policies that Germany has adopted in the name of expediency this seems the most inexpedient. (America alone is building a fleet of 20,000 aeroplanes, and British production exceeds that of Germany and will still further exceed it).

Nevertheless, the indiscriminate attack on merchant ships at sea by the use of submarines comes near to it for lack of wisdom. (Quem Deus vult [illegible] dementat.) It was a design clearly calculated to rouse the hostility of all neutrals. It so roused the hostility of the largest of all world States that she is no longer neutral but is putting her huge resources into the field to complete the destruction of Kaiserdom. As for the avowed aim of the policy, the reduction of Great Britain to starvation, it has proved a complete failure. The submarine menace is already met and coped with. Incidentally, the plan is likely to have a further effect disadvantageous to Germany. It has promoted shipbuilding in Great Britain and America on a scale hitherto unknown. After the war, Germany will contend commercially against mercantile marines far greater in proportion to her own than would otherwise have existed.

The above demonstrates the remarkable extent to which Germany, in making only expediency, has been led [illegible] action. That seems almost a fatality about it. Expediency [illegible] that she is not even fickle, and that some higher law in the direction of human affairs dooms her votaries to failure. At any rate expediency has betrayed Germany, and it is that she already proved disastrous, and that threaten her with more dire disaster in the future. It is unnecessary to labour the simple old axioms, telling us that honesty is, apart from anything else, the best policy, and that [illegible] in the end one out, in one fashion or another. However, the cards may fall, the player who takes account of evil as money is inevitable and of necessity a loser.

RAIN ADDS TO THE SUFFERING OF UNHAPPY HALIFAX

Fifty Mile Gale Crushed Improvised Shelter—Streets Turned Into Rivers

Canadian Press Despatch:

HALIFAX, N.S., Dec. 10. —With a warm rain turning the snow-white streets of Halifax into rivers of slush and debris, sailors, soldiers and civilians to-day were still labouring in the city of the dead, as dawn broke. They had spent another night of misery in a howling wind. The city is practically under martial law, behind a cordon of blue and olive drab searchers working in the blackened ruins.

The night was spent in a howling gale that followed the blizzard of Saturday. With it came a rain that increased the suffering, as tents fell and the wet cold was driven through the improvised shelters. Hundreds who had found shelter in tents were forced into the open again as a fifty mile gale crushed their quarters.

Relief units from Massachusetts and Maine which have arrived, have been assigned quarters and are working heroically.

Bellevue, formerly the residence of the British general commanding the Halifax garrison before Canada took over the defence of the Dominion, has been handed over to the Massachusetts Red Cross. One hundred and fifty patients can be cared for there. The State has offered 400,000 feet of beaver board, ten tons of putty, 200,000 panes of glass and 100,000 rolls of tarred paper. Maine sent [illegible] blank is and has crews of carpenters and other workers ready to assist in rebuilding the city.

Vladivostok Declares For Independence

Provisional Government Has Been Formed and Ultimatum is Sent On

(Special to the Toronto Star and the Peterborough Examiner).

(By Ralph Turner).

TORONTO, Dec. 10.—Vladivostok, Russia's principal Asiatic port and the gateway for the Transiberian Railway, and Amur Province have both declared their independence, according to reports received to-day. A provisional government has been established. The Ministry for the new republic met and sent notification of the sections' independence to the other self-governing districts of Russia, it was stated. Official circles in Tokio had not received any formal confirmation advices on the report, but it was generally accepted as true here. The loss of Vladivostok to the Bolsheviki or to any other Russian faction not representative of the whole nation is a serious one to the Allies, because of the vast quantity of supplies and munitions stored there. Anarchy is reported throughout this part of Asiatic Russia.

Third Anniversary of the Immaculate Conception Church

The third anniversary of the opening of the Church of the Immaculate Conception was observed yesterday. In the evening Bishop O'Brien celebrated Pontifical Vespers, and Rev. Father McAuley of Ennismore, preached. High mass was celebrated in the morning by Rev. Dean McColl, assisted by Rev. Father McGuire and Mr. M. O'Brien. During the year there have been 36,000 communions, a considerable increase over those of the previous year. Bishop O'Brien congratulated the pastor and congregation upon the progress it had maintained and incidentally expressed the hope that the bazaar this week would be a complete success.

Trains Were Hours Late

Saturday night's snow storm tied up the railway trains of Ontario and delayed traffic through Peterborough for hours. The G.T.R. express was held up at Port Hope by the retarded connections and ran into a succession of heavy barrages, arriving here at midnight, seven hours late. The train from Toronto panted into the station about two o'clock after a long struggle with drifts the wind had piled deep in the cuts. At Toronto, Belleville and Port Hope the train connection shedules were badly disarranged. Sunday morning, ploughs went over the local lines and freight moved freely.

On the C.P.R., the local did not arrive until after eleven o'clock and the midnight was about half an hour late.

In the meantime the Peterborough Radial Railway Company was fighting one of the worst blows in years. At three o'clock all the cars were running smoothly, but trouble brewed in the next hour, and at four o'clock most of the routes were in difficulty. Mr. Arthur Armstrong pulled out the sweeper on the first S.O.S., and went over the George street line, and then turned to the C.G.E., where one car was stalled near the end of the line. Later in the evening the storm abated permitting the sweeper's crew to keep the lines entirely open.

CHARGE OF ARSON WAS DISMISSED

The charge of arson against Walter Varty, of Havelock, was dismissed this morning, when no evidence was offered by the Crown. He is not yet clear of the court, however as there is another charge of failing to comply with the Military Service act. Bail was fixed at $2,000.

AN EXPLANATION

Mrs. R. Gliddon has received the following wire from Ada M. Wagner, manager of the Cherniavisky Canadian tour:

Regarding Allen's letter, Examiner, Mr. Cherniavisky has evidence he paid bills sent him by Mr. Allen, but paid Mr. Allen no commission as concert was cancelled. Cancellation was fault of Grand Trunk as train was three hours late. No connection. Please print this, Examiner, to-day."

Thanks Extended

Owing to the fact that the Great War Veterans Association will shortly be installed in their new quarters in the Royal Bank building, the Regent, officers and members of the Otonabee Chapter, I.O.D.E., desire to take this opportunity to publicly thank Mr. Thomas Barrie for his kindness and generosity during the past nine months.

When the Veterans first wished to secure a club room, the members of the Otonabee Chapter felt that it was only right and just that something should be done for our returned men to give them comfortable temporary quarters. Mr. Barrie then generously offered the Chapter two rooms in his building absolutely free of any rent, for the use of the Association. These were fitted up for the men a comfortably as could be managed at that time, and have been in use as club rooms since last March.

The Otonabee Chapter now extends hearty good wishes to the members of the Association and hopes they will have very many happy hours in their new rooms.

TO-DAY'S WAR NEWS

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

PETROGRAD, December 10.—The executive committee of the peasants' Council to-day issued a manifesto repudiating an armistice with Germany and strongly appealing to the people against the Bolsheviki, and against a separate peace with Germany.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, December 10.—The counter revolt in southeastern Russia under the leadership of Generals Kaledines, Dutoff and Korniloff, apparently is aimed at seizing authority in that region and in cutting off the food supplies from Siberia. According to the proclamation of the Bolsheviki government, General Kaledine's forces are menacing Ekaterinoslav, Kharkavo and Moscow. In the Province of Orenburg the Bolsheviki have been overthrown by General Dutoff.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON (Official), December 10.—A raid undertaken by the Germans last night southwest of LaBassee was driven off before reaching our lines.

Another party of the enemy which attacked one of our posts east of Klein Zellebeke, was repulsed with loss to the assailants.

(By Ed. L. Keen.)

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, December 10.—Premier Lloyd George will respond to the recently increasing popular demand for a clear explicit definition, and an up-to-date elucidation of the Allie's war aims. There is every reason to believe he will make such a statement within the next few days. It may come in the House of Commons on Wednesday.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, December 10.—The Bolsheviki are gaining control of the Siberian Railway and are likely to reach Harbin, according to word reaching here to-day. The control of Harbin and the Trans-Siberian Railway system would open the vast resources of Manchuria and Siberia to German influence in the event of separate peace.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

BERLIN, Sunday, via London.—A supplementary statement issued by the German War Office to-night reads:

"There is nothing of importance to report from any theatre."

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS (Official), December 10.—The artillery fighting was violent for a time in Alsace and also on the right bank of the Meuse, in the region of Chambrette, say official reports to-day. An enemy raid against our small posts south of Corbeny was repulsed.

Union Government Still Lavishly Catering To The Interests Of The "Big Interests"

Large Contracts For Munitions to Financial Magnates Close to the Government

The people of Canada owe a debt of gratitude to the magnificent services of the London Advertiser in the exposure of the Liberal newspaper conspiracy of misrepresentation that is now going on, and their publication, on December 5th, of the telegram sent by G. Fred Pearson, of the Halifax Chronicle, to J. N. Atkinson, of the Toronto Star, voicing the that the vote of soldiers overseas was going against the Union-Borden Government, and calling for countervailing action.

This telegram indicated that the soldier vote overseas is not in favour of the Union Government. All the cables of the Canadian Press Association (subsidized by the Dominion Government to the extent of $50,000 yearly) are not being published by the press. On Saturday, the 1st December, the Canadian Press Association sent a despatch stating that Sir Arthur Currie, "who was in command of the overseas forces at the front," had been relieved owing to the heavy losses suffered by the Canadians at Paschendaele. This report was suppressed, and the Star and other Unionist newspapers have been stating that he is now taking a rest and endeavouring to make the people believe that he has not been relieved of his command.

Sir Arthur Currie seems to have been playing politics for the Union Government, and the newspapers have been advertising and publishing urgent messages from him in reference to reinforcements and been asking that the Union Government be supported and assisted. Fortunately the new arrivals from England, who know the facts, have stated that he has been relieved from command, and it is believed in many quarters that it was largely due to the fact that, under the King's regulations no officer is allowed to dabble in politics. Has the Unionist Government, by its eager desire to be re-elected, been depriving Canadians of the services of a good General at the front?

Many people in Canada do view with apprehension the close association that has existed in the last few years between the Honourable Newton Wesley Rowell and Sir Joseph Flavelle. The fact that Sir Joseph Flavelle is still the chairman of the Munitions Board is very strong evidence that he has many stauch supporters in the present Union Government, and it is thought that Mr. Rowell is his strongest supporter. It is known that Sir Joseph Flavelle has been a large contributor to Mr. Rowell's campaign funds during the last local election, and that for many years he has been contributing to Mr. Rowell's funds for different purposes, and this association is looked upon by the people with great suspicion. The people are particularly anxious that the influence of Sir Joseph Flavelle in any Government should be destroyed, and Mr. Rowell's close association with him in a large measure result in his defeat and the defeat of the Union Government.

During the last week Orders-in-Council have been passed showing that six millions have been paid to Mackenzie and Mann in connection with the British Columbia end of the colossal liabilities forced upon the people of Canada by the Canadian Northern Railway legislation last session. In addition to this, the Government has paid to the Canadian Bank of Commerce within the past week twenty-five millions in liquidation of the liabilities of the Canadian Northern Railway to the Canadian Bank of Commerce. The significance of these payments on the eve of an election and in the absence of the Governor-General from Ottawa require no comment, and is a strong indication that the Unionist Government believes that on the 17th day of December they will be defeated at the polls; but in the meantime they are anxious to make these payments to their friends in liquidation of these claims.

Prior to the dreadful calamity at Halifax, a contract was signed by the Government with Messrs. Stewart, Farquier and Company, without competition or tenders, in connection with the Halifax terminals, amounting to thirty-two million dollars. Mr. Stewart, of this firm, was a member, of Foley, Welch and Stewart, who were involved in the British Columbia investigation. They were also contractors for the Saguenay and Lake St. John railway, and have a claim against the Government for fifteen millions, still unsettled.

The Government this week also gave the Universal Tool Steel Company large contracts for munitions. The officers and directors of this company are as follows: President, Sir Donald Mann; secretary-treasurer F. H. Phippen; directors—Sir William Mackenzie, S. C. Wood (a member of the firm of Rowell, Reid, Wood and Wright, Toronto); D. A. Cameron (manager Canadian Bank of Commerce, Toronto), and W. T. Clancey (general manager of the Canadian Securities Company, Toronto). These indicate the hollow claims that are being made by this Government pleading economy at this time.

Many of The Victims Were Buried To-day

Canadian Press Despatch:

HALIFAX, Dec. 10.—In Fairview Cemetery, where lie the victims of the Titanic and Burgoyne, great marine disasters of the past, many of the dead from last Thursday's disaster were laid to rest in great long trenches this morning. General services were held for all denominations. A number of dead soldiers were given nameless graves, it being impossible to identify them as, being on home service, there were no discs. Large numbers of civilians were also interred, unidentified. Relief parties continue to pour in from all directions. Fine weather to-day is assisting in the search of the ruins, and many more bodies have been taken out. Scores of reported missing have turned up and rejoined their families.

"Safe" Wires Petty Officer Albert Miller

Mrs. Miller, 382 McDonnel street, received a telegram from her husband, Petty Officer Albert Miller, of the Canadian Navy, who has been on duty at Halifax, stating that he is safe. There has been much uneasiness concerning Petty Officer Miller since the news of the disaster, as he was stationed right in the danger zone. He is the only sailor member of the local branch of the Great War Veterans.

Red Cross Considering Aid For The Victims

The Peterborough branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society are meeting to-day to consider what aid they can render to the stricken people of Halifax.

TWO COLLEGIATE BOYS IN STORM

Two Collegiate boys, "Doc" Young and Minto Brownscombe, skated from Lakefield around to Buckhorn Lake on Saturday in an endeavour to make the circuit to Chemong. They took to the ice at Katchewanooka, and went up through Young's Point to Clear Lake, to Burleigh and Buckhorn, where the blizzard overtook them. They had dinner at the Brownscombe cottage, having packed their "eats." They struggled through the storm until they reached the Indian village at Curve Lake, where they had supper, and afterwards pushed on through Ennismore to Chemong, where they spent the night, arriving home on Sunday morning. It was a trying experience in its last stretches, but the boys fought the storm where it exerted its full force in the open country places. Other youths of the Collegiate had planned to accompany them, but of those who had talked of the outing, only two reported at the G.T.R. station at 7 a.m. on Saturday.

THE WEATHER

The storm of Saturday afternoon and evening, and Sunday, was a good example of real Canadian winter weather. With the thermometer not far above zero, the strong wind prevailing searched every crevice of the warmest dwelling.

Lowest temperature: Saturday morning, 1 below zero; Sunday, 6 above; Monday, 3 below.—W.P.

Skips Will Select Rinks To-night

The Curling Rink has re-opened its cheery doors for another season, and this morning Mr. Angus McIntosh was fast building up a sound base for the playing sheets. The water froze almost as it fell, and at that rate the ice will probably be ready whenever the players desire it. The downstairs "gallery" has been relaid with a hardwood floor, but otherwise there are no outstanding changes.

A general meeting of the members will be held to-night to ballot on eleven applications, and the skips will get together afterwards to select their rinks for the season. Among the applications are several from old members who didn't play last winter. The others represent some of the new blood that will be infused into the club.

TO ORGANIZE HOCKEY TEAM

There will be a meeting to-night at 8 o'clock in the Empress Hotel to organize a junior O.H.A. hockey team. All players and fans in the city who are interested are invited to attend.

Gunner Graham Safe

Mrs. J. G. M. Wilson received a telegram from her brother, Gunner M. Gorham, of the 74th Battery, who was at Halifax, to the effect that he came through the terrible disaster safely, and that all the Peterborough boys were safe. Gunner Gorham lost all his belongings.

SUNDAY MORNING GAMBLERS FINED

Constables Deannard and Blade raided a Water street house about three o'clock on Sunday morning and arrested four men who were deep into a game of poker, unconscious of the fact that the police had been watching them. This morning Magistrate Dumble "tilited" them $7.60 each.

aground, but seemingly not in bad shape; lay the Imo, the Norwegian Belgian relief ship which collided with the French boat with its dreadful cargo. To the left a few sunken piles, and one distorted steamer slammed bodily against a pile of wreckage which had once been a dock, was all that was left of piers six, seven, eight and nine. To those piers had come the fire chief and his deputy and men when the alarm of fire was turned in, and to the same spot hurried Reporter Ronayne of the Chronicle, who had gossiped cheerily with me in my room in the Queen's Hotel when the Prime Minister opened his campaign in Halifax the other week. Soldiers hurried to the scene, how many I do not know, but I have talked with one man who told me he and others had found at one point at least a score of bodies of men who, though stripped of clothing and in some instances even of flesh, were quite evidently military men, because of the scraps of khaki rags in their immediate vicinity. It was indeed a rendezvous with death, and death overtook even the man who turned in the alarm."

AN APPEAL TO EMPLOYERS

The Local Branch of the Soldiers' Aid Commission is interested in the welfare of the men returned from service abroad, and especially in assisting such men to find employment after their return to civil life.

With the closing down of outside work and occupations, it is vitally necessary that other forms of employment be found for the many who have and who are returning to the city. It may be assumed that openings will occur, but it is known that these may not come in sufficient number to relieve the situation.

So the Soldiers' Aid Commission appeals to all employers of labour, either in groups or individually, to look over the situation, and if at all practicable, try and make openings for the men returned. While there are those who have some definite experience in occupations and trades, the larger number have been used to general work, and cannot readily fit themselves into certain work in a certain trade. But as being willing to catch hold and work, we ask you to be so good as to make opportunity to provide openings.

If you will be thoughtful so as to keep in touch with the Secretary of the Local Branch, Mr. F. H. Dobbin, City Building (telephone 261), and make your wants known, men will be asked to report to you in the hope of securing engagements. In communicating your wants, please try and define the kind of work open so that some selection, if possible, may be made so far as regards previous experience of the applicant.

You might ask your managers to bear what has been written in mind and try and assist as noted above. And this is important, should you engage any man sent to you, notify the Secretary of such fact, that others may not be sent to look for a position that has been already filled. You will appreciate the value of this suggestion.

By order of the Branch,
F. H. Dobbin, Secretary.

Two Mass Meetings On Wednesday

Afternoon Meeting at Three O'clock Evening Meeting at 8 O'clock

There will be two mass meetings of the electors in the Grand Opera House on Wednesday next, afternoon and evening. The afternoon meeting will be held at 3 o'clock, at which the rights and wrongs of the soldier's family will be discussed.

Mr. S. W. Jacobs, K.C., and Mr. Hall will address both meetings.

Mr. Jacobs is one of the most brilliant and entertaining speakers in Canada. It is important to hear both sides of the question discussed before voting, and everyone is invited to hear the addresses.

Editor, Examiner:

Sir,—The 93rd Band instruments were subscribed for by the citizens of Peterborough for the use of men who had enlisted for overseas service. The fact that the Great War Veterans' Association have stated their intention to form a band, puts any other claim for the present out of the question. The Peterborough Operatic and Dramatic Society, who worked for and contributed $200 towards the purchase of these instruments, discussed the matter last Saturday night, and hope that the Council will hand the instruments over to the G.W.V.A.—Yours truly,

Richard J. Devey,
Director of the Operatic and Dramatic Society.
December 10th, 1917.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Kindly insert the following, which should have been in Saturday's paper, but the writer was unable to send it:

A word regarding the letter published in your paper on Friday of Mr. Burnham's to a soldier's mother.

A friend of the soldier's mother asked her if they might have the letter. She certainly did not understand for what purpose, and very much regrets parting with it, and sincerely hopes it has not done him any harm.

The soldier's mother wrote to Mr Burnham about getting the separation allowance, her son having joined more than two months., and she had not received any. Mr. Burnham knew of an arrangement the City had made some years ago, allowing her $4.00 a month, also wood and coal. As soon as her son joined this was stopped. She told him of it, thinking he might be able to do something.

She certainly considered his reply most insulting, but she does not wish it to do him any harm in the coming election, for she is a strong supporter of the Borden Governmnet, and would think it an insult to her boys to vote otherwise.

A Soldier's Mother.

The independent electors owe a duty to the soldiers' families to see that they are not tyrannized over by Mr. Burnham, and to see they are not insulted by him. The soldier's family must not feel they will lose their allowance if they vote against Mr. Burnham. The ballot is secret, and Mr. Burnham will never know how any woman votes.

Mr. Hall is pledged to see the soldier's pay and pension is increased, and the allowance to the soldier's family is made larger and more generous.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—Last Sunday morning I went early to Knox Church, before the people began to come for service, and in walking around I saw two things that surprised me. First, the names of those who had gone from that Church to help in this awful struggle—over 100—115, I believe; and to learn that one of our number could put those names in such splendid shape. Why do they not with so many others, succeed?

Moses was a wonderful man. (None greater). He saw the land, but was not permitted to go over. Why? On account of sin. Now, after his death, the Lord appeared to have a quiet talk with Joshua and promised him great things. There shall not any man be able to stand before thee all the days of thy life. With, also, directions. But one thing was emphasized. This Book of the Law shall not depart out of thy mouth, but thou shalt meditate therein day and night; that thou mayest observe to do according to all that is written therein, etc., and for a time he was wonderfully successful, but afterwards, a signal defeat with the loss of 36 men.

Look at the humiliated state of Joshua and others, as given in Joshua 7 and 6 to 9 verses, and then the Lord speaks: Israel hath sinned; and they have also transgressed my covenant which I commanded them; verse 11. Now note how careful Jushua was to have this sifted out and settled first before going any further, and how honest Achan was when he was fairly cornered, and how stern Joshua was in his dealings.

After all, is appears a good deal like man in our day, where self rules to the shutting out of orders from head-quarters—The Bible. To covet or desire the wedge of gold. How does this compare with what you newspaper men have been showing us can be done in this our day?

Oh, why all this great quantity of amusements in those solemn times. Do they tend to the study of God's Holy Word? I trow not.

Tens of thousands of Canadian fiddlers are amusing themselves to-day as if nothing were happening. Said Rev. William Pattersan, .D.D., in Cook's Church, last evening, in the course of a scathing sermon, on the Canadian fiddler:

It is no harm to play the fiddle, said the preacher, in ordinary times. They tell us there is no hell; but if there is not, there ought to be. Where will these profiteers go if there is no hell? These magnificent men who preside over the food trusts, who are very generous and gvie thousands to the Church while men are dying by the thousands on the battlefield. These men are cornering foodstuffs. If these men are fit for Heaven, then you will have to cut the 15th Psalm out of the Book.

When Dr. Gordon was here some few years ago he stood in the front of George Street Methodist Church and said there were 967 ministers in the Old Land that had stock in breweries or interested in other ways in the liquor business. Those men stand in the sacred desks and then take revenue from this source. I ask you how do these things pull together? I honestly do not know.

Isaiah speaks very plain in Chap. 1st, but our authorities do not speak of much change on this question there. Are not our yung men influenced to help sustain this awful business. And can our Heavenly Father—a Holy God—look with favour on this damnable business.

Yours truly,
J. H. TAYLOR.

Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—It is with feelings of the greatest reluctance and strictly in self-defence that the members of the 57th Regiment Band are compelled to enter a protest against the slurs and falsehoods published locally under anonymous signatures, and also that of the secretary of the G.W.V.A. To refute these, we propose submitting to the City Council and the public generally a brief resume of our war record up to date, and reasons why we are entitled to the use of the old 93rd Band instruments, and to say, after perusal, you will agree with the statement that there is no other local organisation, numbers considered, civil or military, that can show any better achievements:

(1) In the matter of voluntary enlistments, twenty-six of our active and ex-members went overseas. The following list comprises the Honour Roll:

Sergt. Grange
Sergt. Hughes
Corp. Chambers
Pte. Dyer
Pte. Wood
Pte. Gibson
Pte. Doughty
Pte. Gilbert
Pte. Irwin
Pte. Naples
Pte. Grange
Pte. Smith
Pte. Barnes
Pte. Tamlin
Pte. Loader
Pte. Browne
Pte. Loader
Pte. Dyer
Pte. Dalton
Pte. Wilcox
Pte. Logan
Pte. Turner
Pte. Dyer
Pte. Newhall
Pte. White

(2) Our records show that we have filled, entirely free of charge, fifty-nine patriotic engagements since the commencement of the war. These covered patriotic concerts, garden parties and assemblies, Home Guard parades, parades of soldiers leaving for or returning from the Front, and military funerals. In connection with this latter class of work we would recall the reference of the secretary of the G.W.V.A. to the alleged cupidity of our organisation, notwithstanding the fact that the day previous to the appearance of his communication we had played at the funeral of a comrade of his entirely free of charge, and at a loss to the members in time alone of not less than $50. Such marked ingratitude we feel certain will not be endorsed by the G.W.V.A. as a whole.

(3) The cost of the 93rd instruments was covered chiefly by public subscription, and every member of the 57th Band contributed—one donation alone being equivalent to $55.

The achievements of the 93rd Band, both at home and on foreign service, have been lauded to the skies by these anonymous writers, and while approving, we must point out that the 57th also has an enviable record. It has been in continuous existence under one name or another for considerably over half a century and has won many honours during this long period. Under Bandmaster Rackett, over fifty years ago, it was known all over the Province as an efficient organisation, while under Bandmaster Finch Miller it repeatedly won first-class honours at Dominion and Provincial band contests. In recent years, under Prof. Gliddon, the organisation reached such a high state of efficiency that a week's engagement at Scarborough Beach, where only first-class professional bands are employed, was filled so satisfactorily that another week's engagement was offered. This continued general efficiency is marked by yearly engagements at Canada's great Industrial Exhibition.

To sum up: We think we have made it clear that we have as good a war record as any organisation in this city; we are organised over fifty years ago, and have continued to exist up to the present time without a break; we and our many friends helped to pay for these instruments and we are first, last, and always, a representative Peterborough Band. Others come into existence and pass away, but the old 57h has always maintained its organisation. It takes a lot of money to run a band, and the G.W.V.A. have not half a dozen bandsmen in their ranks at the present time, while the 57th has thirty-seven members, and are badly in need of instruments. We can put the entire outfit into use at once and thus save deterioration. Another year without use will scrap the whole lot.

During the existence of the 93rd Band, the 57th assisted them in every way, not only financially, but by the loan of instruments, music, etc., and now that they have ceased to exist we claim the right to have the use of the instruments.

Up to the present we have filled every demand made on our services by the G.W.V.A. gratis, and are prepared to continue this service. We have the highest regard for the patriotism and self-sacrifice of the members of the G.W.V.A., and feel it an honour to place our services at their disposal.

Yours, sincerely,
J. A. Hooper,
For Members of 57th Regt. Band.

Music & Drama

"LILAC TIME."

On Saturday afternoon and evening, Peterborough theatre-goers had another opportunity of witnessing "Lilac Time." This cleverly executed production is beautifully staged. The cast is particularly good, and all the parts are accurately produced. The play is full of interesting situations, with appropriate music, and a capable company to give the characters life.

BOLSHEVIKI TO AGREE ON COALITION

(By Joseph Shaplen.)

Naparanda, Dec. 10—The Bolsheviki are ready to agree to a coalition government, according to word brought from Petrograd by courier to-day. Returns from the Russia-wide election showed the Trotsky-Lenine government that they had been overwhelmingly rejected by the Russian people at large. Their majorities in Petrograd and other large cities were completely reversed in the rural communities. Faced with this knowledge the Bolsheviki, it was learned, had agreed to submit to the authority of a central committee of Workmen and Soldiers and Peasants combined with representatives of other Russian political parties and trades.

The Capture Of Jerusalem

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Dec. 10.—In sentimental and romantic aspect the capture of Jerusalem far exceeds even the fall of the fable crowned Bagdad. The modern City of Jerusalem contains about sixty thousand inhabitants, and is the home of pestilence-fifth and fevers, but in historic interest it naturally surpassed to the Christian world all other places in the world's history.

General Sir Edmund Henry Allenby, victor of Jerusalem, was transferred to the command of the British forces in Egypt which have conducted the Palestine campaign, in June of this year. He was in command of the third British army on the western front during 1914, and ahead of this army, General Allenby commanded the British right wing in the battle of Arras, beginning on Easter Monday of this year.

HEROIC STAND IS MADE BY BRITISH

(By William Philip Simms.)

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, Dec. 10. — One small group of British Tommies held a whole German division at bay in one twist of the great Cambrai battle. The story did not come out in its full heroic details until to-day. In the deep dryed of the Nord Canal east of Mouevres, this little group of British made one of the finest stands of the war. As the Germans poured into this miniature Culebra cut the British surged forward. Around a slight curve they hurled bombs and closed with the enemy in a hand-to-hand scrimmage of bayonet, bombs, sticks, clubs and fists. The Germans were unable to stand the gruelling man to man fight. They retired. The British went right on. They took two heavy howitzers and two 77's, dragging them back to a strategic point.

BIG BAZAAR IS OPENED

The Bazaar under the auspices of the Church of the Immaculate Conception was formally opened this morning, and judging by the large number who attended during the day, bids fair to be an enormous success.

Artistically decorated booths, splendid music, and a host of pretty girls in attendance, the Lyceum will no doubt be a centre of attraction for the entire week. Everything can be obtained, and the hopeless problem of the Christmas shopper of what to get may be solved by one visit to the rooms. Candy, the most alluring boudoir caps, embroidery of every description, pictures, bags, even the "sensible" articles, such as aprons, are to be had, and a wider range for choice could scarcely be found.

The most wonderful pieces of handwork have been contributed by the Sisters.

The Luncheon.

TELL OF HORRORS OF THE EXPLOSION

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

TRURO, N.S., Dec. 10.—Expressing the belief that the death list at Halifax may mount higher than the estimated 2,000, refugees arriving here from Halifax to-day, told of scenes of death in the devastated city. The Richmond Printing Company's stone building collapsed, and thirty girls were burned in the ruins. The Hillis foundry collapsed, it was stated, and not an employee escaped. The Acadia sugar refinery ruins still holds unrecovered bodies, and cotton mills and breweries in the business section of Dartmouth have yet to be explored.

The miraculous escape fo a little six year old boy was related by survivors. He was found alive, pinioned in the wreck of his home between the bodies of his father and mother. He had spent a day and a night there, but is recovering. Another refugee declared a woman gave birth to a child while being taken to a hospital on a cart. The baby lives; its mother is dead. Two babes, another refugee stated, were taken from a cradle alive. The body of their mother was crushed across the cradle.

Tiny lives were crushed out by the wholesale when the infants' home on Brunswick avenue collapsed. The coloured settlement at Richmond is wiped out. Fifty Indians at Tuft's College are missing.

In one operating room at Truro one surgeon removed thirty sightless eyes. One man walked into a dressing station carrying an eye in his hand and asked to have it replaced in the empty socket.

Superintendent Halliday of the Canadian Government Railways, and George Graham, manager of the I.C.A.R., were at the railway station in a private car. The car was demolished but the men only slightly hurt.

The Halifax gas plant is still out of commission and newspapers are all suspended. Five hundred injured and homeless are being cared for in Truro. Six of the refugees have died since.

A SMALL BLAZE.

Speeding up the Sunday morning fire caused what threatened to be a serious fire at the home of Mr. S. J. Lafferty, 473 Water Street, yesterday, at 8.30. Mr. Lafferty had lit his kitchen stove and neglected to turn off the draughts while he attended the furnace, and returned to find the stove red hot and burst. The timely arrival of the fire department arrested the blaze, and very little damage

People who have been suffering from backache, kidney trouble, rheumatic ailments, are sometimes under the impression that they will have to continue to suffer from these ailments and they will be unable to obtain relief. Headache, nervousness, soreness in the bones and limbs are frequently caused by poisonous gases being absorbed into the system and the kidneys are overtaxed in their effort to expel these gases. Dr. Ban[illegible]'s Kidney and Rheumatic Pills will prevent the formation of these poisonous gases, and a positive cure for kidney troubles, rheumatic ailments or any disease arising from a disordered condition of the kidneys. The manufacturers are so confident that these pills will do what we claim for them that your dealer is authorized to refund your money if they do not give you satisfaction. HEAVY SNOW IN HALIFAX ELECTRIC POWER IS OFF RELIEF WORK RETARDED

Search For Dead Has to Be Suspended—Ice Covers Ground. Burials Difficult, But Must Not Be Delayed For Fear of Outbreak of Epidemic.

HALIFAX, N.S., Dec. 11.—This city, struggling to its feet after the terrible blow it received last Thursday when the munition ship Mont Blanc exploded in the harbour, and after suffering a blizzard and a wind and rain storm, was subjected to another climatic ordeal yesterday, when it began to snow heavily. Relief operations, which had got into full swing, were again greatly retarded, while the work of searching the ruins for dead had to be suspended. To add to the confusion the electric power went off in a portion of the city.

A regiment of business and professional men was set at work digging graves for the 1,200 bodies recovered from the ruins made by the explosion last Thursday.

Ice covered the frozen ground and the job was a hard one, but the physicians had issued a warning that it must not be delayed lest epidemic follow the horrors already experienced. This means an early end to efforts of identification and that thousands will rest in unnamed graves.

To visualize the devastated area, take a map of the city and draw a line through Russell street for the southern boundary, through Longard road for the western boundary, along Hammond Road on the north. The water front from the North Street railway station to Fairview station on the shore of Bedford Basin with Campbell street on the east, completes the limits of the section, the ruin of which is complete.

Consider that Halifax has a population of only 65,000, and one bitter task is confronting the living.

Twenty German residents were arrested yesterday upon a military order. After the party had been examined six were released. The officials stated that there was no unexplained significance in these arrests.

THE FATES WERE KIND TO PRIVATE FAIRBAIRN IN HIS HOME COMING

The home coming of Private Gordon Fairbairn of Lakefield must have been a far stronger scene than any he had pictured. Shell shocked, paralyzed on one side and with a deep dent on one side of his head, he arrived in the city from Kingston after hours of delay. Several Lakefield men who were returning home, chanced to meet him, and after midnight, arranged with Mr. Joseph Fontaine to motor them home. It was long after midnight when the taxi left Peterborough, and after struggling through deep drifts that threatened to bury the car, the little party reached home early Sunday morning. Private Fairbairn had to be assisted into his home, and was practically helpless from his wounds. A city official who heard of the case pointed out the pertinent question of what would have happened to this young soldier had he not chanced to meet Samaritans from his home town. It was after midnight when the train arrived but from all reports there had been absolutely no pre-arrangements to meet him here. Enquiry at the Mayor's Office indicated that the usual telegram had not preceded him.

MR. H. B. RYE'S REPLY TO LETTER FROM MR. F. J. BULLIED RE THE CONDITION OF MONAGHAN BRIDGES

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir.—Will you allow me a little space to reply to Mr. Bullied's letter re Monaghan bridges? I would just like to put the facts before the people, and let them judge for themselves as to whether I was right, or wrong, in objecting to the reports of the County Committee. With regard to Mr. Bullied's insinuations that no inspection was made by me, previous to June session, etc. Well, it is hardly worth considering but if he wants to investigate I would be delighted to have him or any other of the County do so. As to not knowing the Township from a County Bridges point of view, that is childish. When you are going through the Township of North Monaghan and you come to a dilapidated wooden structure, supposed to be a bridge, you can safely say, it must be a County bridge, for Monaghan Township is replacing bridges with permanent concrete structures. As to misrepresentation of Hogg's bridge, I will make the statement here that I do not know of any County bridge in North Monaghan, with the exception of Ward's, (draw Mr. Bullied's attention to the fact that this is another bridge that I know the name of) that would stand competent inspection. Let one of the Leonard Construction Co's. Road crushers go and take one round out of the County bridges in North Monaghan and I can assure you that the Clerk of the County would have the sorrowful duty of writing obituary notices for departed county bridges in Monaghan, with Mr. Bullied as chief mourner on account of the heavy expense that would be put on the County by giving anything to Monaghan; thereby depleting the Treasury to such an extent that Mr. Bullied would not be able to get any more bridges built in Chandos with approaches 300 feet long and 75 feet wide, flanked with heavy castelated stone work, the large stones for same having been hauled miles, regardless of expense.

Now, allow me to place before you the reports of County Committee, and also my remarks at the last November session. Mr. Walsh's report was a fair, impartial report; Mr. Bullied's was a deliberate and maliciously false report.

Report of Committee re Monaghan's bridges (Mr. Walsh, Chairman. Page 121, 1916):

Payne's Bridge.—We found one abutment in bad need of repair, and advised Mr. McIntosh to have same repaired. This has not been done.

Dunlop's Bridge.—We found the abutments in bad shape and no longer fit to carry the heavy traffic it is usually subject to, and would recommend new concrete abutments, placing the same covering on with some repairs to same. Not done yet.

Report January 29th, 1917. (Mr. Bullied, Chairman. Page 22, Clause 11):

Report June 23. Page 123. Clause 5:

Report November session:

We inspected Monaghan bridges, and found same in good repair and a credit to those under whose care they were.

Now, Mr. Warden, and gentlemen, I would draw your attention to the fact that in 1916, Mr. Walsh, as Chairman, reports bridges in bad state of repair and recommended repairs. At the January session I reported these bridges as being in bad repair, and, having no power to act, under recommendations given in Mr. McIntosh's term, and also on account of believing Payne's bridge to be in as bad state, if not worse, than Dunlop's, asked for a new inspection. This was not granted me until the June session. The Committee, with the addition of Mr. Darling and Mr. Walsh, to say nothing of the clerk, went on a "joy ride" with the avowed intention of inspecting Monaghan bridges. When we were at Payne's bridge I spoke to Mr. Walsh, ex-chairman, re new abutment, and also centre pier, and he said that he would have to stand by his report of last year, that he could not deviate in any way from that. There was no discussion on these matters either on the road, nor after returning, and I had no report of any kind until the November session, when it was too late to do any work. This report, in spite of the fact that Mr. Walsh, as chairman of 1916, could not change his views, and that no repairs of any kind have been made is:

That we, your committee, on inspecting Monaghan bridges, find Monaghan bridges in good repair, and a credit to those under whose charge they are." This, I take it, puts Mr. Walsh in the position, as Chairman of 1916 as having recommended repairs, where none were required. Reports like these are very misleading to the members of the County Council. We all cannot go and see, neither do we all know the bridges and other needed works in the County, and we depend largely on the reports of Committees for our guidance, and if we are to have conflicting (to say the least) reports of this kind, how, Mr. Warden, are we, the members of the County Council, to know how we are voting the expenditure of the public monies? I must say I consider the report as brought in this session, a great injustice to myself, the Township of Monaghan, whose ratepayers I represent, and also the other members of the County Council, who are not all conversant with the facts.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your courtesy, I am

Yours truly,
W. B. RYE,
Reeve, North Monaghan.

WANTS PIGS KEPT.

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 10.—Before the Rotary Club at noon to-day, S. E. Todd, chief of staff of the Food Controller's office, emphasizing the need for increased production in view of the alarming fact that the world's reserve supplies of food have been exhausted, and that nearly all countries are now living on production from season to season, declared that restrictive organisations of Canadian municipalities should be amended and the keeping of fowl in towns and cities be more generally permitted.

He also urged that in many cases it would be well to allow pigs to be kept where circumstances were comfortably situated, and urged the Rotary clubs of Canada to take this matter up with municipalities, and to educate public sentiment along these lines.

"In Germany," said Mr. Todd, "the people of the towns and cities alone are feeding four million pigs. Canada's total hog population to-day is only 3,500,000. German cities and towns thus account for 500,000 more hogs than are in all Canada."

By ARNOLD FREDERICKS

"Wasn't the woman who fainted the one you were after?" asked Grace.

"Yes, I'm sure she was. But unfortunately, she got away from me." He outlined to Grace the circumstances which led up to the woman's escape from the cab.

"You say she was a small, slight woman, with light hair?"

"Yes. Why?"

"Then I may know something about her."

"What?"

"I'll tell you. You remember that, when I came up to see you at the hotel yesterday afternoon, you were greatly put out, because you were afraid that I might have been followed, thus disclosing the name of your hotel to these people you were trying to avoid?"

"Yes, I was afraid of it. And the people in question did find out in some way where I had taken Miss Morton and her mother, as I discovered last night."

"They did not discover it through me."

"How do you know?"

"It came about in a curious way. After you told me over the telephone that you feared I might have been followed, I looked up the taxi driver who took me uptown, and asked him if anyone had tried to question him. I thought that possibly this hotel might have been watched, and if so, the person who was watching it might have noticed the number of my car, or the driver, and later, applied to him for information. I saw him as soon as I returned. No one had done so."

"That is all very well but they might have asked him and found out where he drove you later."

"They did ask him later. Why is it Richard, that you seem to forget that I have done detective work before, too? I suspected that he might be approached, and I subsidized him—gave him ten dollars and instructed him to let me know, in case anyone questioned him about me."

"Well, late yesterday afternoon, a woman answering the description that you gave, did apply to the cabman to find out where he had driven me. Naturally, he told her nothing. Then thinking I suppose that I might repeat my visit, she gave him five dollars, and told him to let her know in case I drove from here to another hotel. She figured no doubt, that being your wife, I was certain to go and see you."

"You did splendidly, Grace. Much better than I have done. But the important point is this: How was the cabman to let her know, and where? Did she give him her name and address?"

"She gave him a name and address. It is about that, that I wanted to see you."

"What was it?"

"Alice Watson, General Delivery. He was to write her a letter."

"An assumed name, of course," he said. "I'm afraid it won't be of much service to us."

"But why? I was going to write this woman a letter, giving her the name of some other hotel, anyone would do. Then she would come there to find you, we could have the cabman Leary, on watch to point her out, and in that way identify her and perhaps follow her to her home."

"It would have worked splendidly, my dear," he said, "except for the fact that in some way the woman has already discovered the name of my hotel. She will not go to the general delivery window at the post office to get it now, for she already knows it. And if she did she would realize as soon as she read your letter that you were not telling her the truth. Is that what you have been so busy about?" He glanced at the half finished letter that lay on his wife's desk.

"Yes."

Grace looked at him rather sheepishly. "I am terribly disappointed," she said. "I really hoped that I had discovered something that would help you."

She took from the desk the piece of paper that contained Alice Watson's address, and tearing it into pieces, dropped them slowly into the waste basket.

Duvall observed her action.

"What are you tearing up?" he asked.

"Oh, nothing. Merely the bit of paper that contained the woman's assumed name and address. It is of no use any longer." She glanced at a scrap of the paper, about half an inch square, that remained between her fingers, then started.

"There must have been something on the other side," she exclaimed. "There's a part of a name here—printed or engraved. It looks like 'Ford.'"

"Ford!" he exclaimed. "That's queer! We must get every scrap of that card at once."

It took the two of them several minutes to gather from the basket the tiny pieces into which Grace had torn the bit of paper. Then they fitted them together. Duvall saw at once, as soon as he had picked up the first scrap, that the address had been written on a card. When the several pieces had at last been assembled upon the top of the desk it became quite clear that the Watson name and address had been hasily scrawled, upon the torn half of a visiting card. Slowly and carefully Duvall turned the bits over. The words engraved upon the other side filled him with delight.

There were first the letters "cia," followed by the name "Ford." Beneath were two figures, a "6" and a "2," and after them, West 57th Street.

Duvall gazed at the result in surprise, then taking from his pocketbook the torn half of the card he had found the night before in the cab, he laid it beside the fragments on the desk. The two fitted exactly. The name and address were both plain. Evidently the woman who had interviewed the cabman, Leary, and the woman who had escaped from the cab were one and the same. She had taken a card from her purse, torn it in half, written the "Alice Watson" address that she gave the cabman on one half, and thrust the other back into her hand-bag. Later when Duvall had attempted to examine the contents of the bag, the bit of card had fallen to the floor. All that was sufficiently clear.

"Miss Marcia Ford," she exclaimed, "162 West 57th Street. Why, Richard, there is the name and address of the woman you want."

"It may be her address," her husband remarked gloomily, "but it certainly isn't her name."

"But—— Why not?"

"Because I saw Marcia Ford this morning, and she isn't the woman!"

Grace looked at him in astonishment.

"Are you sure?" she cried.

"Perfectly. Marcia Ford is not the one that we are after."

"Then how do you explain the woman having a card with that name on it?"

"I don't explain it — unless," he paused for a moment in thought. "Unless the Ford woman and the other woman are in league with each other, which might account for the latter having her card in her purse."

"And the address. Is that where Marcia Ford lives?"

"I don't know. It may be where they both live, for all I can tell. I only hope it is." He rose and took up his hat.

"Where are you going?" Grace asked.

"To 162 West 57th Street." Suddenly he took his wallet from his pocket, snatched a second card from it, and after looking at it for a moment, gave an exclamation of delighted surprise.

"What is?" Grace asked quickly. He thrust the card into her hand. Grace glanced at it without quite understanding what it meant.

"I don't see what you mean," she exclaimed.

"The thing is clear enough. The card I have just given you belongs to Miss Ruth Morton."

"I see that, but ——"

"Then surely you must see that Miss Morton's apartment also is on Fifty-seventh street, and just two doors from the address of Miss Marcia Ford."

CHAPTER XIII.

Duvall, upon discovering that the address of Miss Marcia Ford was on West 57th Street, but two doors from the building in which the Morton apartment was located, began to feel that he was on the right track. He had known, ever since his first day upon the case, that the mysterious messages found in Ruth Morton's bedroom had been placed there by some ingenious but perfectly natural means. The apparition that had so startled the girl upon her last night at the flat was capable, of course, of some reasonable explanation. When he left Mr. Baker in the morning, his plan had been to go to Mrs. Morton's apartment and once more investigate all possible means of entrance, hoping that by finding out how the messages were delivered he might be able to find out by whom. It was for this reason that he had asked Mrs. Morton for the key to the apartment.

Now the question seemed in a fair way to being answered for him. The fact that the girl's room was located so near to the Mortons' apartment could not be a mere coincidence. There must be between her room and the Morton flat some means of communication, although of what nature he could not now surmise. Fully convinced, however, that he might very soon find out he hurried up to Fifty-seventh Street, and walked along until he had reached No. 162.

The house was, like that which immediately adjoined the apartment building, an old fashioned one, of brown stone, with a high front stoop. It presented an appearance which if not exactly dilapidated, was yet in strong contrast to the neat appearance of its neighbors. A printed card in one of the lower front windows indicated that roomers were wanted.

It was just the sort of place that Duvall had expected to find—just the sort of place in which a working girl like Marcia Ford would live. Located in a very excellent neighborhood, surrounded by apartment buildings and houses of the best type, it still could afford to rent rooms at the moderate figure that one of her class could pay. He went up the front steps and rang the bell.

"Is Miss Ford in?" Miss Marcia Ford?" he asked.

The servant who came to the door, a neatly dressed German girl, shook her head.

"No; Miss Ford is not in. She usually gets back about half past six."

Duvall glanced at his watch. It was not yet three o'clock. He realized that he had a long wait before him.

"Will you leave any message?" the girl asked.

"No. It is not important. I will come back."

If Stomach Hurts Drink Hot Water

"If dyspeptics, sufferers from gas, wind or flatulence, stomach acidity or sourness, gastric catarrh, heartburn, etc., would take a teaspoonful of pure bisurated magnesia in half a glass of hot water immediately after eating, they would soon forget they were ever afflicted with stomach trouble, and doctors would have to look elsewhere for patients." In explanation of these words a well-known New York physician stated that most forms of stomach trouble are due to stomach acidity and fermentation of the food contents of the stomach combined with an insufficient blood supply to the stomach. Hot water increases the blood supply and bisurated magnesia instantly neutralizes the excessive stomach acid and stops food fermentation, the combination of the two, therefore, being marvelously successful and decidedly preferable to the use of artificial digestants, stimulants or medicines for indigestion.

IF KIDNEYS ACT BAD TAKE SALTS

Says Backache is Sign You Have Been Eating Too Much Meat

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood, and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels; removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds, and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

To the Electors of East Peterboro

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—

I believe no greater disaster could, at the present time, befall our country than the defeat of the Borden Union Administration at the polls on December 17th.

The Policy of this Administration is the speedy and continuous reinforcements of our Canadian troops on the battle-front; and the putting forth of all our National strength for the cause of civilization and freedom.

To carry out this Policy, a number of Canada's ablest Public men of vision—sinking for the present—all political differences now stand together—strong to battle for the right—united to WIN the WAR.

For over three years thousands of Loyal Canadians of many creeds and of different Nationalities, have stood shoulder to shoulder on the Battlefields of Europe, gallantly fighting a common foe, and sometimes standing; sometimes falling, have won for the name of Canada undying fame. Shall we, with all possible speed, send help to these, our heroic defenders now holding the battle-line or shall we, break faith with them as well as "with those who die"—delay—vote—while the enemy advances?

As a Union Candidate in this Riding, I am putting forth every effort to win East Peterborough to the support of the Borden Union Administration and if elected shall to the utmost of my ability support the same.

To this end I now earnestly solicit the co-operation and influence of every loyal, patriotic man and woman in East Peterborough.

I have the honor to be, faithfully yours,

J. A. SEXSMITH

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Claimant

He Had Recourse to a Brute For a Witness

By LOUISE B. CUMMINGS

There is in man a faculty for development that the lower animals do not possess.

An illustration of this diversity between men and animals occurred during the eighteenth century in the case of a young Irishman who emigrated to America and later returned to his native country. Arthur Donovan was a younger son of the Earl of Strongford. Young Donovan was devoted to hunting, and, since there was a fine pack of hounds on the estate, he occupied himself largely with the sport. Neither of his two older brothers cared for it, so that the dogs came to look upon Arthur as their master, and he never went among them that they did not show the greatest affection for him.

Arthur was not only beloved by his dogs, but by every one who knew him. He was a fine, manly fellow, while his older brothers were disposed to lead a dissolute city life. The heir to the title and estates spent most of his time in London, while the second was an officer in one of the aristocratic English regiments. Arthur, having only the remotest chance to inherit the title, became restive and did what a great many younger sons of British noblemen did in those days—he emigrated to America.

Arthur Donovan was but eighteen years old when he left Ireland for America. The last goodby he spoke was to the dogs. Going out to the kennels, he called to them, and they gathered about him, barking their joy, supposing that they were going for a hunt. There was one dog, Hector, of which Arthur had made an especial pet. He was very young, but Arthur had found him capable of being trained far easier than the other hunters. Hector loved his master, and his master loved Hector. When it came to bidding farewell to this dog Arthur's eyes became wet, and, breaking away from his pet and waving adieu to the pack, he returned to the house, where a conveyance was waiting to take him to Belfast, from which point he was to sail for Virginia.

Arthur reached America not long before the breaking out of the Revolutionary war. In civil strifes the side youngsters take is liable to be decided by circumstances. Perhaps young Donovan was influenced by a hereditary antagonism to England, but the immediate cause of his advocating the American cause was meeting with John Paul Jones, who became famous as a naval commander. Jones was as much Scotch as Donovan was Irish. Donovan joined the future conqueror of the Serapis and was with him during that famous battle, receiving a wound in the face which left a scar which largely changed his expression.

At the end of the war Donovan had been in America ten years. Between eighteen and twenty-eight there is always a considerable change in a man's appearance, but in this case there was much more than is usual. When Arthur left Ireland his face was smooth. Now it was covered with a beard, which he wore partly to hide the scar he had received in battle. Then he had a thick head of hair, which was now thin, and he had inherited a family predisposition to become gray early. As soon as hostilities ceased, with some prize money he had received he bought a tobacco plantation in Virginia, and, settling down on it, there was every prospect of his living the life of an American southern planter.

When Arthur joined Paul Jones he wrote his family in Ireland of the fact, and his father ordered that his name should never again be mentioned by any of the family. Eight years passed without a word between him and them. The oldest son died of dissipation, and the next younger brother, who had been sent with his regiment to America, was killed at the siege of Yorktown, which occurred near the end of the war. Neither of these men was married.

This left Arthur Donovan Earl of Strongford by right, but there was a barrier between him and the title which would be difficult to pass. In the first place, a cousin, Herbert Donovan, a keen and unscrupulous lawyer, was next of kin and, with Arthur out of the way, would possess the title and entailed estates. Secondly, Arthur, having had no communication with his family for years, would likely have difficulty in proving his identity. Thirdly, in endeavoring to establish his claim against his cousin his having fought England, especially with the so called pirate, Paul Jones, would prejudice every one against him.

When the Earl of Strongford died Herbert Donovan laid claim to the inheritance, taking the ground that Arthur was dead. To prove this he sent an agent to America with instructions to find a record of the death of some one bearing the name of Donovan and manufacture evidence that the deceased was the youngest son of the Earl of Strongford. This was not difficult. There were plenty of Donovans in America, and a record was found of an Arthur Donovan who had been killed at the battle of Trenton. Ireland was much farther from America in those days than now, and to make up a case proving this man was a son of the Earl of Strongford was not the task it would be today.

The position taken by Herbert Donovan was well fortified before Arthur heard of the great changes that had occurred since he left home. The occasion of his hearing of it at all was that the case became known to a Dublin attorney, O'Rourke, who knew the Strongfords, especially Herbert, and through a desire for gain, as well as a sense of justice, concluded to find Arthur, if alive, and notify him that his inheritance was about to pass to another. He, too, sent an agent to America in the matter of the Strongford title and estates.

Arthur was riding over the broad acres of his tobacco plantation when a man accosted him and handed him a letter from O'Rourke notifying him of the death of his father and brother and saying his cousin had laid claim to the title and estate. Arthur at once put his affairs in America in a position to go to Ireland and took the next vessel that sailed from Philadelphia. Arriving in Dublin, he went straight to O'Rourke, whom he had known before leaving home, and introduced himself as Arthur Donovan. He received his first setback in the fact that the attorney recognized nothing in his appearance of the youth he had seen more than ten years before. He asked Arthur what proof he had of his identity, and Arthur was obliged to confess that the life he had led as a sailor during the American war had resulted in the destruction of every paper he had possessed connecting him with the family.

O'Rourke was disheartened. He had spent some money in sending an agent to America, which it now appeared he was likely to lose. He was very doubtful about his client being the real Arthur Donovan. But Arthur, who had learned in his experience with the colonists how to put up a good fight, persevered and succeeded by narrating events which had happened in his family with which O'Rourke was conversant in putting sufficient confidence in the attorney to induce him to undertake his case, though Arthur was obliged to send to America for means to pay the costs.

When Herbert Donovan saw the claimant to the Strongford title he felt quite comforted. He had seen his cousin frequently in years gone by and now saw not the slightest resemblance between this man and Arthur Donovan. He had taken possession of the late earl's residence and ransacked the house, searching for any papers or likeness that might aid in establishing Arthur's claim. He had found, some letters and a miniature painting on ivory made when Arthur was sixteen years of age. He had destroyed the letters and kept the portrait till he could discover whether it would aid his own case or his cousin's.

Death and change had played havoc with the Strongford household. Lady Strongford had died before Arthur left home. Most of the servants had gone elsewhere, and of those who remained many pronounced him an impostor, the rest being in doubt. Michael Monahan, the keeper of the hounds, was still there, though but two or three dogs were left of the pack, since no member of the family had hunted since his departure. Michael when he saw Arthur was in doubt whether he was the man he had known as a youth or an impostor. Asking Arthur for his hat, he put the lining up to his nostrils and drew a long breath.

"Ah, Mr. Arthur," he exclaimed, "you're the rale hunter that went to Ameriky! I know you by the fine perfume of you."

Arthur at once communicated the fact to his attorney as important proof. But O'Rourke saw nothing in it, and if there had been he said it could not be utilized in court. If Michael had not seen Arthur since his return to Ireland and would pick him out by his personal odor among a number of men it would go far toward establishing his claim. Was there any one else who had not seen him who would recognize him by this odor, which was very like musk and agreeable rather than unpleasant?

Unfortunately not a person could be found who had ever detected this personal odor. Arthur worked hard to get other evidence, but for every bit he got in his favor his cousin secured one against him. His counsel took the matter up for trial with misgivings, but hoped for the best. Michael Monahan made an excellent witness, and O'Rourke told Arthur that if he could get anything in the same line to reenforce it he believed that he could win the case for him.

Arthur asked Michael if any of the dogs he left behind when he went away were still living. Michael thought awhile, then replied that there was one left, old Hector, but he was half blind. After a conference between O'Rourke and Arthur it was decided to bring Hector into court as a last hope.

The scene when the old hunter was led up to Donovan was long remembered in those parts. Hector cast a glance at his master and looked away. Donovan drew nearer the dog till he was within a few inches of the animal's nose. Then Hector began to sniff, nosing about as though trying to remember something. Then he gave a low moan, which he kept repeating.

"Hec!" said Donovan.

It was now evident that the dog remembered his former master, laying his head against Donovan's breast and crooning like an old woman over a newly found child.

The case was won. What it is difficult to describe in words was easy for the jury to interpret. Donovan won and soon after took possession of the title and estates. The most valued creature on the premises was old Hector, which died at the advanced age of thirteen.

Operator Near Halifax Sent Message About Collision—Could Have Saved Life by Deserting.

HALIFAX, N.S., Dec. 10.—The Halifax Herald is informed by Canadian Government railway officials that a message came over the wires a minute before the explosion occurred. It was from Vincent P. Coleman, the operator at Richmond Station, directly looking out upon the scene of the collision, and read:

Coleman's badly charred remains were found that evening. Had he chosen to desert his post he might have saved his own life.

NO PRISONERS TAKEN FROM "PILL BOXES" SAYS PRIVATE BOB HADDOW

Mr. A. W. Archibald has received the following letter from Private Robert Haddon of the 8th Mounted Rifles, who was severely wounded at Passchendaele Ridge:

Norfolk and Norwich Hospital, Norwich, England.

'Just a note to say I am getting on a little better but still suffering badly. I can't sleep yet; however, my wounds are looking better to-day. My right foot bothers me awfully. I have a tube in it to drain it. After I was operated on in France I had one in both of my legs. However, I am under a different treatment now. It is the nerves that keep twitching. The first two or three days I was here I was nearly crazy. If I was sitting up, sometimes they would throw me right back on the bed, and I just had to howl. However, these last two days have not been so bad. I hope you can read this, because it is about as much as I can do to sit up for any length of time. I had my right leg nearly up around my neck one night.

Nevertheless I should be thankful to be here. Of all the places we ever struck Passchendaele had them all beaten. I got hit at our first objective. We had to go up both sides of a swamp to reach Fritz. "Pill boxes" were in abundance. A "pill box" is a big concrete emplacement and they stand all kinds of shell fire. They hold about fifty "Heinies" and keep mowing you down with machine guns until you get up to them. Then they throw up their hands—but nothing doing. No prisoners taken out of "pill boxes." Well, I wobbled back to one of these, and there were five of us lying there for two days. They could not get near us for shell fire. However, the enemy eased up and we got out under the white flag with a parson leading. It took about five hours to get us to the first dressing station. So you see it was awful. There was only one officer left in our Company and not very many men. Sergeant Laplante was killed. He was one of the old boys. There were only five of us left, but I don't think there is any one left now of those that went from Peterborough with me. Oh, yes, "Scotty" McKinley is still there. I saw him at the dressing station. He is cooking for the Colonel now, so he is "jake."

Write soon. Love to all.

"GREATEST CRIME OF WAR" PROBLEM FOR GREAT MINDS

Stephen Pichon Says "Among So Many Ignominies, I Renounce a Choice.

PARIS.—The question "What is the greatest crime committed during the war?" was put by the Spanish review L'America Latina to conspicuous men in Europe.

"The torpedoing of hospital ships," was the reply of Field-Marshal Lord French of Great Britain.

"The declaration of war itself," says Stephen Pichon, French Minister of Foreign Affairs. "Among so many ignominies that have been perpetrated since," he adds, "I renounce making a choice."

"The great crime of Rheims, the abominable destruction of the cathedral, is the one that makes bleed most my heart of a Frenchman and an artist, but can one establish a hierarchy of crimes of the barbarians?" was the opinion of Auguste Rodin, the sculptor, since dead.

"The murder of sailors whose vessels have been torpedoed is the most atrocious act committed during the war," in the opinion of Sir W. H. Dunn, formerly Lord Mayor of London.

Violation of Belgium.

"Politically the greatest crime committed during the war is the violation of Belgium by those who had sworn to defend it," says Mgr. Baudrillart, Vicar-General of the Catholic Institute of Paris. "Morally one is embarrassed to choose among so many atrocities," he adds. "The worst crime in my eyes is the re-establishing of slavery by the Germans."

Signor Vincente Blasco Ibanez replied: "The greatest crime of intellectual Germany consisted in the troubling of the course of human thought and the proclaiming of the superiority of war over justice. All the atrocities of the Germans against men and things are only the material consequences of scientific barbarity."

The massacre and deportation of hundreds of thousands of innocent Armenians while Germany, protector and ally of Turkey, gave a tacit consent by its attitude, is considered as "the most gigantic crime of the war," by Viscount James Bryce, while he says "the most abject crime of the war thus far is that of the German government carrying off into slavery hundreds of young French and Belgian girls and thousands of Belgian labourers, obliging them to work against their own unfortunate country ruined by the invasion."

Germany, the Criminal.

Alfred Capus, editor of the Figaro is also of opinion that "the most execrable crime of the Germans was the deportation of French families from Lille."

THE ORIGIN OF POPULAR SAYINGS.

All of us frequently use expressions of which we do not really know the meanings. Did you, for example, know that noon is the traditional hour for a wedding ceremony because in the olden days in England the bridegroom could not be relied upon to be sober any later in the day than this hour?

Did you know that the word "tip"—meaning a fee given to a servant—is made of the first letters of the phrase "to insure promptness," and that the inscription used to be on money boxes in every tavern in which travellers dropped their coins, which later were divided equally among the servants?

Did you know that when we say that we give a person the "cold shoulder" that it was because of a custom once prevalent in France of serving a cold shoulder of mutton instead of hot meat to a guest who had stayed longer than he was welcome?

Did you know that an unmarried woman is called a "spinster" because in olden days they were prohibited from marrying until they had spun a full set of bed furnishings, and because of the time they thus spent at the spinning wheels were called "spinsters?"

Did you know that in the olden days a baker who gave short weight had awful things happen to him, and, consequently, when called upon for a dozen rolls he put in an extra one, to be on the safe side, thus, the phrase "baker's dozen" was originated?

And did you know that in primitive days a newly married man had to wait upon his bride and serve at her table on his wedding day? Thus the word "bridegroom" came into the language.—Exchange.

WHERE A DAY IS FOUR DAYS LONG

IN Alaska there is a time when a day is four days long. From the 19th to 22nd of June, inclusive, the sun does not set. It is because of this that the vast country on the northwest of the American continent is called "The Land of the Midnight Sun." It fills one with strange thrills to be in the midst of an open country at midnight and then see old Sol look at you with a sleepy eye that peeps just above the horizon.

The far famed loveliness of Alaska is an invitation to the tourist to visit it. Thousands go there annually. Transportation facilities are convenient. Some travel thousands of miles to see this region, but the invigorating atmosphere, the endless variety of mountain, river, lake, waterfall, forest and glacier scenery compensate well for the journey. On many of the plains and valleys the vegetation is rich, and excellent crops are raised.

The voyage along the Pacific coast from Vancouver to Skagway is delightful. The Canadian Pacific runs an excellent service of passenger vessels on this route. Last summer I took the trip. A White Pass and Yukon Route train brought me from Skagway to the town of White Horse on the Yukon River. There I boarded the steamer "Casca" and took a trip into the heart of the country. There were about fifty tourists on the boat. It was the 21st of June, and we were all anticipating the experience of gazing on the sun at midnight. Nearly everybody had a camera in readiness. At 11 o'clock p.m. we were near Fort Yukon, and Sol then appeared to be a little clouded, but it was plain daylight. At midnight the Lord of Light had brushed away the clouds and appeared more like the full moon than the sun we know in Canada. We took many photographs of him as he climbed higher on the stairs of heaven and arrayed himself in his brightest sheen.

As we sailed along the banks of the Yukon River we saw some bears and moose patrol the wilds, and the huskies—or six Alaskan dogs that draw the sleighs in the winter—kept the air busy in carrying the sounds of their howling to our ears. Each homesteader keeps a little herd of these dogs, and they are as useful to him as horses are to the residents of other countries. We continued our course until we were well inside the Arctic Circle, and while there we did not feel the necessity for heavy overcoats.

The population of Alaska embraces Eskimos and Indians, but it is by the large influx of white settlers that the country is being developed. Lumbering and mining are the principal industries, and they are carried on with profit. The United States paid $7,200,000 to the Russian Government for Alaska, and the bargain seems to have been a good one for the purchasers, for in recent years immense quantities of gold and other minerals, fish, furs and timber have been produced in the country.

The making of railways is proceeding. Alaska is likely to become a sphere of considerable business activity. For the hunter and tourist the place holds a thousand charms. It is enchanting to look on at all times, but it appears at its best in June when it has that wonderful day of 96 hours in length.

Canadian Railways Co-operate For National Defence

As a result of suggestions made by the Government that during the period of the war, there should be closer co-operation between the railways in Canada, an association has been formed by these railways corresponding to the Railways War Board in the United States, with the object of securing greater co-operation not only between the railways themselves but also between the railways and the public. Although Canada need fear no comparison with other countries as to the speed and efficiency with which munitions, equipment, foodstuffs and men have been moved to the front, it was realized that a still more intensive effort might help to speed up such movements and no private interest has been allowed to stand in the way of public benefit. It is expected that through heavier loading of cars, elimination of unnecessary train service, the co-operative use of all facilities, etc., to the best advantage, the country's needs may best be served. Much can be done to achieve these results through closer co-operation between the public and the railways.

Very shortly after Great Britain became involved in the war, the British Government sent for the General Managers of all the railways and made arrangements by which the railways would be guaranteed the same dividends and a proper depreciation for the period of the war as they were before, and advised the General Managers to form a council amongst themselves to conduct the railways as one; in other words, to eliminate competition and devote the railways to essential transportation solely.

When the United States came into the great war, the executives of the various railroads met and arranged amongst themselves to form a committee to operate the railroads as one, so as to get the full value of their transportation facilities and eliminate competition. The Canadian Government, having on several occasions expressed a wish that there should be closer co-operation between the railways of Canada an Executive Committee was formed, consisting of the presidents of the following roads:

Canadian Pacific, Lord Shaughnessy, K.C.V.O.
Grand Trunk, Howard G. Kelley.
Canadian Northern, Sir Wm. Mackenzie.
American Lines in Canada, Alfred Smith.

A meeting was held in Montreal on 23rd October, at which the private and government roads operating in Canada were represented, and an Administrative Committee was formed consisting of:

U. E. Gillen, Grand Trunk, Chairman.
C. A. Hayes, Canadian Government Railways.
D. B. Hanna, Canadian Northern.
E. D. Bronner, Michigan Central.
F. F. Backus, Toronto, Hamilton & Buffalo.
J. H. Walsh, Quebec Central.
Sir George Bury, Canadian Pacific.

A resolution has been adopted by all the railways in Canada that, realizing the national need of co-ordinating all industrial activities toward the prosecution of the war, and desiring further co-operation with each other to render the most efficient possible service to the national cause, do hereby agree to establish for the period of the war an organization to be known as the Canadian Railway Association for National Defence, which shall have general authority to formulate in detail, and from time to time, a policy of operation of all or any of the railways, which policy when it is announced by such organization shall be accepted and made effective by the several managements of the individual railway companies.

The Canadian Railway Association for National Defence determined to open an office in Montreal at once, and appointed a Secretary.

A Car Service Committee, consisting of the following, has been named:

W. A. Kingsland, Canadian Northern.
W. N. Rippey, Canadian Government Railways.
A. E. Locke, T. H. & B. Railway.
J. E. Duval, Grand Trunk.
A. Hatton, Canadian Pacific.
W. A. Griffin, T. & N. O. Railway.

Sub-committees reporting to the Administrative Committee, will be established in each province, and these will be added to from time to time.

Voice of The People

Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—There are three classes of the electorate opposed to the Liberal party. 1st.—The Profiteer, who knows perfectly well if the Liberals get control, his opportunity is gone for plundering the public, with outrageous profits. Business of that description would be regulated on the basis of legitimate profits, which is the just right of every man. 2nd—the ward heeler or office seeker. These are the small fry, but like mosquitoes, are numerous and very persistent. Men looking for soft jobs, big pay, and little or nothing to do. I am told the life is nearly pestered out of the Tory ex-M.P. with these chaps. 3rd—The trouble maker, the man who in season and out of season is agitating the race and creed cry. During election campaigns he becomes very active and aggressive.

Dr. Gordon, the noted author and lecturer of Winnipeg, addressing an audience in Montreal recently urging the people to get together, made this statement: "Any man who for any purpose seeks to make a cleavage between Quebec and the English-speaking people, is a traitor to his country and his God."—Yours, Observer.

A SLUGGISH LIVER CAUSES LOTS OF TROUBLE

When the liver becomes sluggish it is an indication that the bowels are not working properly, and if they do not move regularly many complications are liable to set in.

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are a specific for all disease or disorders arising from a slow, sluggish, lazy or torpid liver, and they have been universally used throughout Canada for over 20 years with the greatest success.

Mrs. W. A. Harrison, 7 Poplar Grove, Halifax, N.S., writes: "I take pleasure in writing you concerning the great good I have received by using Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills for a sluggish liver. When my liver got bad I would have severe headaches, but after using a couple of vials of your pills, I have not been bothered any more."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c a vial at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Sure Way To Get Rid Of Dandruff

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.

PHYSICAL CULTURE.

As Good For the Business Man as For the Soldier In Training.

If physical culture is needed for those who bear arms in defense of the country why should it not be applied also to the soldiers of the business and professional world, the men in the commercial trenches? If a certain number of our citizens are compelled to go through a rigid course of physical training, why should not all others be called upon to follow suit?

The soft muscled clerk, the devitalized student, the overworked business man—they need awakening. Now, in many instances they are but little more than human ciphers, 25, 50 or 75 per cent men. With a little properly directed exercise they could be fitted for the ranks of the 100 per centers.

Six hours weekly, two hours for three days each week, would put the average flabby muscled, sedentary worker in fine shape. It would square his shoulders, stiffen his backbone, put some energy and enthusiasm into his makeup. It would make a real man of him.

Every man who is not in training should begin now. If he cannot train with other men let him follow a system of home training. Hard muscles, strong, stable nerves, high grade endurance—in short a physique as "hard as nails"—should be the ambition of every sensible man.—Physical Culture.

BRIGHT BOYS AND GIRLS.

The Head and Physical Marks of Intelligence In Children.

In summing up his conclusions on the relationship of intelligence to the size and shape of the head Karl Pearson is quoted in the Journal of Heredity as making these statements about the intelligence of children:

"To sum up, then, while no characters in school children so far dealt with show very high correlation with intelligence, we may yet say that the intelligent boy is markedly conscientious, is moderately robust, athletic and popular; he tends rather to quick than to sullen temper. He is more self conscious and quieter than the dull boy; he has a slightly bigger head and possibly lighter pigmentation than those of more mediocre intelligence. His hair has a larger percentage of curliness.

"The intelligent girl is also markedly conscientious, moderately robust, athletic and popular. She, too, tends to quick rather than sullen temper. She is less self conscious than the dull girl and nolsier than the girl of mediocre intelligence. It is the slow girl who is quiet and shy. The intelligent girl has a slightly bigger head than the dull girl, and her hair is more likely to be wavy and much less likely to be curly."

St. Sophia's Palimpsest.

Travelers who have visited the great Mohammedan mosque of St. Sophia in Constantinople tell of the visibility of inscriptions made in the interior of the building when it was a Christian church. These had been painted over by the Moslem conquerors, but time defeated their purpose of total effacement, says the Christian Herald. Over the entrance is the inscription in Latin, "I am the door; by me if any man enter in he shall be saved and shall go in and out, and he shall find pasture." The bricks in the great dome in the interior reveal this inscription: "Deus in medio eius: non commovebitur. Adiuvabit eam Deus vultu suo." The translation may be found in Psalm xlvi. 5. These facts are of interest in view of the present tottering condition of the Moslem power.

Little Gleaning Now.

Gleaning is almost a thing of the past, so great has been the improvement of agricultural machinery during the last twenty years; but in the year 1801 the vicar of a certain village in Norfolk wrote that the women in general gleaned five bushels each in his parish, and that those who kept maidservants sent them out into the fields, and received by contract one-half of the product.

Much Land Reclaimed.

Since beginning operations the Toronto harbor commission has reclaimed 300 acres of land in connection with their part of the work of the harbor front development scheme. Taking the value of the new land at $10,000 an acre the harbor board has created an additional asset of $3,000,000.

English Mothers Doing Important War Service Rearing Their Children

NOT many weeks ago, writes Basil Clarke, in The London Daily News, I stood in the grim valley of the Ancre watching our men's war work there. Yesterday I sat in a London park watching our women's war work there. . . . The two places provided scenes in fitting contrast for the head and tail, the front and reverses of war's shield.

You remember how sunny and fresh it was. The trees, which only a day or two earlier had seemed but thinly powdered with green, were thick emerald clusters against the blue of the sky above. The handrail of the park seat was warm. I could feel the glow of it on my palm, and the pleasing tingle of hot sunshine upon the back of my hand. Spring, rebirth, growth were in the touch of the air.

As I sat there with hat on the seat beside me, and face to the breeze and sun, something small and light touched my foot. I looked down. It was a little rubber ball. A tiny fellow of three or four in a sailor suit stood a few yards away, looking at it ruefully, not daring to come nearer. I beckoned him to come and get it. No, he would not. His body swayed restlessly from his hips and his chubby fingers sought his mouth. He looked at me from under his eyes, but would not come. I picked up the ball, and threw it toward him. He captured it and made off. A moment later the ball was again at my feet, and again I threw it back. This time he chuckled. Soon it came again, and then I made the discovery that the little fellow was rolling it there on purpose; he liked me throwing the ball back to him; he "wanted to play."

So we played for quite a time till his mother came. She shepherded him to the shade of a chestnut tree, where were gathered little folk of her family. There was the baby in a "pram," my sailor-suit friend of the ball game, and another very like him; also a fellow of six, and a little girl of seven or eight. From innermost recesses of baby's "pram" were produced jam sandwiches, seed cake, and a thermos flask of hot milk; and they took tea under the trees.

The beauty of the children, and the patient, gentle watchfulness of the mother set me thinking. The park was full of children, beautiful children, especially babies. I don't know how the Birth Registrar's figures bear me out, but it seemed to me that I had never seen so many children in the park in other years. "Prams" with sleeping babies sheltered under every tree. Children not much older were sprawling on the grass, or feeding the ducks, or skipping and jumping; and it seemed to me that I had never seen them playing more happily or looking so well.

In watching the children I made another discovery. The number of mothers in the park was greater than usual; the number of nurses less. One missed the uniforms and "streamers," the methodical walk and the calm detachment of the nurses; one heard more shouts of "Mother" and "Mammy." Is it that in war time more mothers are seeing to the welfare of their own little folk? It seemed so.

Many mothers I noticed with only one child, and that a baby. They pushed their perambulators with wistful, far-off eyes. And some of these mothers, though little more than girls, were in black — widows already, with but one baby to solace them for their loss.

It was this sadder side of the park's war work that took my mind back to our men's war work on the western front. I saw again the barren slopes of the Somme and the Ancre. They were muddy and shell-pocked. The trees were now powdered green with spring. They were maimed and pollarded by shell fire; trees with ugly shortened branches, trees like deformed hands. Beneath them lay not sprawling youngsters with pink, chubby legs, but top-coated bundles, a motionless motley of gray-blue and khaki, the dead of two armies in their great coats, all huddled, all cold, all gone—leaving it to those mothers and those slowly walking widows and those wide-eyed babies of the parks to carry on their life and its tradition.

A great war work these mothers in the parks are doing. To turn a shell or fill a fuse, to tend the wounded or to type the letters of a chief of staff—all those are valuable war work, too, and they may seem to some women to have about them more of the romance and adventure of war. But to shape a human body and mind, a new little human body and mind, for good, in place perhaps of one that has gone—there can be no greater war work than that.

Remedy Philosophy.

No hustler wants Time to wait for him. He's on time to meet Time when the train rolls into the station.

We'll all need rest, when we get where rest is, and the good thing about it is there'll be room enough for all.

First Principles.

"Do you think that new recruit will ever learn to be a soldier?" asked the commanding officer.

"Well, he's acquiring the foundations," responded the drill sergeant. "He had not been in camp a day before he was putting up a howl about the food."

Taking Steps.

Greene—What steps is he taking?

Flag Language.

There is no international language of flags established by law, but by common consent flags of a certain color are used for certain purposes. All over the world a yellow flag is a signal of contagious disease. A ship hoists it to denote that there are some on board suffering from such disease, and it remains hoisted until she has reached quarantine. The white flag is universally used as a flag of truce. The black flag was formerly the symbol of piracy, and now in some countries it is flown after an execution is performed to indicate that the requirements of the law have been carried out. Other features of flag language are that a flag flying at half mast is a universal sign of mourning, and when a ship has to make a sign of distress she does it by raising the national ensign reversed or upside down. Even this can be emphasized by knotting the flag in the middle to indicate great distress and imminent danger.

Fruit Diet as a Cure.

The fruit diet is a sure and positive cure for what is popularly known as bleeding and for persons usually designated as bleeders, persons who cannot stop the flow of blood once it is started from a wound or other cause. The fruit diet will supply the blood with fibrin. Fibrin is the substance out of which nature fabricates flesh and muscle. A person on the fruit diet hardly bleeds at all when he cuts himself accidentally with a knife or when, for proper reasons, a dentist is forced to draw one of his teeth. The blood coagulates almost instantaneously. If you believe none of this, just try it. The experience is safe and sane. The fruit diet is cheaper and better than the meat diet, and it will do more for you. You will feel fine and chirrupy and optimistic. You never find a fruit eater who is a pessimist.

American Medical Association.

The American Medical association is the largest organization of the kind in the world. There are 70,000 members. In May, 1846, in response to a call issued by the Medical Society of the State of New York, there was held in New York city a conference for the purpose of discussing questions relating to the standardization of medical education in the United States. This conference adjourned to meet a year later in Philadelphia, where it resolved itself into a permanent organization—the American Medical association. A long line of distinguished men have been presidents of the association.

DOCTORS SAID OPERATION

"When Chatham Lady Suffered From Extreme Nervous Exhaustion—Now Feeling Fine and Working Large Garden."

Chatham, Ont., Nov. 22. — This letter will interest every lady reader, because it describes a condition for which many doctors advise an operation. That the operation is often unnecessary and very often leaves the patient an invalid for life is well known.

You will read here of what Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has done for this lady and will then understand the great good it is accomplishing in many thousands of similar cases throughout the continent.

Every woman should think long and earnestly before consenting to an operation of this kind. It is a simple matter to give Dr. Chase's Nerve Food a trial and the results are almost always entirely satisfactory. You not only avoid the risk and expense of an operation but find yourself restored to health and vigor.

Mrs. E. M. Ford, 82 Delaware ave., Chatham, Ont., writes: "For four years I suffered from my nerves. I was restless and could not sleep well. I had headaches, neuralgic pains through the body and backache. There was a buzzing in my ears and a twitching of nerves and muscles. I also had palpitation of the heart which caused shortness of breath. I was easily tired and always drowsy after eating. When walking or on my feet very much my feet would seem to go dead in my shoes. I consulted two doctors and both told me that I would have to have an examination and probably an operation, but I would not have either. Shortly after this I commenced using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and after a treatment of this medicine I can say I am now feeling fine I am able to do my household duties without difficulty, and besides this attend to a half acre of garden. I can go about without that dead feeling in my feet and am grateful to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food for my cure. I think very highly of this medicine, and recommend it to other sufferers whenever I have an opportunity."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box; a full treatment of 6 boxes for $2.75, at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

FRENCH AND BRITISH ARE DUPLICATING WESTERN LINES

Reinforcements on the Italian Front Have Complicated Trench Positions Similar to Those Which Held the Germans in France--Enemy is Preparing Great Assault on the Italian Line--Germans Are Rushing Troops to the Western Front.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(By Henry Wood.)

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES IN ITALY, December 11.—British and French troops to-day are duplicating on the Italian front the impregnable British and French trench lines on the west front, while Germany and Austria prepared their greatest of all assaults to break through.

The geographical advantages are with the enemy. The Austro-Germans now occupy the crest and southern slopes of the Alps. Their positions completely dominate the entire Venetian and Lombardy Plains.

Every movement of the Italian, French and British armies on the flat ground is plainly visible to the enemy.

The Brenta, Piave, Adige and other valleys traverse the Alps and furnish doorways for an invasion which are exceedingly difficult of defense. Behind the enemy's lines the Alps are traversed east and west by the roadways permitting rapid transfer of troops and materials for sudden changing attacks. They furnish great arteries of communication from east to west of the Piave, or even from the west of Lake Carda.

Any success to an attack like the present one on the Asiago Plateau would force the immediate abandonment of the Piave line. It would mean a retreat by the Italians either to Adiage or Polines.

Not only does the actual battle line contour thus favour the enemy, but Germany and Austria both possess the easiest and most direct Alpine passes for a line of communication back home. One of these is the historic Brenner path between Innisvruck and the Trent. It was over this highway that the German armies crossed and invaded the Venetian Plains during the Middle Age conflicts between Germany and the Papacy. The French and British veterans have taken over vulnerable sectors of the Italian lines. They have already made themselves almost at home. Their trenches and dugouts are modelled exactly along the lines of those from which British and French troops held the German invasion into Belgium and France to a standstill.

General Pepino Garibaldi, who following the American-Mexican "war" fought in the French Foreign Legion, is now fighting alongside French soldiers again. He remained in the Foreign Legion until Italy came into the war and then joined here forces. The General had two brothers killed in the Foreign Legion.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Dec. 11.—Patrol encounters occurred north of Bezonvaux (Verdun front) and near Tahure, Champagne.

Everywhere else the night was calm.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Dec. 11.—The situation in Moscow is reported to be grave, according to a Times despatch from Petrograd.

The Bolsheviki, according to Petrograd newspapers, have placed machine guns in the streets, as they fear an uprising of hostile parties.

The garrison, however, shows signs of insubordination, and is reported to be disobeying the Bolsheviki commander, a private soldier named Muranoff.

Considerable forces, the despatch adds, are being detached from the West front to be sent against the Cossacks.

Canadian Press Despatch:

LONDON, Dec. 11.—The correspondent at Amsterdam of the Daily Express reports that the Germans are rushing troops to the western front with the idea of smashing the Entente Allies before America is able to act, and adds: "One of the results of this is that two German munition trains collided on Thursday. Both were blown up and several hundred soldiers were killed or wounded.

Canadian Press Despatch:

GENEVA, Dec. 11.—Albrecht von Graefe Goldbee, an influential member of the Reichstag, writes in the Deutsche Zeitung, the official Pan-German organ, asking the Kaiser to abdicate. He points out that it is considered throughout the world that Prussian militarism is inseparable from Hohenzollerns, and that it would be in conformity with the traditions of the Kaiser's family to remove willingly this last obstacle and thereby give the German people inestimable benefits of peace.

Canadian Press Despatch:

LONDON, Dec. 11.—Unusually active artillery fighting and aerial operations on the western front are reported in to-day's official communication. This act is very particularly noteworthy on the Ypres and Arras fronts.

TICKETS FOR XMAS TREAT

In connection with the Christmas treat for soldiers' children under the auspices of the Great War Veterans' Association, the committee wish the mothers or relatives of children entitled to be present to call at the Barrie Building, G.W.V.A. headquarters, for admission tickets, on Thursday, Friday or Saturday of this week. Admission will be by ticket only, and application must be made on the days mentioned. This is important, and mothers and relatives are asked to bear it in mind.

MOSCOW HAS BEEN PLACED IN STATE OF DEFENCE

Troops in the Garrison However Are Reported to Have Mutinied and Have Refused to Obey Commands of the Bolsheviki

COSSACKS GAINING

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, Dec. 11.—Despatches from Moscow, the stronghold of Cossack strength, indicate the city has already been put into state of defence. The Bolsheviki have mounted quick firing guns on houses. Troops in the garrison, however, were reported to have mutinied and refused obedience to the Bolsheviki commander, Private Muraneff.

There was evidence to-day that the Bolsheviki government is beginning to get panic stricken over the gradual grip which the Cossacks are acquiring over Russia's great food stores and her railroads. They foresee the isolation of Petrograd and other great Bolsheviki centres and starvation if the revolt continues.

Many Narrow Escapes Have Been Reported

Canadian Press Despatch:

HALIFAX, N.S., Dec. 11.—Remarkable escapes of people caught in their homes when the explosion of the cargo of the Mont Blanc rolled out the houses in the Richmond portion of Halifax, have been reported. A large number of women and children were found after all hope had been given up that the ruins contained anybody alive. Mass funerals will be held daily for some weeks in the local cemeteries. The heavy frost which succeeded the snow storm of yesterday, yet further retarded the digging of the large number of graves required.

Next to loss of life and homelessness of people, an outstanding feature is the property loss, and this includes the damage to the dry dock, where 120 of 233 workmen were killed. It will be months before the dry dock can again be in commission, a most serious thing for the port. The basin and caisson are intact, but everything else is gone.

The investigation into the collision between the Imo and Mont Blanc which will be conducted by a Board appointed by the Dominion Government, will commence to-morrow.

UNION JACK IS RAISED

British Flag Hoisted in Formal State Over Jerusalem the Holy City To-day—General Allenby to Read a Proclamation.

A MILITARY GOVERNOR

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, Dec. 11.—The British flag was to be raised in formal state over Jerusalem, the Holy City, to-day.

Gen. Allenby, commander of the victorious British columns, announced his plans in messages received here early to-day. He will enter the city and be greeted by the Sheiks at the Mosque of Omar and by Patriarchs of Eastern Latin churches. To them and to the populace he will read a long prepared proclamation, promising them freedom and security under Christian rule. The flag will then be formally raised over the city.

At the same time French and Italian consulates and merchants will raise flags of their own nationalities.

Martial law will be proclaimed at once and Allenby will likely appoint a military governor.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—Commenting on the capture of Jerusalem by British troops under Gen. Allenby, the London papers to-day pointed out that the event will probably have a most favourable effect upon the Jews of Russia.

The press editorially predicts that the signal victory resulting in the fall of the Palestine capital will most likely prove a strong factor in strengthening of the Russian section, who are antagonistic to Bolsheviki and who are striving against conclusion of a peace in Russia, without victory.

LOOTER SHOT AT HALIFAX

Body Strapped to a Post and Over His Head Was Placed a Placard Reading "This Was a Looter"

UNDER MARTIAL LAW

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

HALIFAX, Dec. 11.—One looter has already been shot at Halifax. His body was strapped to a post and over his head was placed a placard bearing these ominous words: "This Was a Looter."

Rumours are current that others have since been similarly dealt with, but except in the one instance the military authorities neither confirm nor deny. "We have no objection to the public knowing the penalty in extreme cases," said Colonel Thompson, of Military Headquarters.

Halifax is actually, but not nominally, under martial law. Day and night squads of men patrol the streets working always in the closest harmony with the civic police. In the devastated area cordons are drawn, through which none but the privileged may pass. Sixteen hundred men are

Great War Veterans Choose Their Officers For Next Year

Many of the Old Officers Are Re-elected at General Meeting Last Night—President Staunton, Who is Away on His Honeymoon is Again Chosen As Presiding Officer

THE CLUB ROOM QUESTION

At a general meeting of the Peterborough branch of the Great War Veterans' Association, held last evening in the recreation room of the armouries, with Vice-President Walter Perks in the chair, the election of officers for the ensuing year took place. There was considerable interest in the selection of the men who are to guide the destinies of the Association during 1918, and in a number of cases a ballot was taken. As will be seen, the work of the officers who have been at the helm for the past six months was recognized by their re-election to their positions.

The following officers were elected.

President—Comrade H. J. Staunton (re-elected.)

Vice-President — Comrade Walter Perks (re-elected.)

Secretary — Comrade Sidney Whatley (re-elected by acclamation.)

Financial Secretary—Comrade Fred Haggart (re-elected by acclamation.)

Treasurer — Comrade George Coleman (re-elected.)

Sergeant-at-arms—Comrade J. Coppick.

Executive committee—Comrades J. Bacon, J. A. McNabb, G. Fallen and E. Mesley.

Auditors—Comrades F. Long and G. Fallen.

Relief committee—Comrades J. C. Smith, J. Bacon, J. Coppick and M. J. Gahagan.

The Relief committee was organized at the suggestion of Comrade J. C. Smith, who pointed out that such a committee would be of great assistance in helping the wives of soldiers overseas.

In this connection, Comrade P. Parrington made the suggestion that the Veterans might interest themselves in helping soldiers' wives to secure a supply of coal. Many of them were unable to secure either coal or wood, and with the man of the house overseas there was no one to help them to obtain the necessary supply.

It was decided that the Relief committee should take hold of this matter and do what they could to assist soldiers' families in this respect.

The New Quarters.

A deputation from the newly organized Ladies' Auxiliary of the G.W.V.A., consisting of Mrs. (Col.) Mills, Mrs. R. J. Devey and Mrs. Cortez Fessenden and supported by Messrs. J. J. Turner and G. A. Gillespie waited upon the meeting in regard to the new club rooms. Mrs. Mills, speaking for the Ladies' Auxiliary said that she did not see how it would be possible to have the Veterans installed in their new quarters before January 1st. On account of the election, it would not be possible for the ladies to begin their campaign until next week. As soon as the election was out of the way they would be able to start to work.

Several of the Veterans expressed their belief that it might be possible to rush the campaign through. The matter had been delayed for several months, the speakers pointed out.

It was finally decided to hold a meeting this morning at the office of Mr. E. A. Peck to arrange details of the campaign. The ladies' auxiliary will be represented and Comrades H.

LAURIER GREETED BY VAST CROWD IN WINNIPEG

Thousands Unable to Gain Admission and Two Overflow Meetings Were Held—Blames Borden's Alliance With Bourassa in 1911 For Failure of Recruiting in Quebec

SHOWED OLD-TIME VIGOUR

WINNIPEG, Dec. 10.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier took up the challenge that he intended to quit the war, when, in a forceful and eloquent address at the Industrial Bureau to-night, he declared in this his first address of his Western tour that he wanted to win the war and that he was in the war to the finish. He took objection to any one party monopolising the title the "Win-the-War" party. He frankly admitted his own Province of Quebec had not done its share, and he regretted it had not done so. However, he asked where the blame lay, and placed it on the Borden Administration. He declared that it was his belief that his compatriots would respond as well as any other Province if their sentiment and honour were properly appealed to.

THINKS REFERENDUM UNE POSSIBLE.

Sir Wilfrid said he believed he could take a referendum on conscription before June 1st of next year, notwithstanding all statements to the contrary. He referred to statement given at Arnprior last week when he quoted General Mewburn to the effect that there are 142,000 Canadians in France, including all branches of the service, 116,000 in England and 35,000 in Canada.

He believed that these men would be sufficient to reinforce the present four divisions, even if it was impossible to get further reinforcements over to France before the end of a year.

SPOKE WITH OLD-TIME VIGOR.

Thousands of people from Winnipeg, together with many from the other Western Provinces, endeavoured to hear Sir Wilfrid to-night. Six thousand secured admission into the Industrial Bureau, and two overflow meetings were held, but even then thousands were unable to gain admission.

ONLY MINOR INTERRUPTIONS

Rumours of organized interruptions proved unfounded. The audience included a large number of both sexes, the French-Canadians of St. Boniface being well represented, as well as the returned soldiers. Several minor interruptions occurred during the addresses of speakers previous to and following Sir Wilfrid, but on only two occasions during the hour and twenty minutes of his address were any questions raised, and then without any disorder. The cold was intense, and the hall was poorly heated, but Sir Wilfrid, attired in his fur coat and cap, did not seem to mind it as much as those years his junior. He spoke for eighty minutes with wonderful vigour. His audience included many Unionists.

Among those on the platform supporting Sir Wilfrid were H. H. Dewart, K.C., of Toronto; Senator Casgrain, Hon. Walter Mitchell of Quebec; Hon. A. G. MacKay and Hon. C. W. Cross of Alberta, Hon. W. R. Motherwell of Saskatchewan.

J. D. Baskerville, member of the Manitoba Legislature for Emerson, Chairman, introduced Sir Wilfrid as the "greatest statesman Canada ever had," a remark which was greeted with applause.

Peterborough Junior O. H. A. Club Is Organized

At a meeting held in the Empress Hotel last night the Peterborough Junior O. H. A. Club was organized for the season, with the following officers:

Hon. President—R. M. Glover.
President—C. G. Graham.
Vice President—F. D. Craig.
Secretary—W. Browett.
Treasurer—F. Bowness.
Management Committee—G. Evans, W. Jackson, A. Cranfield.

There are prospects for a good team in the Junior series. Players are asked to watch the press for announcement of the first practice.

A CHRISTMAS TREAT FOR SOLDIERS' KIDDIES

APPEAL FOR CLOTHING FOR HALIFAX SUFFERERS

To help relieve the unspeakable suffering in stricken Halifax, the local Red Cross Society appeals to the women of the various churches and organizations throughout the city, to meet together at once for the purpose of making warm undergarments of all kinds, and night dresses for the women and children, so suddenly rendered homeless and destitute. The Red Cross Society has undertaken to sort pack and ship these garments—as well as all articles of clothing in good condition ,which may be donated. The packers will be busy every day this week in the basement of the Public Library, and all contributions should be sent there as soon as possible.

THE QUAKER OATS.

A year ago to-day one of the worst incendiary calamities that ever happened in Peterborough befell. The Quaker Oats Company's buildings, which were wrecked by explosion, followed by fire, were totally destroyed the material loss being accompanied by the loss of a score of precious lives.

The fabled Phoenix, rising from its ashes, has been fulfilled. A year ago the great pile of Quaker Oats buildings were flat to the earth. To-day, the cope-stone of the new buildings is virtually laid—practically double in size and capacity.

It is a pride to Peterborough that is is the home of a company of such elastic enterprise, that, instead of being stunned by so great a calamity, was only stimulated to new enterprise and new accomplishment. Long may it flourish!

This sharp weather promises a harvest for the cold storage plants, but it increases the pinch of fuel shortage in spite of our fancy fuel controller.

SHARE CHRISTMAS WITH HALIFAX.

Canadians of all degrees, all races, all creeds, must view the coming Christmas season from a new and specific point of view. The terrible disaster at Halifax, creates a situation that calls upon all our sympathies, and should influence our actions.

When we look forward to Christmas joys and Christmas reunions we shall enlarge our joys and sweeten our reunions if we give practical thought to the fact that in Halifax and in Dartmouth, the city on the opposite side of he harbour, thousands young and old will have no Christmas joys, no reunions except in the Great Beyond—perhaps hardly any food and little or no home comforts—just enough perhaps to keep away starvation from lack of food, and of shelter from cold.

Words can hardly picture the desolation, physical suffering and mental anguish of the people of Halifax. Returns of the casualties that come over the wires sound more like the casualty lists of some sanguinary battle in France or Flanders—thousands of "killed, wounded and missing."

This awful condition of calamity should, and no doubt, will, affect, and largely direct our preparation for celebrating the Christmas season. None of us can look forward to sitting down safe, sound and warm, at the smoking Christmas board, with a sense of normal enjoyment, if we have forgotten or have neglected to help provide some amelioration of the pitiable plight of our suffering fellow citizens in Halifax on Christmas day and in the Christmas season.

If we propose to spend so much on Christmas observance, let us all divide it, whether it is great or small, or duplicate it, and after, of course, the children are provided for, send a liberal moiety to Halifax.

Christian citizens can surely keep in mind the modification of our holiday festivities, when the politicians at Halifax are doing the same. Representatives of both political organizations are urging their friends to drop the election fight for the two Halifax seats—that in each of them candidates of the opposing parties be permitted to be elected by acclamation.

The spirit of sympathy should colour all our outlook towards the great Christmas festival, and in all our plans and preparation, simple or elaborate, we shall coform to the spirit of Christmas if we resolve to forego something for the sake of giving the biggest half to the suffering and joyless people of stricken Halifax.

DOCTORS DISAGREE.

The Unionist or Borden government press is denouncing Mr. Hartley Dewart, K.C., as a reckless campaigner. He made, it appears, statements in assertion of the fact that Hon. Thomas White, Finance Minister, made large payments respectively to the Canadian Northern Railway. Hon. Mr. White says such statements "are absolutely false."

Mr. Dewart adheres to his statements, and says their accuracy can be officially proven. He sends the following telegram from Ottawa to Stewart Lyon, of the Globe:

OTTAWA, Dec. 7th, 1917.

"The accuracy of my statements at Brockville last night as to the C.N.R. and Bank of Commerce payments can be verified by the publication of the two order-in-council, each signed by the Governor-General's representative, under which payments of six millions under one order and twenty-five million under the second order were authorized. Let Sir Thomas White produce these orders-in-Council and stand condemned.

"H. H. DEWART."

There you are. The question of veracity as between the Finance Minister and Mr. Dewart can be easily settled. If the order-in-council referred to exist, they should be published; if they do not exist, that also admits of proof.

The question, however, if of greater gravity than one of veracity as between political campaigners. It is a question of the extent to which the Union government—the re-incarnation of the Borden government—is pursuing the Borden government policy of smothering the Canadian Northern Railway with favours at the cost of the public treasury.

There is no doubt that Canada is still in the grip of the "big interests." These interests, working with Bourassa and the flag-shooting Nationalists, put the Borden government in power in 1911, and both have stood by and backed the Borden government, which has danced like a marionette, whenever the big interests pulled the strings, and whose spirit and substantial form were behind the government in the ogre of graft and loot, that marked the war administration of the Borden government, and aroused public indignation over wasted millions, to the point that the Borden government dare not appeal to the people on its war record of administration or its general record of surrender to the moneyed interests, but came before the people as the "Union" government.

To all intents and purposes, in spirit and essence and largely in personnel, the "Union" government is the Borden government, warmed over.

Conservative orators declare that German gold is coming into Canada. If it is is, is it to pay for the Canadian nickel, the Borden government permitted to reach Germany.

NEGLECTING THE SOLDIERS.

If there is anything in the reports that the Unionist newspapers are fearful of he soldier vote abroad going against the Borden Government, the feeling seems to have had very good cause behind it.

The Unionist-Borden Government conscripted Canadian soldiers to the Front. The tremendous emergency for immediate reinforcements, urged for political effect, is belied by the actions of the Government. The middle of last May Premier Borden—on the advice of that astute vote manipulator, Hon. Robert Rogers—declared for conscription of manhood as an urgently needed measure to fill the thinning ranks of Canadians at the Front. Seven months have elopsed, and not a single conscripted soldier is in uniform.

If the soldiers overseas, who were told seven months ago that the Borden Government to meet the emergency was going to take Canadian slackers by force, and send them relief forthwith, have waited seven long months, they may have to wait months more for reinforcements.

It is the disappointment—not to have reinforcements sent—is added the cumulative resentment for neglect and failure in good treatment to Canada's soldiers overseas, there is some ground for the dread of "Unionist" newspapers that the soldier vote is not going as solidly for the Borden Government as was expected.

The soldiers overseas know more from experience than we have been allowed to hear of the treatment they have been subjected to.

The Glob ethe other day had an article strongly condemning the "cattle-ship" treatment of returning wounded soldiers as related "convincingly," as The Globe says, by Sergt. Victory, of the treatment of returning wounded soldiers—"many of the privates were not provided with even third-class accommodation, and were told 'to shift for themselves.'" "One young soldier, a cripple, consigned to a bunk without side protection, rolled out by a lurch of the steamer, and broke his arm."

The Globe, in excuse for this outrageous disregard of the soldiers, who hod done their bit and were coming home in bits, says it is doubtful if the new Government—the "Union" Government—knows of the conditions he described. Nonsense. As between the "new Government" and the old Government in all administrative and maladministrative functions, there has been no break in continuity, no change in responsibility. The treatment of Canadian soldiers, returning and wounded, follows the course of administrative inefficiency, involving neglect and idscomfort, if not worse, to Canadian soldiers all through from the first equipment with rotten boots to hospital inefficiency to the point of scandal.

The Government, after long delay, has permitted the manufacture of oleomargarine in Canada; and accordnig to precedent, two great packing firms have been given the monopoly of making it—one of them the Harris Abattoir Comapny, a variant of the Wm. Davies Company.

A BIG SLICE FOR BILL AND DAN

Dan Mackenzie and Bill Mann, railway and munitions monarchs of Canada, along with several others of their ilk, have just received a fat slice of the Victory Loan, in the form of a contract given to the Universal Steel Company.

The stream of money that flowed from the generosity of the Canadian people had scarcely stopped clinking into the treasury when these great patriots again got their feet into the munitions trough.

The Advertiser is unable to learn whether or not this contract was given by Sir Joseph Flavelle, who remains to-day as the head of the Imperial Munitions Board. But it has a Flavelle look.

It has a Toronto, big interests "amen corner" look. The Victory Loan is being split up among the elect of Canada, among the patriots who thrust a bankrupt railway upon the country and await eagerly for $10,00,000 in ward for stock that the Borden railway commission declared to be worthless.

Let your devout men of Canada look to these things! Is blood-money to be wrung further from the Canadian people by the dynasty that rules the people as the people of another land are ruled? Is the war a further picnic for the profiteers? Where are all Liberal-Unionist professions? Hell is paved with them, but not with the profits of Flavelle, Mann, Mackenzie & Company.

This war is a great conflagration, they tell us. None should hold back the fire-fighters. But who can fight the fire when someone is stabbing the reservoir behind the fire-fighters and letting the quenching fluid run into the barons and the baronets to make their lands fat?—London Advertiser.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

The Y.M.C.A. Men's Class met for supper after their regular class in the gymnasium last night, and a very pleasant time was spent by them. Mr. Gillespie, President of the Association, gave a brief address, which was followed by short speeches by other members of the class. A number of Victrola selections added to the enjoymen of the programme.

Mr. Charles E. Sisson, the popular president of the class, was chairman Twenty-two business men sat down o supper, and nineteen men took advantage of the Business Men's Class in the gymnasium, which is a record attendance for some years.

At the conclusion of the class the older boys' team played against a picked team from the Business Men's Class. The Business Men were defeated by one goal in the last two minutes of the play, after being in the lead throughout the game.

The Business Men's lass is proving perhaps more popular this year than it has for some time past, and a number of men are taking advantage of it this year for the first time, and are very enthusiastic over the results.

Hairs Will Vanish After This Treatment

(Toilet Helps)

You can keep your skin free from hair or fuzz by the occasional use of plain delatone and in using it you need have no fear of marring or injuring the skin. A thick paste is made by mixing some of the powdered delatone with water. Then spread on the hairs and after 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and all traces of hair have vanished. Be careful, however, to get real delatone.

Relief Committee Held Meeting This Morning

The Halifax Relief committee of the City Council held a meeting this morning for the purpose of completing a few details concerning the forwarding of supplies to the devastated city. Several large bales of clothing and blankets were received at the City Hall and ultimately transferred to the Fire Hall, where they will be packed for shipment to Halifax. Every effort is being made to speed up relief.

Ald. Dobbin Trying To Close A Deal For Large Supply of Wood

As a purveyor of fuel, Anderman Dobbin is not only tugging his hair in an effort to arouse inspiration as to where and how he can obtain coal for the city's municipal yard which has been for weeks as bare as the famous cupboard of the nursery rhyme, but he is also pondering the question of bringing in wood. He has had several offers of the latter fuel ranging from maple to tamarac. Its general style is four foot lengths, altogether antiquated in a time and place that must have its wood sawed and split if, in fact, it must bother with coal at all. If canned heat could be bought like canned meat and macaroni, the most of the people wohld be sniffing ing time, sandwiched in with his other comforters article in December weather, hence Alderman Dobbin is findat coal. But the fireless cooker is a er duties, to close several deals for five hundred cords of hardwood and forty tons of tamarac.

If any of the citizens experience difficulty in obtaining fuel they can scarcely blame Ald. Dobbin, who has worked both day and night and perhaps on Sunday trying to arrange for a municipal supply. But one dealer stated not long ago that the expectation in the trade that the city would bring in a large quantity of coal, influenced most of the retailers in their sole dependence upon the regular shipments from the companies with whom they have established connections. Had they forseen the problems of labour and transportation that developed in the business and the official restrictions in both Canada and the United States, conditions that combined to defeat the city's carefully prepared plans, there is no question, it has been stated, but that all the dealers would have followed a different course, using every available means to secure adequate supplies to meet the scarcity that is now causing the dealers and the city officials considerable anxiety.

"Milk"---the Cheapest Food We Can Buy

Says Dr. Hastings, M.O.H.

Peterborough Creamery Milk is not merely a beverage. It is a food. It is the food—the staff of life. No other single food material will form such an all-round, suitable diet as milk. IT IS WHOLESOME. IT IS SAFE. IT IS CHEAP!

Nothing will give you food-value to equal Peterborough Creamery milk at the price. Dr. C. J. Hastings, Medical Officer of Health for Toronto, says in his monthly bulletin: "Milk to-day is the cheapest food we can buy, that is for a given sum we get more all-round value from milk than from any other single food."

Then why not use more milk? The Peterborough Creamary Milk will benefit every member of the family. Combat high meat prices. Economize. Get the Pure, Pasteurized and Clarified Milk from The Homes Cold Without Coal Reported To Chief Thompson To-day

The seriousness of the coal situation has been impressed upon Chief Thompson by the numerous appeals for assistance that he has received during the past two days. Women have gone to him in tears complaining that their supplies of coal were exhausted and their homes are cold. Alhough there are seven or eight coal dealers in this city, only one of them has responded to Chief Thompson's urgings that these extremely necessitous can be immediately relieved.

Apparently in the time of the city's fuel crisis only one of the dealers has supplies for his customers, and at the same time is endeavouring to take care of many of the customers of the other dealers whose condition would otherwise be approaching distress in this zero weather.

CANADA'S DUTY IN REGARD TO THE WORLD FAMINE

Mr. R. R. Hall Speaks With Telling Effect Upon This Subject at Bensfort—Facts Brought Out by John S. Ewart, K.C., Are Used by Mr. Hall.

Mr. R. R. Hall, in his speech last night at Bensfort, spoke with telling effect upon the world's famine and the duty of Canada.

He referred to the facts that were brought out by John S. Ewart, K.C. of Ottawa, a prominent Conservative who is opposing Sir Robert Borden.

These are the facts referred to by Mr. Ewart in support of his contention:

1. "That the world faces a food situation that is nothing short of appalling." (Dr. Robertson.)

2. "That the world's supply of food is not sufficient to feed the world's armies and the civilian population, too." (Lord Northcliffe.)

3. "That it is now vital for the United Kingdom and the Allies in Europe to obtain from Canada foodstuffs in far larger quantities than under peace conditions." (Lord Rhondda.)

"That unless the Allies in Europe are able to import the supplies necessary for feeding their armies and their civil populations, victory may slip from our united grasp." (Lord Rhondda.)

4. That "the fighting efficiency of the Allied forces will be impaired unless Canada awakens to the seriousness of the food problem." (Mr. Hanna.)

5. That "what we ask from the United States and Canada, we cannot procure elsewhere." (Lord Rhondda.)

6. "That the Allies are depending on the continent of North America to a far greater extent than ever before." (Can. Food Bulletin No. 3.)

7. "That there are difficulties in the way. One of them is the shortness of help, which is a very serious question." (Mr. Crerar.)

8. That the shortage of food is "owing to the shortage of labour caused by the war . . . labour has been taken away from the farm, which has produced varying harvests with the result that there is a world shortage of food." (Lord Northcliffe.)

9. That the shortage in the wheat crop of the western European Allies for this year is 570,000,000 bushels; that Canada and the United States together can supply only 200,000,000; and that the Allies' shortage is therefore 370,000,000 bushels.

10. That, notwithstanding those well-known facts, the Borden Government had, to the 30th June last, enlisted for service in Europe 45,797 farmers, of whom 24,592 came from the western provinces.

11. And that, in view of the fact that the United States is ready to ship more men to the Front than can be transported, all suggestion of necessity for Conscription in Canada is absolutely foundationless.

Mr. Hall said, "Sir Robert Borden has taken no steps whatever to lend Government aid to increased food production on a large scale, whereas the Government should lend every aid to make the rich fertile prairies of the North-West grow grain on an extensive scale instead of growing grass."

Mr. Hall stated that he was warned from Ottawa that an appeal was being made to the clergy of the various denominations to pray next Sunday for the success of the so-called Union Government. Mr. Hall said that he could not believe that such an appeal would be acted upon by our clergy. They know that half the people of this country are bitterly opposed to Sir Robert Borden and the profiteers who surround him, and that they know that disunion would be rampant in their own churches. The cause of Christianity would suffer, and that many generous supporters of the Church would withdraw their support from the clergy who prostituted the pulpit to ignoble ends

HERE'S A CHANCE

Any resident of Victoria and Haliburton Counties wishing one of the lithographs of General Hughes for his family may have same mailed without cost by writing a card to J. W. Devell, Lindsay, Ont.—The Lindsay Warder.

According to a native runner from the north country the farmers in Victoria and Haliburton Counties are turning Sir Samuel's picture to the wall. It is a little over a year since the Toronto Star announced that Gen. Hughes, with characteristic modesty, had purchased from a Toronto firm several thousand of the above lithographs for home consumption.

CADET MACKENZIE'S EYES WILL BE SAVED

Mr. C. E. Leonard, the American Consul in Peterborough, has received further word that his nephew, Naval Cadet Kenneth MacKenzie, who has been attending the Naval College at Halifax, although badly lacerated about the face by pieces of glass, will not lose his sight. Both eyes, it was said, would be saved.

Gilbert, H. Kelly, P. Parrington and G. Coleman were appointed to represent the Veterans.

A vote of thanks was tendered the ladies for their efforts.

A resolution congratulating Secretary Whatley upon the manner in which he had presided at the Borden meeting in the armouries was also passed.

The secretary was instructed to write to Mrs. J. Knox and express the sincere thanks of the Veterans for her efforts in helping to organize the Ladies' Auxiliary.

Comrade W. R. Elliott, chairman of the Entertainment committee, wrote tendering his resignation, owing to having secured a position in the Pensions Department, Ottawa, which necessitated his departure from the city.

The Entertainment committee has had the arrangements for the children's Christmas treat in hand, and Comrade Gilbert will carry on as chairman of the committee.

Comrade Hughes reported that Adjutant McElhiney not only promised to have the Temple Band on hand for the Christmas entertainment, but had offered the use of the Salvation Army Temple for the occasion.

It was the feeling of the meeting that the S. A. hall would be more comfortable than the armouries, and it was decided to hold the Christmas treat there on Saturday, Dec. 22nd.

Seven new members were admitted into the ranks of the G.W.V.A. at last night's meeting.

A request from the Red Cross Society for permission to instal a knitting machine in the new club rooms, to be operated by the veterans in their spare time, was granted, on motion of Comrades F. Long and H. Yates.

SOLDIERS OF ANY AGE CAN VOTE

Mr. J. H. Burnham received word this morning from Col. Gillespie to the effect that soldiers in uniform on a visit to friends or relatives, can vote in the constituency in which they are visiting and can vote at any polling booth by walking in and asking the returning officer for a ballot. Boys of any age in uniform, if enlisted in the Canadian Expeditionary Forces, are entitled to vote. The polls will be open from nine o'clock in the morning until five o'clock in the evening.

Body Found In The Woods

Gruesome Find on the Farm of T. D. Young, North Monaghan

The body of a man was found this morning partially buried in the snow on the border of the woods surrounding Mr. T. D. Young's farm, North Monaghan.

Mr. Young's hired man, who had gone into the woods to cut timber, noticed the man's feet, which alone were protruding from a snow bank, and notified Mr. Young, who at once called the police.

LOOTER SHOT AT HALIFAX

on duty in various capacities. On December sixth there were not that many regulars in the whole city, but in the day after the explosion every many in the three local military regiments volunteered for duty. They were promptly despatched to take over various fortified points along the coast, thus relieving the regular garrisons for local duty. More men from engineering, medical and other units are arriving continuously. The great problem at the present moment is that of accommodation. But the situation is improving daily. Two hundred and fifty more men can be quartered in the armouries to-day.

Everywhere there is the closest team work between the military and civil authorities. Hundreds of tons of military supplies have been turned over for the benefit of the suffering.

Capt. McKelvey Bell, Chief Medical Officer, has been asked by the city to take over full charge of the medical relief work. Colonel Potter, Director-General of Medical Services in Canada, is in the city.

The Hosiptal committees are now at work arranging for a military registration of the whole civilian population. Every domicile in the city will be visited and every individual who can not show good cause for being here, will be promptly sent elsewhere. Incoming trains will be inspected at Truro and Windsor. The action follows close on the publishing of the appeal of Mayor Martin to-day for conservation of all help and resources.

The Military put the situation more plainly, "either work or get out." At the present time all the hotels and many private lodging houses are full.

There has been no food scarcity, in fact the hotel menus have been described as in some cases better than they should be. The explosion and the consequent damages to the armouries depot will delay for an indefinite period the calling up of the Nova Scotia draftees. Three out of five Halifax tribunals had finished their sittings. Two of the appeal tribunals were still in session. These have been adjourned until called. Alex. Bond, who presided with the tribunal in St. Josephs' Hall, was killed in his own home, Capt., the Rev. Father Thornton, military representative on one of the appeal boards, was very badly injured. He had only recently returned from France. None of the tribunal records were lost.

BANKS WILL RECEIVE FUNDS FOR HALIFAX

Editor of the Examiner,
Dear Sir,

For the general information of the public, we would be glad if you will make public announcement that all Chartered Banks are prepared to receive and transmit funds for the relief of the stricken city of Halifax

Yours truly,
Peterborough Clearing House Association,
V. Eastwood, Chairman.

Orphans' Committee Is Named

Canadian Press Despatch:

With men it's wine, women and song; with women it's ice cream soda, men, grand opera and chicken salad.

To Keep Skin Healthy, Youthful, Wrinkleless

Now that the social season is here, be especially careful to keep your skin in fine condition. You know how conspicuous complexion defects appear under the bright light of the drawing or ball room. Also how very evident are some makeups when similarly illuminated. I have myself discarded cosmetics entirely, using a process which gives far better results, and which leaves no trace on the skin. At night I smear on a (thin coat of ordinary mercolised wax, washing it off next morning. This gradually absorbs the devitalised particles of surface skin; just as gradually the more youthful skin beneath comes forth, providing a complexion as clear, smooth and delicately tinted as a young girl's. Get an ounce of mercolised wax at your druggist's and try this remarkable treatement.

Remember, too, that wrinkles, even the finer lines, are not easily concealed in a brilliantly lighted room. You can quickly obliterate these hateful marks by bathing your face in a solution of powdered saxolite, one-half pint. And your face won't look sticky, as after using lotion.

The session was in progress this afternoon.

Board Of Appeal Still In Session

The Board of Appeal, which is in session in the City Council Chamber in connection with the appeals respecting omissions and mistakes in the voters' lists will complete its duties to-morrow night. All cases that have not been dealt with by to-morrow night will go by the board, as the Board is not authorized to sit after to-morrow.

The Board is making good progress with the large list of appeals, and there will be very few, if any, left over.

THE WEATHER

Decidedly cold weather prevails at the present time over the greater portion of the continent. The local temperature this morning was 12 degrees below zero. This is much the lowest of the season. The two extremes of temperature yesterday were 50 degrees below zero, at Dawson City, and 74 above at San Diego, Cal. Down as far south at Florida and New Orleans the thermometer was down close to the freezing point.—W. P.

ST. PAUL'S CHURCH TO SEND RELIEF

Appeal is Made to All Members of the Congregation to Assist in the Work

A meeting was held in the Guild room of St. Paul's church Monday afternoon to decide upon some method of giving immediate relief to the sufferers in Halifax. A large committee was appointed to deal with the situation. It was decided to make an appeal to all members of St. Paul's to assist with gifts of clothing of all kinds. The Sunday school hall will be open every day this week to receive what may be sent in. Clothing must be in good condition.

It was also decided to make new clothing. A number of sewing machines are already in the Sunday school hall, and all who can are asked to come and assist in the making of garments. Gifts of money will also be received to purchase material. Those who find it more convenient are asked to leave their gifts at either Mr. Mason's or Mr. McDermid's Drug Store. What is done must be done at once.

Big Bazaar A Big Success

Entire Lower Floor Converted Into Miniature Fairy Land

The centre of attraction for the busy Christmas shopper and pleasure seeker proved again to-day to be St. Alphonsus Lyceum, where the week's bazaar, under the auspices of the Church of the Immaculate Conception which was opened yesterday by Dean McColl, is now in full swing. If business keeps up as rapidly during the next few days the S. O. S. call for fresh supplies will probably be sent out in the near future.

THE BOOTHS.

The entire lower floor has been transformed into a miniature fairy land by brilliant and attractively decorated booths. The candy booth which is probably the most popular for the casual visitor, is exceedingly artistic with its colour scheme of purple and white. Of this booth Mrs. W. J. Abraham, Mrs. Fred Sullivan, Mrs. Frank J. Hickey, Miss Genevieve Sullivan, Miss Maud Theobald, Miss Carr, Miss Beatrice Lalonde, Miss Nora Coughlin and Miss Bernice Giroux are in charge.

The handkerchief and boudoir cap booth, stocked with the daintiest of hand-made articles, is in charge of Mrs. David Conroy, Misses Madelyn Rutherford, Mrs. McCoy, Josephine Conroy and Dora Lafferty.

The children's booth, where wonderful dolls and toys are sold is in charge of Mrs. John Primeau, Mrs. J. Ball, and Mrs. L. McCoy.

The apron and clothing booth is in charge of Mesdames V. McMurray, T. McGrath, T. Turkett, Jos. Garvey, Denis Maloney, Jos. Collins, and Miss Nora Devlin.

The fancy work booth is in charge of Mesdames J. C. Sullivan, Milan, Hummell, Dillon, McCabe and J. Daly.

The lottery booth—Mrs. S. Corkery, Mrs. O'Rourke, Miss A. Tobin, Mrs. McAuliffe, Mrs. J. Grisdale and Miss A. Sullivan.

The Stationary—Miss Coughlin and Sodality.

The fish pond, popular alike to young and old, is in charge of Mrs. E. Lane, Miss A. Simons and Miss O'Heron.

The tobacco booth reflects great credit on the ingenuity of those who gave it the realistic 'Turkish' finish, and is in charge of Mesdames E. Conroy, B. Law and F. Shannon.

THE LUNCH ROOM.

A series of exclamations of delight were called forth from the scores who had luncheon to-day at the bazaar on beholding the artistic and tasteful transformation of the lunch room. The decorations represent hours of patient and clever work—flags draped, bouquets of flowers and magnificent Egyptian tapestry. Mrs. (Dr.) J. Perry, Mrs. J. Shannon, Mrs. H. J. Hamilton, Mrs. Ed. Conroy and Mrs. G. Hynes are responsible for the work. Mrs. P. J. Doris has spared no time or ingenuity in managing the supplies and her efficient services are greatly appreciated and admired by all connected with the bazaar. Her work represents a world of unselfish devotion and thought, which cannot be over-estimated. Mrs. W. J. Hamilton is convenor of the lunch-room and the ladies in charge are Mrs. G. Hynes, Miss McAuliffe, Miss Clancy, Mrs. B. Law, Miss N. McCauley, Mrs. J. J. Doris, Miss Irene Doris, Miss Croft, Mrs. Daly, Mrs. Madden, Mrs. Fred Shannon, Miss Rice, Miss O'Connor, Miss Leahy, Mrs. J. F. Crowley, Miss A. Kelly, Mrs. B. Hunter, Miss M. O'Brien, Miss O'Brien, Miss Flynn, Mrs. Conway, Mrs. Jas. Dillon, Mrs. McGrath, Mrs. Richard Sheehy.

THE CASH.

Mrs. M. McFadden, Mrs. J. Crowley, Mrs. John Corkery, Mrs. Louis Laplante, Mrs. C. Dunn, are in charge of the cash in the lunch room.

Peterborough Home Visitation Plans Being Perfected

Visitation is Planned For the Afternoon of Friday, January 4th—All Churches Will Co-operate

Plans are being perfected to conduct in this city, under the auspices of the Ontario Sunday School Association, and promoted by a co-operative committee representing the Peterborough Sunday School Association, the Protestant Misterial Association, and representatives of the Jewish synagogue. The co-operation of the Roman Catholic church is being sought.

The home visitation plan is a systematically organized interdenominational movement through which every home in the city can be visited in a few hours. Its purpose is to place a printed invitation in every home, inviting all the people to attend the church or synagogue and Sunday school of their choice; and to secure a record of the church connection or preference of every individual, which is given to the pastor, priest, rabbi, or organization preferred.

It is needed everywhere, because there are many in the best organized communities not in touch with any church, synagogue or Sunday school. The greatest peril to religious interests is not a weakness within any organized expression of religion, but the numbers and the influence of the forces without. Many cities have only about fifty per cent. of their population connected with any religious organization, yet fully ninety-four per cent. of the more than forty-seven million people visited through home visitation has expressed a religious preference.

In Toronto.

The city of Toronto conducted, on Nov. 9th, 1917, a complete visitation. About 6,000 workers from the churches, Sunday schools and synagogues of that city visited the half million population in three hours. The ministers, rectors and rabbis as well as a multitude of workers are enthusiastic in praise of the results.

The Peterborough visitation is planned for the afternoon of Friday, January 4th, 1918. Each of the participating churches, etc., will be asked to select and appoint a number of visitors. These will be asked to meet on Thursday night, January 3rd, for instruction. It is expected that all the information will be in the possession of each church and pastor by Sunday, January 6th, 1918.

Church Destroyed and Congregation Dead or Injured.

HALIFAX, N.S., Dec. 10.—Practically the entire congregation of St. Joseph's Roman Catholic Church was either killed or injured. The church itself is a mass of ruins.

Mr. Ledieux, representing Casavant Bros., of St. Hyacinthe, Que., was in the church at the time of the explosion superintending the installation of a ne worgan. The organ was overturned with Ledieux underneath, but he escaped with only slight injuries.

Jim and Lydia.

In loving memory of Thomas Parsons, who was killed in the Quaker Oats Disaster, 11th December, 1916.
Gone, but not forgotten.
One precious to our hearts has gone
A voice we loved is stilled;
The place made vacant in our home
Can never more be filled.

Our Father in His wisdom called
The boon His love had given;
And though in earth his body lies,
His soul is safe in heaven.

When one we loved was called away.

Halifax, Dec. 10. —Captain Lamedon of the munitions ship Mont Blanc whose explosion caused such a fearful catastrophe here on Thursday has issued a statement insisting that his ship was on its right course and that the Norwegian ship bore down on them, in spite of warning signals. When his ship was in flames the crew took to the boats and all were saved except a gunner who died of shock, when the explosion occurred after they had landed.

While the British flag will fly over the city, French and Italian flags will be placed over their national property, such as convents and schools.

May Name Street After The President

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By John Hearley.)

ROME, Dec. 11.—President Wilson's name may be given to one of the principal streets in the eternal city, in grateful commemoration of America's aid to Italy in the great war. Such a plan was urged to-day by the Patriotic Association of Trento Trieste. Formal resolutions were adopted urging the Mayor of Rome to take action.

Rome was still celebrating America's war declaration against Austria to-day. One of the most impressive demonstrations in the history of the city took place before the American Embassy.

One Man Was Found Stone Dead With A Hammer In His Hand

Team of Horses Lay on Streets With Harness Still on Their Backs—Dogs Whimper Mournfully in the Ruins, Looking For the Homes They Knew.

LIKE RUINED POMPEII

HALIFAX, Dec. 12.—Amid all the scenes of death and desolation in this stricken city there is no place that contains such a sickening aggregation of human misery as Camp Hill Hospital. Here hundreds of dead and injured lie in so many rows of mangled heaps scarcely recognisable in life or in death. Hedical hospital supplies pour in at one door, and coffins, some of them crudely made by sailors, make a melancholy procession from another door.

In one bed there lies a woman with half her skull blown away. Her face is fearfully mutilated, and she is merely waiting for the death that will bring relief. She was found in a sitting posture on a broken bed by her husband after the wreck. Clasped to her breast was her tiny baby dead and blackened by the muck and the cinders.

This is no isolated case.

In the same institution on a kitchen table one doctor operated on the injured for 24 hours at a stretch with the moans of the dying about his ears, and with the fearful stench of blood all around.

As It Was in Pompeii.

Scenes not less remarkable than those enacted in Pompeii were discovered in the Hillis foundry in the centre of the wrecked area. One forgeman was found stone dead with his hammer raised in his hand just as he had had it in life before the frightful hurricane of death swept over the building.

Further down the road lie a team of horses fallen where they stood on what was once a part of Barrington Street. The animals just look as if they had fallen and the harness is still on their back. The driver, who is thought to have been the father of a little orphan picked up later, has not been heard of since.

Two miles beyond, splinters of the Mont Blanc, and a portion of her anchor, were found, showing the terrific force of the explosion.

One naval officer had two legs blown off. Others walk the street in misery with bandaged heads, arms in slings, plastered faces, and other injuries.

Dogs whimper mournfully among the ruins looking for their homes that used to be. One poor collie limped among the sightseers who congregated here to-day, wailing pitifully in its distress. Man and beast alike did not escape from the terrible death-blast.

"UNIONIST" FACTIONISTS BECOME THE PIONEERS OF NATIONAL DISUNION

Necessity of the People Uniting for Self-Protection Against the Sinister Leadership of Wealth, Monopoly and Cupidity of Gain

With the name of God eternally on their hypocritical lips, the leaders of Unionism in Canada have set out to debauch public opinion and to besmirch the honour and glory of their country. "'Tis a dirty bird that fouls its own nest."

The cloven hoof of the Big Interests is seen in the electioneering campaign of the Union Government. Thousands of dollars are being expended in order that the control of Government in Canada, which was wrested from the people in 1911, shall remain as the class privilege and class right of the Corporations.

"Canada will be ranked with Russia!" is the cry of Sir John Willison and Mr. Joseph Atkinson, the Unionist Publicity Committee. "Canada will be ranked with Russia!" Such is the despairing appeal of Unionism to the basest passions of the unbridled mob!

"The war will be prolonged and the death-roll among Canadians will be lengthened!" What care these men how much they may harrow the souls of the women of Canada, whose sons are fighting that that war-profiteers at home may eat, drink and be merry!

"In Canada there are all the elements and conditions which offer a fruitful field for Germans agents!" This despicable attempt to besmirch the good name of a country that has emblazoned on her war banners the immortal names of Ypres, Langemarck, St. Julien, Vimy Ridge and Passchendaele, is a disgrace to men who call themselves Canadians, and who cloak their factionism under the name of Unionism.

These are the men who have conscripted men and exempted wealth from its adequate contribution to the burdens of the war!

These are the men who have condoned the misgovernment, graft and coruption of the past three years, and who have refurbished the rusty weapons of medievalism in a last desperate effort to stifle the voice of public opinion in Canada!

These are the men who have prostituted the Press of Canada to the basest ends of partyism and faction, and who have not scrupled to hire the moral assassin to carry on his nefarious practices, at a time when the country calls for unity in face of the enemy!

"The leaders have united, the people must unite!" But the common sense of the people of Canada has led them to distinguish between those who are really leaders and those who are blind leaders of the blind.

The leaders of Unionism have united to maintain the Big Interests in power in Canada, to protect the wealth of the Big Interests against a fair measure of taxation for war purposes and to destroy the freedom of the Press!

The people are united behind Sir Wilfrid Laurier for a real Union Government that shall represent that unity of national sentiment without which Canada is unfitted to take her place among the nations of the Empire, or to play her part effectively in this great war!—Junius.

The people want to govern themselves and not be governed by the Big Interests.

A vote for Mr. Hall is a vote for the people.

CATTLE MARKET

Union Stock Yards — Receipts, 23 cars, with 299 cattle, 81 calves, 321 hogs, and 196 sheep and lambs.

Receipts were very light yesterday, stock in many places in the country being held back by the snow blockade. The result was only about 23 cars of fresh stock, all told, offering on the early morning market. A number of cars arrived later, but were not offered on yesterday's market. At the same time there was a let-up in the demand, probably as a result of yesterday's heavy buying. The market, though quiet, held steady, particularly for anything in the line of choice butcher.

There was an acute shortage of hogs as a result of the blockade and prices jumped to $18.25 fed and watered, $18.50 being paid for one deck.

"THE FILM OF FEAR"

By ARNOLD FREDERICKS

Entering, he made his way to Miss Morton's apartment. The place was just as he had left it two days before. The windows had all been tightly closed and fastened, and there were no further mysterious messages lying about. Once more Duvall went to Ruth Morton's room, and opening the two windows looked out.

His investigations, however, told him no more than he had learned before. The three dormer windows in the home next door gazed vacantly down at him, their windows being covered with cobwebs and dust. The impossibility of anyone making their way from even the nearest of them, to the window where he stood, was manifest. And that a long rod or pole could have been utilized to introduce the letters into the girl's room was even more impossible. He shook his head, then turned to the other window, that facing upon the fire escape.

Here, as on the occasion of his previous examination, the smooth glossy surface of the freshly dried paint showed no marks except those he had himself made during his former visit.

And yet as his eyes searched the grated surface, he saw that there was something there, something that had not been there before. He reached out and picked it up.

It was a woman's handkerchief, a tiny square of lace-edged linen, of an inexpensive variety. But it was not the mere presence of the handkerchief that so interested him. It might readily have belonged to Miss Morton herself and have been accidentally dropped from the window. There were two things about this particular handkerchief, however, that marked it for a clue of the utmost value. One was the fact that in its corner was embroidered an initial, the letter "F." The other was that two of the corners of the handkerchief were knotted together, as though it had been tied about someone's wrist, for what reason he could not imagine.

The latter feature puzzled the detective greatly. He could not form any hypothesis to account for it. If the Ford woman, as indicated by the presence of the handkerchief marked with an "F," had been on the fire escape, why were there no tell tale marks to indicate it? And if she had not been there, why was her handkerchief found there, knotted in this peculiar way? Had it formed part of some apparatus, some device, made of a pole and a cord, for inserting the threatening letters through the window? If so, it might, of course, have become detached while the device was being used. Duvall remembered he had not examined the fire escape on the night when the astonishing apparition had appeared beside Ruth Morton's bed, because the window opening on the fire escape had been closed and locked. Had the handkerchief been left there then? He sat for a long time in the deserted library trying to think upon some reasonable theory to explain the matter, but his efforts resulted in failure. Not the least confusing feature was the fact that the woman, Marcia Ford, was not the woman he was seeking. He had seen her at the studio that morning, and knew that she was not the one who had escaped from the cab the night before. Were then two girls working together? If so, he would through the Ford girl, in all probability be able to trace her confederate. He waited patiently until the waning afternoon light told him that it was time to begin his watch before the house at number 162.

Across the street a residence closed for the summer, its front entrance boarded up, afforded him a convenient place to wait. He sat down upon the step and pretended to be occupied with a newspaper. His eyes, however, sought constantly the doorway opposite.

A number of persons entered the place during the next two hours, but Marcia Ford was not amongst them. As the darkness began to approach and lights in the streets and houses flared up, Duvall rose, crossed the street and stationed himself at a nearer point, from which he might the more certainly identify anyone entering the house. Miss Ford, however, failed to appear.

From the sign in the window to the effect that roomers were wanted, Duvall concluded that the Ford girl did not take her meals in the house. His watch showed him that it was nearly seven. Doubtless she had arranged to dine before returning home. In a flash it came to him that his opportunity to make an examination of her room was now at hand.

To secure entrance to the room by the usual channel was clearly out of the question. The people at the boarding house would, of course, not permit it. But could he discover the means of communication, whatever they were between Miss Morton's apartment and the girl's room, he might be able to enter the latter unknown and unobserved. He had thought of attempting this during the afternoon, but realized that he could not hope to accomplish it in broad daylight without being seen by the occupants of the neighboring buildings, and perhaps arrested as a burglar or a sneak thief.

With a last glance down the street, he hastened back to the apartment building and made his way to Mrs. Morton's flat. Passing quickly through Ruth Morton's bedroom, he climbed out upon the fire escape and looked about.

Below him were the rear yards of the houses fronting on the next street. To the right he could seen the bulk of the apartment building, blocking his view of the avenue beyond. To the left were the rear buildings of the adjoining houses. It was quite dark, the sky was starless but all about him gleamed the lights in the windows of the neighbouring buildings.

Neither to the right, nor to the left was there any possible way by which access to the point where he now stood could be gained. From below it was possible, although his previous examination had showed him both the fact that the newly painted surface of the fire escape was unmarred and that the ladder at the lower floor was drawn up some nine or ten feet from the ground. He felt certain that Miss Ford had not reached Ruth's room in that way.

He glanced upward. The fire escape stopped at the level of the floor above. To ascend from it to the roof was impossible.

Remembering that the top apartment was vacant, Duvall re-entered the building and hunting up the janitor told him that he desired to get out on the roof.

The man remembered him from his first visit and the inquiries he then made about the tenants of the apartment above.

"I am making some special inquiries on Mrs. Morton's behalf," he explained. "You can go with me, if you like, to see that I do nothing I shouldn't."

The janitor joined in the laugh.

"I'm not worrying," he rejoined, "but I'll go along just the same to show you the way." He led the detective up one flight of stairs and, going to the end of the outer hall, unlocked and opened a small door beside the elevator shaft. A short spiral staircase was disclosed.

Snapping on the electric light, the man ascended the steps, and after fumbling for a moment with the catch, threw open a trapdoor leading to the roof. In a moment both he and Duvall had climbed out upon the tiled surface. Duvall went to the edge which overlooked the house adjoining and peered down. He at once saw something that interested him.

The house with the dormer windows consisted, as had been previously mentioned, of four stories and an attic. Its roof rose several feet above the level of the window of Ruth's room which was on the fourth floor of the apartment building. But Duvall saw at once that this elevation of the adjoining house did not extend all the way back, but in fact stopped a little beyond the point where it joined the apartment. From here to the rear of the lot the building had no attic, its rear extension being but four stories high. In this position on the apartment house roof the roof of the back building was at least fifteen feet below him.

Another thing he noticed at once was the fact that the second house, No. 132, was of almost the same design as the first, that is, it consisted of a main building with an attic and a rear extension, reaching to the same level as that of the house between. It was clear that if anyone living in the second house could obtain access to the roof of the back building, he would be able to walk across that of the first or adjoining house, and reach a point directly beneath where he stood.

But, granting the possibility of this, of what use would it be? A person on the roof below him would in no conceivable way be able to reach either of the windows of Ruth Morton's room. Was it possible that an opening had been made through the wall of the apartment building itself? He thought it unlikely, but determined to investigate.

The janitor grinned.

"How are you going to do it?" he asked.

"Haven't you a ladder—a rope?"

The man thought a moment.

"I've got a short ladder in the cellar, only about eight feet long, I guess. I'm afraid it would not do."

"Yes it would," replied Duvall, pointing to the roof of the attic portion of the house below. "I'll get down to the roof of the main part of the house first and from there to the roof of the back building. An eight foot ladder will be long enough for that. Bring it up, will you?"

The man hesitated.

"I don't just like this idea of going on other people's roofs," he said.

THE JOY OF MOTHERHOOD

Words of Encouragement to Childless Women.

Motherhood is woman's natural destiny, but many women are denied the happiness of children simply because of some curable derangement.

Among the many triumphs of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is its marvelous power to overcome such derangements, as evidenced by the following letter:—

Worcester, Mass.—"I suffered from female ills, and was advised to have an operation, but a friend who had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and who has six children, told me to try it. It has helped me so much that I am now well and have a baby boy who is the picture of health, and I thank the Vegetable Compound for my restoration to health."—MRS. BERT GARVEY, 20 Hacker St., Worcester, Mass.

In many other homes, once childless, there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal, healthy and strong.

Hardening of the Arteries A Much Dreaded Condition

Resulting From Sluggish Action of the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels

FROM the day of birth the structure and condition of the human body is always changing. Mature growth is attained at about 25, and then bodily decay begins. Muscular strength is greatest in the twenties, trained muscles are best controlled by the brain between 30 and 40, and the brain is at its best between 40 and 50.

The elastic skin and coating of the arteries are first to show age. In middle life there is a tendency to eat too much and to exercise too little. Healthy flesh is muscle and flesh cells are alive and active. Fat cells are filled with lifeless oil. As fat increases unduly the organs are impaired in their functions, blood pressure runs high, arteries harden, power of thought is impaired, and some day there comes a "shock" due to the bursting inside the brain of one of the degenerated and too highly stretched arteries.

The surest way to avoid this condition is to keep the liver, kidneys and bowels healthy and active by the use of such treatment as Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This will to some extent take the place of exercise in keeping the blood pure and the circulaton good. It will prevent the pains and aches which are associated with poisons in the system and greatly prolong life.

Much suffering from indigestion, constipation, backache, and bodily pains can be entirely avoided by this well-known regulator of the digestive and excretory organs.

Certified Statement

Mr. Neil A. Cameron, Kiltarlity, N.S., writes: "I am glad to recommend Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to anyone who is suffering from rheumatism. For about twenty-five years I was bothered more or less from this affliction. I was treated by doctors all over Nova Scotia, and when on business in New York had an opportunity to consult one of the greatest specialists there, but I never gained more than temporary relief. In an effort to get rid of the accumulating development of the disease I tried Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and when I had taken eight boxes I was, to my astonishment, totally cured. I therefore heartily recommend these Pills to all who suffer from rheumatism, and anyone who doubts this testimonial may write me as proof to the contrary."

Rev. James A. Collins, P.P., says: "This is to certify that I am personally acquainted with Mr. Neil A. Cameron, and believe his statement is true, and to my personal knowledge correct."

To the Electors of East Peterboro

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—

I believe no greater disaster could, at the present time, befall our country than the defeat of the Borden Union Administration at the polls on December 17th.

The Policy of this Administration is the speedy and continuous reinforcements of our Canadian troops on the battle-front; and the putting forth of all our National strength for the cause of civilization and freedom.

To carry out this Policy, a number of Canada's ablest Public men of vision—sinking for the present—all political differences now stand together—strong to battle for the right—united to WIN the WAR.

For over three years thousands of Loyal Canadians of many creeds and of different Nationalities, have stood shoulder to shoulder on the Battlefields of Europe, gallantly fighting a common foe, and sometimes standing; sometimes falling, have won for the name of Canada undying fame. Shall we, with all possible speed, send help to these, our heroic defenders now holding the battle-line or shall we, break faith with them as well as "with those who die"—delay—vote—while the enemy advances?

As a Union Candidate in this Riding, I am putting forth every effort to win East Peterborough to the support of the Borden Union Administration and if elected shall to the utmost of my ability support the same.

To this end I now earnestly solicit the co-operation and influence of every loyal, patriotic man and woman in East Peterborough.

I have the honor to be, faithfully yours,

CURIOUS INDIAN ROCK PAINTINGS

MANY a mystery remains to be solved concerning the Indian in his earliest stage of tribal existence. Especially is this so regarding the rock paintings, or the crude art known as petrography, some fine specimens of which are to be seen on the Banff-Windermere Road, south of Golden, B.C., on the C. P. R.

It is thought that these aboriginal picture drawings succeeded an earlier sign language, though picture writing is of a very ancient date, as from it came the graphic systems of Egypt, Assyria, and China. On the American continent, the Aztecs were picture writers and rock painters. The art, if it may be so termed, is related to that of the Indian picture signs drawn on the tent or tepee, or upon tree bark or animal skins.

Some of the rock drawings still traceable on this continent can be interpreted, but many others await translation, as do the signs of the illiterate language of the past. Schoolcraft, the Indian authority, speaks of the pictographic work of the Ojibways, which he specially studied. The entire system is a symbolic one, as no doubt was the case with the Windermere examples here illustrated. Figurative signs were made to interpret their magic medicines or features of their nature religion, while hunting and war songs are also included in the list of pictures. The Iroquois, Hurons and Algonquins have left evidences of their petrography as import it events were recorded on stone, bark and skin. The ancient painter, with nothing but his fingers and paint pots, was held in as high esteem as the medicine man.

The second illustration here shown deals with the splendid specimens found on the great Missanoga Rock, on the lake of that name, ten miles north of Kalndar station of the C. P. R., in Ontario. These come out very clear when wet, the dull red hematitie then showing a remarkable clearness. Many objects may be here studied, such as a man on horseback, a canoe with a man standing in it; a moose and a dog and a tree, suggesting a hunting scene. It is thought they may form records of olden battles fought between the Algonquins or Hurons of the north and the Iroquois of the south.

One would like the curtain of time to be rolled back long enough to see the bronzed artist of long ago at work, and to learn from him something of the significance of his gallery of rock paintings that now baffle his successor, the pale face.

Final Appeal Judge Gives Ruling on Exemption of Farmers

Mr. Justice Duff (the Final Court of Appeal) Declares it is Essential that there shall be No Diminution in Agricultural Production.

(Published by authority of Director of Public Information, Ottawa.)

Hon. Mr. Justice Duff gave judgment on December 6th, in the first test case brought before him, as Central Appeal Judge (the final court of appeal), for the exemption of a farmer. The appeal was made by W. H. Rowntree in respect of his son, W. J. Rowntree, from the decision of Local Tribunal, Ontario, No. 421, which refused a claim for exemption. The son was stated to be an experienced farm hand, who had been working on the farm continuously for the past seven years, and ever since leaving school. He lives and works with his father, who owns a farm of 150 acres near Weston, Ontario. With the exception of a younger brother, he is the only male help of the father on the farm. The father is a man of advanced years.

In granting the man exemption "until he ceases to be employed in agricultural labor," Mr. Justice Duff said:

"The Military Service Act does not deal with the subject of the exemption of persons engaged in the agricultural industry; and the question which it is my duty to decide is whether the applicant being and having been, as above mentioned, habitually and effectively engaged in agriculture and in labor essential to the carrying on of agricultural production, ought to be exempted under the provisions of the Military Service Act.

"These two propositions are indisputable:

"(1) In order that the military power of the allies may be adequately sustained, it is essential that in this country and under the present conditions, there should be no diminution in agricultural production.

"(2) The supply of competent labor available for the purpose of agricultural production is not abundant, but actually is deficient.

"The proper conclusion appears to be that the applicant, a competent person, who had been habitually and effectively engaged in labor essential to such production, ought not to be withdrawn from it.

"It is perhaps unnecessary to say that such exemptions are not granted as concessions on account of personal hardship, still less as a favor to a class. The sole ground of them is that the national interest is the better served by keeping these men at home. The supreme necessity (upon the existence of which, as its preamble shows, this policy of the Military Service Act is founded) that leads the State to take men by compulsion and put them in the fighting line requires that men shall be kept at home who are engaged in work essential to enable the State to maintain the full efficiency of the combatant forces, and whose places cannot be taken by others not within the class called out."

Ottawa, Dec. 8, 1917.

GREAT WORK OF THE R. F. C.

The work being done by the Royal Flying Corps is hardly realized. This organization has accomplished wonders since its inception here about a year ago, having established five aerodromes (with a sixth under way) for training young Canadians as Aviators, and employs a staff of hundreds of officers to give instruction in flying, theory of flight, aerial gunnery, observation, photography, wireless telegraphy and the many branches of military aeronautics.

For the present two wings (180 machines) have been taken to Texas for winter training, and one wing (90 machines) has remained in North Toronto, where they are developing for the first time in Northern North America continuous mid-winter flying.

The factory at Toronto, owned by the British Government, employs over two thousand skilled artisians, and is now turning out aeroplanes for training purposes at the rate of about five per day. Each machine costs approximately $7,66; therefore, the value of one year's output is about $11,400,000, which of course, will be increased as time goes on.

SAGE TEA DANDY TO DARKEN HAIR

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Colour and Lustre to Hair

You can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost over night if you'll get a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of this old famous Sage Tea Recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, are sold annually, says a well-known druggist here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning gray or becoming faded have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound to-night and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.

This preparation is a toilet requisite and is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

Presidential Golf.

At the Columbia Country club links at Washington during one of the tensest days of the crisis with Germany President Wilson came up to drive from one of the most difficult tees. Two members of the club stood aside to let the president "go through." That's the way they have at Washington. The President drove, and his ball shot off into precisely the place where he didn't want it to go. Experiences of that sort come even to chief magistrates; golf is no respecter of persons. The president turned to the two and remarked, "You see even out here I can't keep out of trouble."

"Vermin Fences."

The state of South Australia has, since 1891, erected 29,148 miles of "vermin fences," enough to encircle the globe and with the remnant build a double line of fence along the southern border of the United States. When contracts now running are completed the mileage will be much increased. New South Wales has spent more than $27,000,000 for rabbit extermination and has within its borders 98,000 miles of fence.

THE MEDICAL OFFICER

BY H. HOWES

Everyone knows something of the work of the doctor at the Front, of the day and night toil in advanced dressing stations during a big push, when the wounded come back in a continuous stream, of the wonderful surgery, of the elaborate sanitary work, of the travelling laboratories, of the testing of all water before it is drunk, of all that labour which has kept great armies healthy and free of epidemics, though fighting under conditions which in the past would have swept them away with disease. But this work has already been begun in the training camps at home. There the men have learned some of the simple rules of health, how to avoid the conditions which cause disease, and how to care for themselves under the rough life and harder work of the army. They have lived under the continual care of their medical officers. But let us see the medical officer of a battalion at work on his daily camp routine.

It is 8 o'clock in the morning, and he is sitting at a table in the cubicle of one of the long iron huts. There is a shelf with bottles along one side. The attendant "sick orderly" calls out, "A Company." The duty N.C.O. of the company steps forward and hands in his sick report. On it are the names of all those men who before early morning parade that day had answered his call of "Anyone going sick?" And against their names are written their lengths of service, religions, and the numbers of their huts. At the end are two columns still to fill in, one for the diagnosis, the other for disposal.

The first man's name is called.

"Well," says the doctor, "what's wrong with you?"

"Heart feels a bit queer, sir," says the man.

"Take your coat off."

The man's heart is tested with a stethoscope, and he steps out and falls in again wih the men of his company. Meanwhile the doctor has entered D.A.H. (disordered action of the heart) in the first of the vacant columns and "three days' light duty, coming up for re-examination."

The second on the list steps in. He should have gone on a route march, but suddenly developed illness.

"What's the matter with you?"

"Pain in he back, sir."

The doctor looks at him. "Take those pills and go on duty at once." The man steps out, looking very ill-pleased, and the doctor writes "medicine and duty" against his name.

The next case is obviously ill. He is feverish and breathing with difficulty. But when asked the usual question, he answers: "Bit of a cold, sir."

"When did you feel this coming on?" says the doctor.

"On Tuesday, sir."

"Why didn't you report sick before?"

"I thought it was nothing, sir."

"You should not think. You ought to have come before."

He examines the man, calls in the orderly and writes, "pneumonia" and "hospital" in the two columns.

The next case is an accident. The man had been cutting bread with a patent bread cutters and got his fingers where bread should have been. He unwraps the handkerchief that is round it and shows a jagged, rough cut.

"Nasty place," says the doctor. "Want to be careful with it."

"Yes, sir."

"Go to the orderly. He will wash and bandage it for you. You are excused duty. Come again to-morrow, and be very careful."

The doctor signs the report for A Company. It is given to the duty N.C.O., and he marches his men back to the company lines, all but the pneumonia case. He has already gone to hospital. B Company follows A, and between nine and half-past, all the patients have been seen. But the doctor is still only at the beginning of his day. There are a hundred men chosen for the next draft overseas, who all have to be medically examined and passed as fit before they can be sent; there are duties at the camp hospital and there is a lecture to be delivered to recruits on personal cleanliness, on hygiene, on the care of the feet after route marching. It is a full day, but in the course of such full days as these, the doctor comes to know his men—the men who will hardly confess to being ill; the men who make nervously much of little, the men who can usually find something the matter with themselves if there is a duty they would escape. He knows the type as well as he knows the symptoms of illness.

His day of anxiety comes when one morning a man reports sick with infectious disease. The sending of him to the isolation hospital is only the beginning of the work. His hut is cleansed and disinfected. The men who share it with him are sent for at once, examined, and put in quarantine. They can attend no parades, but will do such drills as they can among themselves, for their training must go on. The canteens, the dining hut, all the places where other men go are forbidden them. Their meals are carried to their door. If the disease is dangerous, they do not stay in their own hut, but are sent into an isolation camp at some distance from the main camp, and there they have their own kitchen and do everything for themselves. Every precaution is rigorously and promptly taken. Nowhere is infectious disease more quickly attacked than in a camp. For nowhere can it be more dangerous.

The medical officer's duties do not end with the daily care of the health of his battalion. There are periodical courses to be given to officers and men on sanitation. There are men detailed for the water cart to be drilled in its uses, there is instruction in first aid and stretcher work. There are many things for him to do, and more for him to supervise, if the battalion is to live healthily in its training camp and to go overseas well equipped for continuing healthy in the rougher makeshift life of billets and trenches.

The sense of refreshing cleanliness that follows the use of a real scalp prophylactic, is comforting in the extreme

Hot Water Each Morning Puts Roses in Your Cheeks

To look one's best and feel one's best is to enjoy an inside bath each morning to flush from the system the previous day's waste, sour fermentations and poisonous toxins before it is absorbed into the blood. Just as coal, when it burns, leaves behind a certain amount of incombustible material in the form of ashes, so the food and drink taken each day leave in the alimentary organs a certain amount of indigestible material, which if not eliminated, form toxins and poisons which are then sucked into the blood through the very ducts which are intended to suck in only nourishment to sustain the body.

If you want to see the glow of healthy bloom in your cheeks, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, you are told to drink every morning upon arising, a glass of hot water with teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, which is a harmless means of washing the waste material and toxins from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, thus cleansing, sweetening, and purifying the entire alimentary tract, before putting more food into the stomach.

Girls and women with sallow skins, liver spots, pimples or pallid complexion, also those who wake up with a coated tongue, bad taste, nasty breath, others who are bothered with headaches, bilious spells, acid stomach, or constipation should begin this phosphated hot water drinking, and are assured of very pronounced results in one or two weeks.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs very little at the drug store but is sufficient to demonstrate that just as soap and hot water cleanses, puifies, and freshens the skin on the outside, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the inside organs. We must always consider that internal sanitation is vastly more important than outside cleanliness, because the skin pores do not absorb imprities into the blood, while the bowel pores do.

Women who desire to enhance the beauty of their complexion should just try this for a week and notice results.

A GERMAN INTRIGUE.

Secured Material for Explosives from England.

The little English army which withstood the legions of Prussia at Mons and in northern France was decimated by high explosive shells, the principal components of which came in all probability from the British Isles. Such is the reasonable inference from recent revelations regarding German connections with the coal tar by-products industry of Great Britain in the years immediately preceding the outbreak of the war.

By an ingenious plan, inspired perhaps from official sources, German industrial concerns managed to secure from British coal the raw materials necessary for the vast supplies of ammunition which Germany had accumulated at the beginning of the war and to reap a tidy harvest for themselves and German trade at the same time. Coal by-products are produced in the manufacture of coke from slack coal. In the old style coke ovens these by-products are wasted in the form of gases which pass out of the oven during the incandescence of the coal, and the plant required to retain these valuable substances in commercial form is a complicated and somewhat expensive installation.

The usual procedure of the German firm was to undertake the building of by-product ovens for British colliery companies on terms which were invariably acceptable, even to those who had very little capital available for additions to their plants. In fact the terms were so generous that many British coal operators jumped at the offer.

A German concern would offer to install the necessary by-product ovens with the proviso that payment for the cost of the plant should be made through the by-products, the entire output of which was to be handed over to it for a specified period, generally eight or ten years. The coke was then sold to the mine operator at a substantial reduction from the figure at which he could have produced it himself.

In this way three results were obtained. The German Government received an ample supply of the coal tar derivatives needed in the manufacture of high explosives; German industry laid foreign territory under tribute and German machinery manufacturers had a new market opened for their products. The favorable terms offered by the Germans were nearly always accepted by the British for the reason that the by-product trade was in its infancy in England, and owing to lack of research the profits in the exploitation of that field were not well understood by the managers of English colliery companies.

The sale of coke paid a substantial return on the investment and Germany received the coal tar product of British coal fields practically free of cost. In her artful Teuton way she secured a monopoly of the coal tar industry, with all its diverse branches, and at the same time stored tons of high explosives against the day when she was to launch her legions against those who stood in the way of Prussian kultur. Possibly certain officials of German coal tar companies chuckled as they affixed their signatures to the contracts in the thought that long before the end of that term of ten years when the ovens were to become the property of British coal men a grateful Kaiser would be handing back to his faithful subjects the machinery in question.

Strictly Ornamental.

Man's only nonutilitarian garment is the necktie. It's as useless as a monocle. Yet we wear 'em. We'd feel awfully awkward walking down the street without one. Once upon a time the necktie was used to fasten the collar on. But now it doesn't do that. Man's necktie is the Indian's eagle feather, the cannibal's necklace of teeth, the mid-African's ivory earrings. It's his pride, on which he bestows much thought, great care. We wonder what would happen to the vanity of the human race, masculine hair, in case of a necktie famine.

CATCHES TO DEATH IN JUNGLE

British Aviator Encountered Crocodiles, Lions, and Hippos.

Terrible experiences of a British airman in the East African jungle are told by him in a letter received by a relative at Guildford. The aviator, Lieut. G. Garrood, of the Royal Flying Corps, went up to bomb a German ambush on the Rufiji River, but through engine trouble had to descend in the bush, the machine landing with broken propeller in a bog. It took him four days to make his way to a place of safety through the bush infested with wild animals.

He tells how in the dusk he was confronted with an ugly black animal about four feet high, with vicious tusks. He climbed a tree and prepared to put in the night there. Later he opened his eyes and saw something like two green electric bulbs about 30 feet from the tree. They moved round it in a circle. This continued for 45 minutes.

"The tension was unbearable. I wanted to scream, shout, and yell all in one, but instead I burst out with 'The Admiral's Broom,' and with a full-throated bass I roared out the three verses. No applause, but a forward—the leopard slunk away. Why had I not thought of it before?

"I went through my repertoire. I laughed as I finished "Two Eyes of Grey.' It seemed so ridiculous. Then I got on to hymns, remembered four verses of 'O God, Our Help in Ages Past,' and sang the 'Amen,' too. The whole thing had its ludicrous side."

Next morning whilst swimming a river he passed seven yards from a crocodile's mouth, but just reached the bank in time. Without food or arms—his only weapon of defence his nail scissors—his progress through the awful bush was about 100 yards an hour. His clothing was in ribbons, and his flesh exposed to the thorns, sword grass and flies.

He swam seven more rivers that day and sank down exhausted against a tree. He could hear a lion roaring about 500 yards away, and, somewhat nearer, the grunting of a hippopotamus.

"Being exhausted I more or less lost consciousness for perhaps half an hour or so. Nothing short of a hippo charging could have made me climb a tree. Am afraid life had little to offer about that time."

It was whilst lying here that the lieutenant "had the annoying experience of surveying two large baboons, the size of a small man, quarrelling over my trousers, now in threads, and among the tops of 40-foot trees."

It was not until he had passed another horrible day and equally terrible night in the bush that he at last was picked up by some natives. "Their eyes seldom left me," he adds: "Undoubtedly I was a strange sight—my legs bare and bleeding, my short vest sodden, dirty and torn, no trousers of course, just a dirty sun helmet, a short stick in my right hand, and with four days' growth of beard on my dirty face."

Trade Expansion in Guiana.

The import and export trade of British Guiana in 1915 was valued at $24,810,668, compared with $20,256,237 in 1914, an increase of 22½ per cent. Both imports and exports contributed to this substantial gain in the colony's trade, the former amounting to $8,796,247, an increase of $1,130,717, and the latter to $16,014,421, a gain of $3,423,714, or over 27 per cent. The growth of the export trade has been steady since 1912. In 1913 the increase was 22 per cent., in 1914, 20 per cent.; and in 1915, 27 per cent.

SELL DINNERS TO GERMANS.

Industrial Workers on Border Furnish Food to Hungry Teutons.

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands. — In many districts on the Dutch-German border line there is a steady outflow every morning of Dutch workmen, women and girls across the frontier. They go out for the day to work at high wages in German factories just over on the German side. In the evening, a return tide sets in of hungry crowds, for the Dutch factory hands find eager purchasers for the contents of their dinner pails.

Despite careful watching by the Dutch frontier guards and police matrons, attempts at smuggling constantly occur. Five hundred persons were convicted of smuggling at the small frontier town of Heerenberg in three weeks.

THERE IS NOTHING FOR THE LIVER SO GOOD AS MILBURN'S LAXA-LIVER PILLS

They will regulate the flow of bile to act properly on the bowels and will tone, renovate, and purify the liver, removing every result of liver trouble from the temporary, but disagreeable bilious and sick headaches, to the severest forms of liver complaint.

They are small and easy-acting, do not gripe, sicken or weaken like the old-fashioned, nauseating, griping purgatives.

Mrs. A. Kirk, 53 Yorkville Ave., Toronto, Ont., writes: "I have tried and tested Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills, and have received good results, for which I am very thankful. I took them for liver trouble. I came out of the hospital on May 2nd last, having had a serious operation which might have been saved had I taken your remedy sooner. I have given some to my sister for biliousness and sick headache, and she has found great relief. A lady who lives in my house has started to take them. I will do my best to recommend them to all my friends."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Clementine's Silent Partner

A Plan That Worked Well

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Miss Alvira Pitt's thin nose was poked close to the grating of the post-office window when Clementine Dilley called for her mail that February morning.

"Letter for you, Clem," shrilled Alvira as she poked the missive through the bars. "Lawyer's letter. I guess your rich uncle in Australy has died and left you $1,000,000!"

"Never had a rich uncle, and he didn't live in Australia, anyway," was Clementine's tart retort as she took her letter and went away.

As the alert little form disappeared from view the postmistress turned to her assistant.

"Another lawyer collecting letter," she explained. "Clem Dilley's business is tottering to ruin."

"If village folks would only trade with Miss Dilley instead of going way over to Bayport she might make a living," she vouchsafed.

"Clem Dilley couldn't keep up a stock that would satisfy Long River folks," retorted Alvira. "Mark my words, Josie, there's going to be a change in Clem Dilley's affairs pretty soon. She's looking worried to death."

There was to be a remarkable change in Clementine Dilley's affairs if she read the lawyer's letter aright. It was a wonderful letter and one hardly to be believed, so unexpected was it. The letter read:

Dear Madam—I have a client who is anxious to invest some surplus funds in a small but lucrative business, and after investigation I am authorized to make you the following offer—viz: My client to put $5,000 into a partnership with you, you to manage the dry goods business and the partnership to be a silent one. My client believes there will be a good opening for a profitable business that has financial backing. If you will call upon me some day this week I will go into the details of the matter with you. Very respectfully yours, SIMON DAY.

Three days after Clementine Dilley's return from New York there was a sensation in Long River. Wagon after wagon stopped before the door of her little shop and unloaded great boxes of dry goods.

Clementine hired several girls to help her, and soon the shop was transformed from its former coziness into the well stocked appearance of a city store. Clementine had a new front put in the store and two large plate glass windows.

At last Clementine had an opening day. She brought all the flowering plants from her sunny windows, and the store looked very attractive.

From that day Clementine Dilley's business flourished mightily. Dozens of people who had always traded in Bayport, fifteen miles distant, drove up to Clementine's door and made their purchases there.

Clementine was very happy on that day when she went down to New York and presented her books for Mr. Day's inspection. The books proved that Clementine was doing a splendid business, and the lawyer said he was sure that his client would have no cause to regret his investment.

Clementine often wondered about the mysterious partner whose money enabled her to prop up a crumbling business. Why, at the end of five years she might be able to buy out her partner, and at the end of ten years she might retire from business altogether and enjoy the quiet domestic life for which she had always yearned.

But now she was glad of the business, for it kept her from being lonely. At home there was nothing save a parrot and two black cats, and at forty-five one yearns for human companionship.

Clementine's friends were delighted at her good fortune, although she was not able to impart the details to any one. When he heard that Clementine Dilley was making money "hand over fist" Deacon Marberry stumped thoughtfully home to his bachelor fireside and stared at the almanac all the evening—and never read a word.

The next day he dropped into Clementine's store and asked for collar buttons. It happened to be the noon hour, and Clementine was all alone.

"Ten cents, Mr. Marberry," said Clementine briskly as she gave him the small parcel.

The deacon fished out a wash-leather bag from his pocket, untied the string that confined it, counted out the money in coppers and then replaced the bag.

"Clem," he said hurriedly, "the Scripture says 'tain't good for man to be alone."

"I expect that's why dogs were created—and cats—and parrots," returned Clem tartly. "Dogs and cats are good company."

"Yes—yes—yes!" returned the deacon impatiently, and then warily he added, "I don't reckon you can guess who your silent partner is, Clementine, can you?"

Clementine was startled for a moment. There could be no mistaking the deacon's meaning. He wanted her to believe that he was the silent partner whose name she did not know.

But she stiffened her neck coldly.

"I might guess, Deacon Marberry," she said.

"He ain't a thousand miles away from where I be standing this minute," went on the deacon craftily.

"I don't see him," said Clementine curtly. And she was glad when a customer came in and the deacon was compelled to take his departure.

Still the deacon's mysterious tone rankled in her mind. What if it were Deacon Marberry who had been backing her business? If it were Clementine vowed that she would close the doors the very next day. But on further thought where would Deacon Marberry get $5,000 that was not needed in his grain and hay business? The answer was forthcoming—Deacon Marberry's uncle, Jehoshaphat Bean, had died six months ago, and it was rumored that the deacon had come in for the money.

It was after 6 o'clock that same evening, when Clementine was about to lock the door after the last clerk, when there came heavy footsteps on the porch and the great form of Captain Tommy Lisk loomed into view.

"Howdy, Clem?" he said cheerily as he leaned against a pile of pasteboard boxes on the counter. "I ain't seen you in a dog's age, and I reckon we used to see each other pretty often—what say?"

Clementine remembered, with some amusement, that Tommy Lisk used to call upon her once a week in the long, long ago. That was just before David Marsh had come to town. After that Clementine had not had eyes for any one save the handsome David.

"How's business?" pursued the captain genially.

"Very good," replied Clementine. "What can I do for you, captain? It's after hours, you know, and I want to go to the lecture tonight."

"Ding it all, Clem, that's what I stopped in for!" cried Captain Lisk, slapping his huge hand on the counter. "I want to take you to the lecture tonight."

"I'm sorry, but I've arranged to go with some one else," returned Clementine, hiding her surprise at this belated attention on the part of Captain Lisk. "Thank you just the same."

"Well, better luck next time," murmured the captain. "What you say to moving pictures next Tuesday, Clementine?"

"I'll let you know later," said Clem hastily. And she breathed easier when he opened the door. At that moment he turned back again.

"I say, Clementine Dilley, I'll bet you can't guess who your silent partner is," he said jokingly.

"I might," said Clementine dryly.

"He ain't a thousand miles from where I'm standing," said the captain significantly, and, with a mysterious wink of his blue eye, he disappeared.

"The old sinners!" laughed Clementine as she put out the lights in the store. "They must have heard that I am doing a good business. Imagine my marrying Hen Marberry—or Tommy Lisk!"

She grew very thoughtful as she walked home under the winter stars. Her house was at the top of the hill under a group of tall locust trees. Since she had enlarged her business she had hired a capable housekeeper, and now she felt a glow of pleasure when she saw that the windows were lighted.

There was a sad thought back of it all—a brief romance of a few months, the hurried departure of David Marsh to assume his father's responsibilities in caring for a mother and several young children and then the gradual drifting of romance out of her life. David Marsh and romance were a dream to Clementine.

So when she opened the door and found David Marsh waiting for her in the cozy sitting room Clementine Dilley discovered in a splendid rush of joy that romance was not dead after all. David Marsh was a little changed, a little gray and worn, but still the fine, upstanding lover of her youth.

No one save Clementine heard all of his story, but we may know that after David had helped to educate his brothers and sisters he had met with great financial success and that in a roundabout way he had learned of Clementine Dilley's business troubles. So David, always true to the love of his youth, had become Clementine's unknown silent partner.

It was 9 o'clock, and the little group around the stove in Pinney's grocery still lingered, loath to go out into the cold.

Deacon Hen Marberry was winding a red muffler around his stringy neck and barking sharp retorts at Captain Tommy Lisk.

"What if I did stop in to buy some collar buttons of Clementine Dilley?" he cried angrily. "If you knew who Clem Dilley's silent partner was you'd say he had some right to buy there!"

Captain Lisk stared incredulously.

"If you knew who Clem Dilley's partner was you'd never speak up like that to me, Hen Marberry. I'll venture to say that Clem Dilley's going to marry her silent partner, and he's standing not a thousand miles from where I be this minute!"

"Ding bust it, Tommy Lisk, "'tain't no such thing!" snarled the deacon.

"When I say he's standing not a thousand miles from where I be this minute I'm speaking the truth!" reiterated the captain.

"Right you are!" said a deep voice from the doorway, where a tall, dark man was observing the scene with visible amusement. "Miss Dilley's partner is standing right here, Captain Lisk, and when you say she's going to marry her partner you're right again. I ought to know, because I'm David Marsh, and I'm the man!"

Five minutes later the deacon and the captain went out into the bitter night, and their hurts were not salved by the muffled laughter that followed their departure.

"Wimmen are vipers!" muttered Deacon Marberry from the gloom that encompassed his soul.

Whooping Cough

"The disease I most dread is Whooping Cough, for children are often permanently injured by the awful straining of the cough. You should never neglect it, and treatment should be started at the first symptom. You cannot mistake the symptoms: protracted coughing, worse at night; peculiar whoop; labored expectoration of mucus; apparent suffocation after coughing.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy

is a positive remedy for this disease—repeat the dose frequently, for if given freely it liquifies the tough mucus, makes it easy to expectorate and counteracts any tendency toward pneumonia. There is no danger whatever from Whooping Cough when Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is freely given."

Yours for Health—Granny Chamberlain

GREATEST ARMY OF WAR.

Germany Has Now Massed It On Western Front.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10—Germany has massed on the Western front her greatest army of the war, Secretary Baker declares in his weekly war review made public to-day. To meet this menace the United States must speed up is military preparations, the Secretary adds, with a warning that the enemy is preparing to put into execution in France plans he has been maturing since the defeat of the Russian armies at Tannenberg early in the war. The peace negotiations with Russia have permitted the massing of men on the Western front for that purpose.

"The United States must stand squarely behind our soldiers," the Secretary said. "It is not sufficient to prepare to fight; we must prepare to win."

Onion soup is a savoury dish to serve on a cold night.

How a Language Changes.

"The present war has so adulterated our tongue with strange words that it would be impossible for one of our great-grandfathers to know what his posterity have been doing, were he to read their exploits in a modern newspaper."

So wrote Joseph Addison in his day. In the same paper he "presents" his reader with the copy of a letter "which was written from a young gentleman in the army to his father, a man of good estate and plain sense. The letter," he goes on to say, "was very modishly chequered with his modern military eloquence." This letter would present no difficulty to the man-in-the-street of to-day; but the father of the young gentleman found that it "contained great news, but could not guess what it was."—Manchester Guardian.

Dawson Says He Gained 15 Pounds

Suffering of Fourteen Years Standing Is Overcome by Tanlac, He Says

Recently, in speaking of the marvellous way in which Tanlac has restored his health and renewed his strength and energy, A. W. Dawson, a shell inspector for the Canadian Cartridge Company, and living at 119 Gibson Avenue, Hamilton, said: "It may seem hard to believe, but it's a fact, this Tanlac has put me in shape where I have gained fifteen pounds, and I am feeling better and more able to work than I have in a long time." Continuing his statement, Mr. Dawson said:

"For fourteen years or more I had suffered from indigestion and nobody knows better than I do the misery it causes. My appetite was no good and my stomach was so out of fix that I always had to be very careful about my eating. I was bloated up with gas, full of pain, and felt after every meal like I wanted to vomit. My food just seemed to lay like lead in my stomach and at times the gas crowded my heart so I could hardly get my breath. I was badly constipated, had awful headaches and couldn't sleep more than three hours at night. My nerves were all upset and I would go to bed tired—get up in the mornings with an awful taste in my mouth—and feeling even more tired than when I lay down at night.

"Those who have never had such troubles certainly have something to be thankful for, and now that I have found relief I can hardly find words to express my gratitude. My sister-in-law persuaded me to try Tanlac, and it has done far more than I had any idea it would. I have a great big appetite now and I don't stop at anything to eat. All that lumpy feeling, gas pressure and pain is gone. In fact, I never have a touch of indigestion now, no matter what I eat. My nerves are strong and steady, my head seldom aches and I sleep like a log. I have also found wonderful relief from constipation by using the Tanlac Tablets in connection with Tanlac. I have spent lots of money for medicines of different kinds and Tanlac is the only one I have ever found I felt like I could recommend. If it hadn't done the work I certainly wouldn't say so and I am giving this statement because I know there are lots of others who need just such a medicine."

Editor of the Examiner:

Mrs. Webb is much obliged to Mr. Miller for his letter in last night's Examiner. It is only one of many insults she has to thank him for.

Would also like Soldier's Sister to know she did not receive anything for Mr. Burnham's letter being published, as she had no idea it was going to be.

BORDEN NATIONALIST ALLIANCE.

Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—Prior to 1911 elections, Nationalists campaigning for Borden to the people of Quebec, said not to vote for Laurier, for he would conscript their sons to fight England's battles in Europe in case of an emergency." Then as a reward Borden took three Nationalists into his Cabinet. What legislation followed? When war broke out in Europe and the British Empire endangered, 400,000 of Canada's brave sons came forward and enlisted, or five per cent. of the population volunteered, who brought forth praises from England and other countries, in such language as a "magnificent quota."

What part did the Borden Government take? Did it nationalize any industry? Did it take over any transportation of any kind? No. It placed the securing of contracts for munitions in the hands of profiteers, who took advantage without check to bleed England—two prices for munitions—three prices for bacon—two prices for flour and other necessaries to carry on a war, at the same time bleeding the people of Canada who elected this Government, and placed them in a position to properly regulate such affairs. Three years and four months have elapsed since war was declared and neither wealth nor resources, nationalized or conscripted, and only a mock dragging attempt at conscription of men, so much talked of by such members of the Government. Eight months since the Military Act was introduced into the House of Parliament and not one man drafted yet, and speed talked of all the time. During the same eight months the United States have conscripted or nationalized every industry that can be used to furnish supplies of any kind for war purposes, and brought into force an Act that compels every foreigner to work in some of those industries or get out of the country. Canada has no such provision made, but allows the same profiteers that contributed so successfully to the election of the Government in 1911 to bleed the people and England.

They have been working at a Military Service Act the same length of time the United States has been regulating all industries and have 1½ million trained soldiers with 426,000 in France. The Military Service Act in Canada is working out satisfactorily to the Nationalists who assisted, or who set it in motion largely, judging by the results that followed, namely, 96¼ per cent. of the sons exempted and promises to have the Minister of Militia interfere with an Act of Parliament and exempt farmers' sons now conscripted in Ontario, subject to appeal. Speed—Just the speed the Nationalists wished for and arranged for. No such interference can obtain until Parliament meets and revises the Act. Then will they, with Nationalist representation in the Cabinet of Canada's Parliament? Why did Borden state that tribunals made mistakes? Why did Mr. Burnham secure the assistance of the Warden to give his reasons why production should not be impaired by a machinery working in the interests and protection of Quebec. Why did the Minister of Militia say he would over-ride the Act and exempt, himself? Why? Just to spar for time until after election day.

The Nationalists' supporters and colleagues of Borden will no doubt at the next general election after the war point out how Ontario demanded conscription in Quebec and claim the protection against such conscription due to Borden and his friends. Then Quebec will be all Borden.

Should England, now hanging in the balance in this war, when blockades and submarines determine that it is a famine war, I say, should she go down? Borden and his Nationalist colleagues will have to be responsible in so far as supplies from Canada, England's only granary close at hand, were not provided. No greater evidence of weakness could be possible than the weakness of Mr. Burnham resigning because Borden and the Nationalists refused to conscript wealth and resources, then withdraw such resignation and go back like a little man and vote as Borden and the Nationalists directed.

Borden did not, Borden will not, Borden dare not conscript Nationalists of Quebec, and dare not interfere with the profiteers, for the same profiteers contributed to his 1911 election, and are out hot foot now for him again, and Nationalist representation in the Union Cabinet.

Only 25c profit to be allowed on flour, over 7½ to 15 per cent. profit on bacon to be taken, but no industry regulated, and lock the door when the the horse is gone.

England wants the goods now, and for the next nine months, and it is not in sight.

Agitate greater production last year and the people responded as far as they could, now decapitate that spirit by robbing Ontario of her real producers to save the Nationalists of Quebec from taking part in the war.

"Place the proceeds of the Dominion Bonds in the hands of the Liberals and you will lose every dollar of it," so says Peter White, Union Stump Speaker.

That's right, place it in the hands of Borden alliance and profiteers and it will be all kept right in Canada by them to be used as $5.00 bribe to dependents now, before election, that should have been $25.00 added the last two years to buy at the profiteers' prices, and also line the profiteers' pockets with millions.

Place it in the hands of the Liberals and it will be spent in Europe to win the war in Canada to win the war in Europe.

The only way to eradicate Nationalists is to clean out Borden and the whole crowd of profiteers, then this country will be free from Borden Nationalist alliance.—Yours respectfully.

Farmer's Son.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—In a recent issue of your valuable paper a letter was published addressed to Mr. Burnham to a soldier's mother. While Mr. Burnham might have been more courteous in his advice it is a well-known fact that no man in Peterborough has the interests of the soldiers' dependents more at heart than Mr. Burnham. The letter evidently was a paid advertisement of Mr. Hall. Now, as this soldier's wife replied to the letter I would ask the fair-minded independent reader which is the most contemptible, the leter of Mr. Burnham, with its abruptness, or it being published and being sent broadcast over this county without first obtaining consent of the owner. The day of mud slinging and hair splitting is past; what the intelligent public wants is a fair discusson of the questions of the day without any personalities.

Yours truly,
W. H. MERRILL.

Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—It appears to me highly important in the selection of a candidate to represent us in Parliament we should be careful to select a man who will watch and safeguard our local interests. After all the average member has very little to say with regard to the policy of any government, but he can exert a good deal of influence with regard to matters affecting his own constituency if he is alert to do all that he is able.

Both of the candidates in this constituency have parliamentary records, and it is a fact that when Mr. R. R. Hall was the member for this riding he was probably the best member we ever had in furthering local interests. He was always indefatigable in his efforts to see that this constituency received the proper attention of Parliament.

The following will remind the voter of West Peterborough how well the were represented in the person of Mr Hall:

1—In the revision of the tariff in 1906 through the efforts of Mr. Ha every amendment demanded by th growing industries of the city was incorporated in the tariff. Otherwi Peterborough would have been ruined as a manufacturing city.

2.—In the year of 1906 the post office was shown to be entirely inadequate for the business. Through the influence of Mr. Hall the post office was entirely renovated. Mr. Burnham has promised us a new post office for a long time. It is safe to say that had Mr. Hall continued to be our representative we would have had a new post office long ago.

3.—Through the work of Mr. Hall in 1906 and 1907 the whole mail service throughout the city was improved and reorganized. People living in the city can well remember how defective and inadequate the service was until remedied by Mr. Hall. Practically all the credit for the rural mail service outside of Peterborough must be given to Mr. Hall also.

4.—It should not be forgotten that it was entirely due to the efforts of Mr Hall that arrangements were completed for the purchase of the ground and the erection of the splendid armouries we have. Indirectly this has helped recruiting here very considerably, and without the armouries we could never have accommodated all the troops that have been billeted in Peterborough.

5.—It may also be pertinent to remind all those interested in the [illegible] of Peterborough that it was very largely due to the industry of Mr. Hall that the river was dredged above the C.P.R. bridge and in front of the Quaker Oats Co., thus making the water front of incalculable value to the city. Besides this he was instrumental in having wharves built at different points adjacent to the city, which have been of immense advantage.

6.—Through the persuasive vigour of Mr. Hall the Dominion government was prevailed upon to undertake the operation and maintenance of the swing bridges along the Trent Valley waterway, which saved this country an annual expenditure of at least $2,500.

7.—Along the same line it should be mentioned that Mr. Hall was also responsible for the Dominion government taking over the operation and maintenance of thirty-two dams on the Trent waterway which resulted in an annual expenditure of upwards of $10,000.

8.—It ought to be mentioned also that Mr. Hall actively supported all measures calculated to improve the conditions of labour and that while he was our member there was always a full dinner pail.

The truth is that Mr. Hall is a doer. When he was in Parliament he was diligent to do our business instead of making a fool of himself in the House, talking nonsense. I for one am not satisfied to vote for a man whose chief business is to get on the pages of Hansard. I want to vote for a man who does things worth while. Such a man is Mr. R. R. Hall. If he had been our member we most certainly would never have lost the Metal Products from this city, one of the best industries we ever had. What I say is: Put in a man next Monday who is worth putting in.

Yours truly,
VOTER.

Mrs. A. M. Powell, Norval Station, Ont., writes: "I cannot speak too highly of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. I suffered five years with my heart and nerves, but the last two years I have suffered terribly. If I went to bed I would wake up as if I were smothering. I did not get one night's sleep out of seven. I got so very weak that the doctor was called in, and he said it was my heart, and that I must take great care of myself. Make Your Own Cough Syrup and Save Money

Better than the ready-made kind. Easily prepared at home.

The finest cough syrup that money can buy—costing only about one-fifth as much as ready-made preparations—can easily be made up at home. The way it takes hold and conquers distressing coughs, throat and chest colds will really make you enthusiastic about it.

Any druggist can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth). Pour this into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Shake thoroughly and it is ready for use. The total cost is about 55 cents and gives you 16 ounces—a family supply—of a most effectual pleasant tasting remedy. It keeps perfectly.

It's truly astonishing how quickly it acts, penetrating through every air passage of the throat and lungs—loosens and raises the phlegm, soothes and heals the inflamed or swollen throat membranes, and gradually but surely the annoying throat tickle and dreaded cough will disappear entirely. Nothing better for bronchitis, spasmodic croup, whooping cough or bronchial asthma.

Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

GERMANS HASTENING PLANS FOR OFFENSIVE IN THE WEST

Vast Forces Are Being Massed Day and Night at Various Points Along the Franco-British Line--Artillery Duel is Attaining a Maximum of Effort With the Germans Assuming the Initiative---Unusual Raiding Activity Recorded.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, December 12.—The German high command is feverishly hastening its preparations for some great stroke on the western front. Despatches to-day reported vast forces being massed day and night at various points along the Franco-British line. More German airplanes than have been seen in months have been aggressively seeking to spy out the British positions, batteries, munitions dumps and supply stations. Unusual raiding activity, part of the same effort to obtain information as to the strength of front positions developed all along the line.

A perceptible lessening of Teutonic pressure on the Italian front was reported to-day. It served to confirm the belief here in London that a considerable force of Austro-German troops had been switched from that theatre to the west. Great numbers of Emperor Carl's troops are reported already having been transferred from the Russian lines.

The artillery duel along both French and British fronts to-day was attaining a maximum of violence. The Germans are assuming the initiative in this combat. Berlin's official statements frankly admit a strong plan of reinforcement of all the west front positions.

(By William Philip Simms.)

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, December 12 — Long lines of transports literally swarming with German reinforcements were seen behind the German lines on the north British flank of the Cambrai sector to-day. Great flocks of German planes endeavoured unsuccessfully to prevent the British aviators from searching out just such information. Early this morning the Germans developed a very heavy gun fire on the British northern flank. Their concentration of air forces was the greatest the Germans have yet disclosed. British aviators reported seeing great lines of motor lorries bringing up fresh German troops.

Every detail of the above despatch gives information of military proceedings which nearly always are preliminary to a general assault. The enemy attacking customarily start a heavy bombardment and covers its own troop movements by seeking to keep aerial spies away from the line.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

COPENHAGEN, December 12.—Semi-official German News Agency says demobilization of the Russian forces already has begun, and that peace negotiations restricted to the Russian front have been authorized.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS (Official), December 12.—German parties felt out the French lines at points northwest of Rheims last night. No activity of importance elsewhere is reported, although there was artillery fighting of some liveliness in the Verdun region, where also a German raid was attempted.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, December 12.—Premier Lloyd George to-day announced in the House of Commons that General Allenby, the British Commander in Palestine, entered Jerusalem on foot on Tuesday.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, December 12.—Reports of fighting at Mohilev, Russian General Headquarters, between troops newly arrived there and the Bolsheviki garrison, were received in Petrograd Monday, according to the correspondent of the Times in the Russian capital. It is also reported that Shock battalions and Cossacks advancing on Mohilev clashed with Bolsheviki who were defeated.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, December 12.—The Times this morning prints conspicuously an editorial demanding prompt and searching inquiry into the battle on the southern end of the Cambrai salient on November 30, and on the following days owing, it says, to the disquieting first-hand amplifications of censored accounts. These are said to include charges of blundering and assertions that the British were caught unready.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, December 12.—The Austrian battleship Wien was torpedoed and sunk Sunday night, according to a Vienna official statement, received in Amsterdam and forwarded by the Central News. Most of the crew was saved. The Wien displaced 5,512 tons, and had a complement of 441 men.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, December 12.—There was great activity in the air on Monday, especially in the Cambrai region, according to the official statement on aerial operations issued last midnight. British airplanes dropped bombs on enemy villages and the Germans bombed the British area. Five German airplanes were brought down and three British machines are missing. On Tuesday British aviators dropped bombs on a large railway junction northeast of Pirmasens in the Bavarian Palatinate, about 100 miles east of Verdun.

BODY FOUND IN WOODS WAS THAT OF ROBERT SMITH

Elderly Inmate of the Protestant Home Left That Institution the Latter Part of Last Month—Body Was Disfigured

INQUEST UNNECESSARY

The body found in a clump of evergreens on the farm of Mr. T. D. Young, North Monaghan, yesterday afternoon was that of Robert Smith, an elderly stone mason, who had been missing from the Protestant Home since the end of November. Foxes or dogs had eaten most of the flesh from the upper part of the body and identification was made possible only by the clothing, boots, and a pipe that was found near the body.

Mr. Smith had on several other occasions left the Home and gone to the country, where he had remained with a farmer several weeks. Hence, while inquiries had been made in an endeavour to locate him, his absence had not caused any actual alarm.

Dr. Hammond informed the superintendent this morning that he had examined Mr. Smith a short time ago, and the deceased had told him that he would probably fall dead on the road if he exerted himself unduly. It is therefore believed that death overcame him suddenly while tramping across the Young farm.

A hired man sent out by Mr. Young to cut poles came across the body in an evergreen bush a short distance from the highway and about one-quarter of a mile west of Brailey's School. This road is the extension of Sherbrooke Street in North Monaghan. There was a light covering of snow upon the ground, but practically none over the body.

Detective Newhall was sent out by Chief Thompson to investigate the report he received from Mr. Young, and Coroner Greer later decided that an inquest was unnecessary. The remains were brought into the city late yesterday afternoon to Bellegham's undertaking rooms.

SIR WILFRID AT REGINA

Liberal Leader is Enthusiastically Received, Three Large Churches Being Required to Accommodate the Crowds

WIN THE WAR FIRST

REGINA, Sask., Dec. 11. — Three of the city churches, together with the City Hall, were thrown open to accommodate the crowds that sought an opportunity to hear Sir Wilfrid Laurier to-night. The main meeting was held in the Metropolitan Methodist church.

Sir Wilfrid was tendered an ovation when he stepped on the platform, and throughout the entire meeting there was a great display of enthusiasm. Hon. George Langley, Minister of Public Affairs, in Saskatchewan, presided at the Metropolitan Church.

Criticizes Government Policy.

Sir Wilfrid reiterated his statement at Winnipeg last night that his object has always been to win the war. He again enunciated his policy that returned soldiers should be cared for by the Government, as a debt and not as a charity. This requires revenue, and it should be secured by direct taxation on the properties. He deplored the Borden Government method of raising the revenue by increasing the tariff. While a small rivulet of the money received under the present fiscal policy goes to the Government, the bulk goes to the privileged classes, he declared.

Responsibility For Quebec.

"I have to admit that Quebec has not given according to its number, compared with Ontario and the other Provinces," said Sir Wilfrid. A voice: "Put him out." Cries of "Put him out" were checked by the speaker. Sir Wilfrid said he desired to remove any such hallucinations. "I am here to say and prove that the men who are responsible because the Province of Quebec has not enlisted," declared Sir Wilfrid, "are the men who are now in the Government of Canada."

Believes in Persuasion.

He declared he desired his fellow-countrymen to win the war, but he believed they should do so by persuasion, and not by compulsion.

"We are a nation of many origins," he continued. "In this Province you have brought men from all parts of the world to develop this great country. In my Province there are two races. I am one of the majority there and the minority in the other Provinces, but in all things I am a Canadian." He went on to say that he preaches the same doctrine everywhere he goes.

"Neither Mr. Bourassa nor anyone else will dominate Laurier," declared Sir Wilfrid in dealing with statements that he is in alliance with the Nationalist leader.

Other Speakers.

Addresses were also delivered by Hartley H. Dewart, M.P.P., of Toronto, who declared he was sanguine Ontario would do well toward the old leader, notwithstanding newspaper reports to the contrary; by Hon. Walter G. Mitchell, Provincial Treasurer for Quebec, and A. A. McBeth, Laurier candidate in Regina.

Sir Wilfrid left at midnight for Calgary, where he speaks to-morrow night.

Many Greeted Him.

Although Sir Wilfrid's decision to tour the West was only a last-minute announcement, residents of many of the towns between Winnipeg and here were at the stations to greet him, although it was evident that there were those among them who were compelled to follow divergent paths in the present crisis. However, they welcomed him warmly because of their personal regard for him.

At Brandon a couple of hundred people were on hand when Sir Wilfrid's train passed through there at noon. About a quarter of the number were returned soldiers, who were going through on a troop train. While they heckled Senator Cargrain, they gave Sir Wilfrid a sympathetic hearing.

A GOOD SUGGESTION.

If you are looking for a family gift to gladden the whole home, a handsome Piano or a new modern Sewing Machine could hardly be excelled. Both may be seen and arranged for on easy terms by calling on J. W. Smart, 372 Water Street. Phone 1267.

MANY HALIFAX VICTIMS ARE BLINDED FOR LIFE

At Least 200 Will Be Orphans as a Result of the Explosion—500 Houses Have Been Totally Destroyed and a Similar Number Are Uninhabitable.

AFFECTING STORIES

Canadian Press Despatch.

HALIFAX, N.S., Dec. 12. — There will be from 800 to 900 people fully or partially blind and fully 320 orphans as a result of the Mont Blanc explosion, it was learned to-day from Canadian and United States' workers who have made investigations of deaths, missing and injured here. The known dead total 1635, and it is estimated that from 800 to 1,000 still lie beneath the debris of the shattered or burned houses.

The missing list, very formidable in the days immediately succeeding the disaster, is being steadily reduced as relatives are re-united, and refugees who left the city return. Concerning the property damage it is reported that five hundred houses have been totally destroyed, five hundred rendered uninhabitable, while one thousand can be patched up.

In one shelter in Dartmouth there were found three hundred men, women and children herded together, eating and sleeping in the same room, some of the children being only a few days old. To this number there was yesterday added a crew which left a munition ship on fire. The people in this shelter were attended to by only three nurses.

AN AFFECTING STORY.

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

HALIFAX, Dec. 12.—From shricken Dartmouth, across from Halifax, today came the most affecting story yet heard of in the disaster—that of a six year old lad who, wounded unto death, did not succumb until he had gone back into their ruined home and brought out his dying sister to lay at the feet of the maimed, bruised mother.

Leonard Donohue, of Dartmouth, had just completed a new house, and his family had been living in it only a short time when the devastating explosion in the harbour snatched from him not only his newly constructed home, but also the lives of two of his children.

When the explosion occurred, Mrs. Donohue was doing housework in the kitchen. With her she had her youngest child, James, a baby, in her arms. In the next room was her son William ("Billie") and her daughter Margaret.

The explosion knocked over every one in the house, blew down a partition upon Mrs. Donohue and overturned the stove—in fact the house became an utter ruin. The concussion blew every stitch of clothing from Mrs. Donohue, and she was bruised quite badly by the furniture of the room, which was shot about in every direction.

CLIMBED OUT OF WINDOW.

She seized her baby and climbed out of the window to get out of the house, calling to her other children at the same time. All at once Billie came running to her and said:

"Oh, mother, Margaret is under the stairs."

She went back into the house and found her daughter in an unconscious state under the stairs. They brought her out-of-doors, and Mrs. Donohue asked Billie if he was hurt.

He replied: "Yes, mother, I'm sick."

"Oh, Billie, are you going to die?" asked the frantic woman.

"Yes," lisped the little one. "Yes, I am going to die now."

And the six year old hero toppled over with these words, and died before the mother's eyes.

Then the little girl, who had partially regained consciousness, said: "If Billie is going to die, I want to die, too. I don't want to live if he doesn't."

The child is now dying in the Victoria Hospital.

The unfortunate woman dragged her children to a grass plot a short distance from the ruins of her house and got aid to have them taken to the hospital. Mr. Donohue arrived in time to see the ruins of his home, and to watch his two children taken to the hospital and the other to an undertaking room.

Government's Neglect Of Food Production A Matter Of Amazement

Mr. Hall Addresses An Enthusiastic Meeting at Bridgenorth—Scores Borden Administration For Utter Failure to Realize the Seriousness of the Situation—World Rushing Headlong Into a World-wide Famine.

A large and enthusiastic meeting in the interests of Mr. Hall was held at Bridgenorth last evening, presided over by Mr. William Telford, chairman.

Mr. Hall stated, that it was almost incredible to think that Sir Robert Borden and his so-called Union Government had not taken any steps whatever to encourage food production on this continent.

Neither he nor the so-called Union Government had even tried

His utter disregard of facts, warnings and prayers from the British Government is a matter of amazement.

Mr. Hall stated that in none of the speeches delivered by Sir Robert Borden nor Mr. Rowell had any reference whatever been made to the fact that the world's shortage of foodstuffs is apparent and that the world is rushing headlong into a world-wide famine and the ones that are going to suffer the most are going to be Great Britain and her Allies.

Situation Appalling.

Dr. Robertson of the Experimental Farm, Ottawa, says, "that the world faces a food situation that is nothing short of appalling." Great Britain has made demands upon us for enough food to feed 45 million people for one whole year and yet Sir Robert Borden and his Government does nothing.

The British Government have told Sir Robert Borden, "what we ask from the United States and Canada we cannot procure elsewhere."

Mr. Hall said, that the average production of wheat in France for the year 1917 is 156 million bushels short. The average production of cereals in Italy is short 36 million bushels, and the average production of Belgium is short nearly six million bushels.

The total shortage in food production in France, Italy and Belgium is in the neighbourhood of 200 million bushels, which is enough to feed the population of France for nine months.

No person doubts the accuracy of these figures.

Mr. Hall said, Canada therefore finds herself suddenly to be the most important factor in the world.

Supplies for the Allies from Eastern Europe there are none. Supplies from Australia and South Africa cannot be moved. Therefore Lord Rhondda, Food Controller for Great Britain, has appealed to the United States and Canada we cannot procure elsewhere."

Dumb as an Oyster.

And yet we find that on this all important question Sir J. H. Burnham has been dumb as an oyster. He knows that the Allies are on the verge of starvation. He has not even seen fit to address the farmers of this riding upon the all important question of food production, nor has he even thought fit to address the workingmen of the City of Peterborough upon this all important question of food production, although he knows that the prices of food are constantly and continuously rising, and he knows that Sir Robert Borden is taking no steps whatever to encourage food production on an extensive scale.

We have, said Mr. Hall, in the Northwest, the choicest and richest lands in the world all ready for the plough. Canada can add extensively to her food production in a single year. She could save vast numbers of persons from famine and thousands from death. She could materially help to preserve a falling world from overwhelming ruin.

The rich fertile lands in the west could be made to produce 500 million bushels of grain during the coming year instead of prairie grass. This would tend to reduce the high cost of living and would save Great Britain and her Allies from being starved into subjection.

These great opportunities are neglected by Sir Robert Borden and Mr. J. H. Burnham. Surely the electors of this riding will not vote for Mr. J. H. Burnham and his "do nothing" policy.

What are you going to give brother this Christmas? Because it is war time and people are feeling a lot more serious than ever before, gifts that are ornamental only, will not be appreciated to the same degree as gifts that are serviceable — so give brother a practical gift.

THE OLD GAME OF PARTIZAN SLANDER.

An irreparable harm is being done to Canada by the "Unionist" leaders who are publishing and circulating the infamous libel that a large percentage of the people of Canada are opposed to winning the war.

They are publishing to the world that those who do not support the Union government are not in favour of winning the war—that they are enemies of their country.

When they make those assertions, and publish them to the Allies and to Germany, they know full well that a very large number of Canadians will vote against the Union government on Decebber 17th. They know, therefore, that the British, Americans and Germans, if they believe the Unionists' statements, will be left with the conviction that whether the Unionist government is elected or defeated between forty and sixty per cent. of Canadians are disloyal.

Those who have been foremost in the circulation of this shameful libel, The Globe, Hon. N. W. Rowell, and all the papers and press of the Unionist party are besmirching her good name at home.

No one knows better than The Globe and Hon. N. W. Rowell, that their charges of disloyalty against a whole great party are malicious misrepresentations. In the years when The Globe worshipped at the shrine of George Brown, and Hon. N. W. Rowell was increasing his Ontario following one by one, they know that never was there an election when they were not branded as traitors by their present friends. They know how untrue these charges were.

The men who election after election have faced the charges of disloyalty by the Conservative party, when the call came in 1914, offered their lives to their country, proudly and freely, while their former traducers continued to bleed their country of superprofits.

Who is the traitor? The Liberal who is serving in Canada's army in France, or who having sent his sons across is striving at home to maintain a united and liberty loving people? Or is it the profiteer, the political incompetent, the publisher grown fat on public funds? I may serve the passing purpose of the Unionist party to tell the Germans that half and more than half of Canada is disloyal. But a lifetime of regrets will not compensate their country for the evil they have done her.

Canada's sons are adding to the glory of Canada abroad. The politicians and press of the Unionist party are besmirching her good name at home.

DOING NOTHING FOR THE GREATEST NEED.

While the Union-Borden Government has been trying to stampede public sentiment and prostitute national patriotism to party advantage; while it has been and is trifling with conscription and making it tributary to gaining votes; while it has thus denied the claim that the getting of men to the Front speedily and without a moment's delay is the sole duty of Canada, the Government has been doing absolutely nothing to organize or stimulate an equal if not greater national duty—the production of food to feed our armies and those of our Allies.

We know that we need men and are disappointed that the Government, that founds its existence on the immediate need of men, is playing with its responsibility for party gain; but we need as much, if not more, immediate attention to the promotion of food production—it is more important than political production.

This need is impressed by the opinions of the greatest British authorities. British statesmen have not specifically demanded men of Canada, but in ringing incisiveness of call they have demanded food.

Upon this page is printed "facts" in reference to the "World Famine and the Duty of Canada," compiled by Mr. John S. Ewart, K.C., Ottawa. Here we have authority after authority cited showing the supreme necessity of food supply.

We find the Government doing—what? Concentrating all its attention upon Conscription as the one and only thing, and at the same time to gain votes, largely nullifying it; and at the same time doing absolutely nothing to increase production, though it has had this need repeatedly urged; and all it has proposed is "the appointment of a well selected committee, composed of both city and county men and a few women." Referring to the futility of this, Mr. Ewart says:

Wretched Helplessness.—Did ever, during all time, a government write itself down as so utterly and wretchedly helpless? Here is a matter of overwhelming importance; a matter upon which the fighting capacity of ourselves and our Allies depends; a matter (without exaggeration) of life and death to thousands of human beings; a matter of the greatest difficulty and complexity; a matter which requires not only co-ordinated effort over the whole of the Dominion, but legal authority to make men move from places where they deem themselves comfortable, to places where they shall be made useful; and the Borden Government contents itself with the emission of a suggestion for a voluntary "well selected committee," and of a hope that if two or three women "were placed on such a committee something would be done."

"Something" was not done and has not been done; nor does there seem to be any idea of doing something, except to exploit Conscription as a vote-getter and a means of pulling the Borden chestnuts out of the fire.

The Government tells farmers that to get help to increase production ditions that will be attractive"—not they must "offer wages and home conditions that will be attractive"—not quite the way the Government proposes to send men to Flanders.

TRIFLING WITH THE "IMPERATIVE."

The newest thing about the partly new "union" government—it is the old Borden government in the main—is its new attitude and relation to the people. Other governments have had some regard for the people; some regard for fair-play to opponents and respect for constitutional consistency.

But the Borden government has mapped out a new line of policy and action and outrage for its alter ego—the "union" government.

The Borden government knew—felt in its bones—that if it appealed to the country on the record of its scandalous war administration; its graft, plundering and profiteering; its exaltation of the "big interests" and its ill treatmen of the soldiers who went to fight, it would be condemned.

Sir Robert Borden adopted conscription as something that might break his fall; he thought that appeal to the patriotic note migh bring him similar success to that of the flag-waving campaign of 1911.

Another happy idea struck him. If he could disfranchise enough people and enfranchise others in order to "cinch" the military vote he might save his bacon.

He devised, with, no doubt, the help of Hon. Bob. Rogers, the most un-British, the most infamous, and the most iniquitous franchise act ever imposed on a free country—that could be no more German in its design, in its effect and incidence if it had been prepared at Potsdam.

The next happy idea was to efface himself by crawling into the skin of a "union" government that had behind it all the unfair advantages the Borden government had unrighteously prepared for itself, such as the loaded franchise act, votes to certain classes of women and denial of votes to others, an adjustable voters' list, and a conscription act—adjustable—to the policy of vote getting, no matter how this act of political expediency delayed the sending of reinforcements to the soldiers at the front—the very ground upon which the union government was ostensibly formed; the very ground of justification of forgetting the dark record of the Borden government.

The very government that is frantically calling for popular support on the head of its conscription policy is modifying—in fact, taking the back bone out of—conscription, by aiming to break the spirit of the Military Service Act, by wholesale exemption of farmers—because of "the hostility of farmers"—to get their votes.

With all the urgency of sending reinforcements the conscription machinery is slowed down, as Sir Robert Borden ordered the military authorities to "slow down on recruiting."

The calling to the ranks of the few the conscription net caught, was set for December 10th. But that date was before the elections and that wouldn't do, as it might affect votes. Then the date was advanced to Dec. 24th.

Here a tender solicitude for sentiment and another appeal for votes came in. Conscripts must have the Christmas holidays and are not to be called till January next.

Though we are told that the Canadians in the trenches are begging, praying, and beseeching for immediate reinforcements these possible reinforcements are held back—first, for partizan reasons; then for sentimental reasons—so that the few conscripts may have the joys of the Christmas time, while the Canadians at the front must spend the Christmas fighting—waiting in vain for speedy reinforcements.

This playing fast and loose with the Military Service Act, virtually defeating the alleged purpose for which the "union" government was formed—the speedy despatch of more men to the front—for the palpable purpose of bringing suport for the "union" government, throws doubt on its bonafides, and shows that the "union" government as the alter ego of the Borden government, is governed by its spirit.

The Food Controller has struck a great idea to meet the need of the allied nations for food—permit the keeping of hens and pigs in cities and towns.

SIR WILFRID LAURIER

Appeals to the soul of Canada.

He believes that in a Democracy the people should rule. Therefore, he stands for an honest Franchise Act.

He believes that the Government should be the servants of the people and not their masters.

He stands, therefore, by Democracy as against Autocracy.

He stands, as he has ever stood, for liberty of thought.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier stands for the prosecution of the war with the utmost determination and zeal, not less with the material resources of Canada than with her man power.

And crowning a life time of effort, he stands, as he has stood through forty years of public life, for a united Canada.

EWART'S FACTS AS TO THE WORLD FAMINE AND THE DUTY OF CANADA

Mr. J. S. Ewart, K.C., Ottawa, in a recent pamphlet, "The Disruption of Canada," quoted authority to prove:

1. "The the world faces a food situation that is nothing short of appalling."—Dr. Robertson.

2. "That the world's supply of food is not sufficient to feed the world's armies and the civilian population too."—Lord Northcliffe.

3. "That it is now vital for the United Kingdom and the Allies in Europe to obtain from Canada foodstuffs in far larger quantities than under peace conditions."—Lord Rhondda.

4. That "the fighting efficiency of the Allied forces will be impaired unless Canada awakens to the seriousness of the food problem." — Mr. Hanna.

5. That "what we ask from the United States and Canada, we cannot procure elsewhere."—Lord Rhondda.

6. "That the Allies are depending on the continent of North America to a far greater extent than ever before."—Can. Food Bulletin No. 3.

7. "That there are difficulties in the way. One of them is the shortness of help, which is a very serious question."—Mr. Crerar.

8. That the shortage of food is "owing to the shortage of labour caused by the war.....labour has been taken away from the farm, which has produced varying harvests with the result that there is a world shortage of food."—Lord Northcliffe.

9. That the shortage in the wheat crop of the western European allies for this year is 570,000,000 bushels; that Canada and the United States together can supply only 200,000,000; and that the allies' shortage is therefore 370,000,00 bushels.

10. That, notwithstanding those well-known facts, the Borden government had, to the 30th June last, enlisted for service in Europe 45,797 farmers, of whom 24,591 came from the western Provinces.

11. And that, in view of the fact that the United States is ready to ship more men to the front than can be transported, all suggestion of necessity for conscription in Canada is absolutely foundationless.

OPINIONS.—He quoted also noteworthy opinion as to the duty of Canada under these circumstances:

1. "That the Government should, without delay, endeavour to encourage the breaking of a large acreage of wild lands in order that such new soil may be ready for cultivation next year and our productive capacity thereby increased."—Senate Committee.

2. "That an increased export of food supplies must entail diversion of effort from other enterprise."—Lord Rhondda.

3. That the greatest encouragement to the Allies will be rendered "in utilizing every ounce of national energy to increase production." — Lord Rhondda.

4. That "we should use all the experience we have thus far gained in planning and carrying forward a campaign for larger acreages, and higher yields in 1918, and the years that are to follow."—Dr. Robertson.

BRIDGE COLLAPSE RECALLS ROMANCE OF NORTHWEST

Telegraph Wire Left by Overland Pioneers Was Used by Indians to Build This Remarkable Structure.

The suspension bridge constructed by the Hagwilget Indians across the Bulkley River in Central British Columbia has collapsed and now floats in the waters of Hagwilget Canyon, held by the cables on which it was suspended for more than twenty years. The news will be received with regret by engineers in all parts of the world. This frail structure was regarded as a remarkable example of Indian skill in bridge building and had been a subject of comment in many engineering magazines, while it was also regarded as one of the many features of interest seen from the trains of the Grand Trunk Pacific line. Conceived in the mind of a native and built by his fellow tribesmen, the true principles of the modern suspension bridge were carried into the construction work. The bridge was the third attempt to get a permanent crossing over the Bulkley River, the first two bridges having been swept away by high water. When the Indians built this bridge they had no modern tools, nor did they have nails, spikes or bolts, wooden spikes and telegraph wire being used at joints. The bridge had a span of 146 feet and was 10 feet wide.

Interwoven with the story of the Indian bridge is a romance of the Northwest. The telegraph wire used in its construction was discovered by the Indians at a point some eight hundred miles west of Edmonton and 200 miles inland from the Pacific Coast, where it had been hidden for many years. This is how it happened: Between the date of the unsuccessful and the day of the successful attempts to lay a submarine cable which would connect New York and London, a plan was put forth for an overland telegraph line from New York to St. Petersburg. The close of the Civil War found the country full of men of mettle. Some of the old campaigners were selected and sent to work.

In the meantime, while these heroic explorers were working away in the wilderness, London and New York were coupled up by the submarine cable. Instantly, all interest in the overland disappeared, as the need of the line no longer existed. Away out on the Northern corner of this continent there is a line of fifty-year-old telegraph poles. It is easy to understand and appreciate the disappointment of these brave fellows who had fought the good fight in sun and rain for over a year and a half, only to be told to quit. And that is how they happened to leave the telegraph wire used in the bridge in a cache on the river, along whose banks the Grand Trunk Pacific transcontinental trains are now travelling.

When this enthusiastic band of workers went home, the "silent places" fell asleep again, and the younger generation forgot. After forty years more of unbroken sleep, other telegraph builders blazed the trail, planting poles and stringing wires. What was regarded as a worthless wilderness was hailed as the new Empire of the North, teeming with natural riches. This time they succeeded, for the men were on the payroll of the Grand Trunk Pacific Telegraph Company, and the wires follow the right-of-way of Canada's new line. This modern successor of the overland has become an important factor in handling the telegraph business of a large section of the continent.

Final Decision Rests With The Appeal Tribunal

Some of the Farmers Are Well Aware of the Limitations of the Farmers' Representatives Appointed by the Borden Government

Warden M. Brown and R. Knox are holding a star chamber session in the committee-room of the County Council-Chamber. Shortly before ten o'clock this morning about thirty-five or forty farmers crowded into the Council chamber, where they were informed that Messrs. Brown and Knox had been appointed by the Government to hear exemption appeals respecting men employed on the farms. It was then that the two appointees retired to the committee-room, where it is proposed to hear all cases in camera. The reason given for such a procedure, is that the farmers applying for exemption would be more free to talk about their respective cases. The puzzled look on some of the farmers was reflected in the general demeanor of the two appointees, who appeared to be anything but familiar with the duties imposed on them. This was not the case with some of the farmers present, who were not slow to realize that the duties of the farmers' representative to the Appeal Tribunal are restricted to certain recommendations they make, and that the final decision rests with the Appeal Tribunal, of which His Honour Judge Huycke is the presiding head.

"It is done to help win the election for the Borden Government," said one farmer, as he stamped his foot in the committee-room, while a couple of men toyed with the radiator in an endeavour to induce the heat to circulate.

Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—We poor soldiers' wives want to know when we are going to have $25 separation allowance, as was reported in the Examiner a short time ago. A gentleman said in this paper that we get $25 separation, also $25 for provisions. Now, he is wrong, as the cheques have come in for $20. Please let us know what $25 provisions means. I will thank you if you will put this in your paper, and oblige,—Yours truly,

EARLY PULLETS VERSUS OLD HENS FOR EGGS

For profitable early winter egg production the early hatched pullet is three times better than the late pullet, four times better than the yearling hen, and thirty times better than the "aged" hen.

Early pullets are best for winter eggs. This has been demonstrated many times. The Poultry Division, Experimental Farm, has collected figures for several years, and when the three months (November, December, and January) only are taken into consideration the relative profit ableness of the four ages is as noted above. If the six winter months were considered the contrast would not be so striking for the hens and the late pullets were just beginning to lay when the experiment closed. However, if eggs alone are to be considered we cannot afford to feed birds until towards spring before they produce. Even if desired for breeding, it is a question if, with the high price of feed, we had not better rely upon well-matured pullet for hatching eggs next spring rather than feed hens that will not produce or only a a loss. Certainly here is no excuse whatever for keeping in our poultry houses late pullets whose eggs cost more than they are worth and birds that are absolutely useless as breeders.

This summary is of results that extend over four years and are taken from several of the farms of the system, so that the figures will indicate fairly well what may be expected for these three months.

These figures show that early pullets (hatched before 1st May) produced eggs at a cost for feed of 18.3 cents. The late pullets (hatched after 15th May) at a cost of 56 cents. The year-old hens at a cost of 78.2 cents, and for every dozen eggs laid by the hens in the aged class the cost of feed was $5.73.

Again these facts should be emphasized (1) that for profitable egg production birds should lay before February. (2) Early well matured pullets are the only birds that may be expected to do this. (3) Late pullets, as a rule, will not pay to keep. (4) For eggs, hens are not profitable. (5) If we have a good flock of early pullets, for the time being depend upon them for breeding. (6) It is a national loss to keep birds that eat a dollar's worth of feed to produce fifty cents' worth of eggs.

Unity In Milk Trade Methods Is Controller's Suggestion

What closer co-operation and more unity in method among dairymen and the public might accomplish to keep down the cost of milk distribution is shown in the recently-published report of the Milk Committee appointed by the Food Controller for Canada.

"The excessive 'spread', or difference between the producer's price (of milk) and the consumer's price is caused chiefly," the Committee found, "by the excessive number of distributors, and it varies in about the same ratio as the number of distributors."

The cities of Ottawa and Toronto furnish striking proofs of this contention. In the former city, where one firm distributes about 75 per cent. of the total milk, the difference between the two prices is only about 3.25 cents a quart. In Toronto, where there are about ninety distributors, the range of prices runs to 5.25 cents a quart.

The needlessness of this over-lapping was shown in the finding of the Committee that in some cases fifteen to twenty different dairies deliver milk to homes in the same street. Considering how difficult help is to secure in Canada at present this is an instance of how the trade might profit by re-organization.

Mr. P. B. Tustin, Chief of the Food and Dairy Division, Winnipeg, who is chairman of the Committee, in an interview, gave further instances of overlapping in the milk business. To cite only a few, he said, that in Halifax, N.S., there were 69 distributors, and 100 delivery waggons; in Montreal, 475 distributors, 600—800 waggons; in Winnipeg, 103 distributors, and 252 waggons—two dealers doing a large business, and 100 dairymen delivering the supply from their own cows: Calgary, 16 distributors and 50 waggons; in Toronto, 35 to 90 distributors and 300 waggons; Hamilton, 30 to 35 distributors and 94 waggons, but 75 per cent. of the milk is handled by one firm, which has two deliveries a day.

Again, to quote the report, the effects of this needless duplication are: 1, excessive capital employed; 2, excessive dairy costs; 3, overlapping in delivery; 4, excessive loss in bottles; 5, diversion of great numbers of men and horses from productive employment; 6, excessive cost of milk to consumers; and 7, reduced consumption of milk and consequent endangering of child health and life. The average loss preventible by reorganization in what might be termed the delivery system alone is 1.125 cents a quart.

Still more striking was the fact disclosed by the evidence of twelve of the largest milk distributors in the Dominion, that the annual loss in bottles alone was estimated at $79,450. Naturally, this is a business loss which has to be made up to the dealer, and on the principle that "the consumer pays." The consumer, however, in this matter, is not free from responsibility because it was freely declared that 75 per cent. of this particular loss, or roughly $60,000 a year, is due to dairymen's customers not returning the bottles to the milkmen.

The report strongly recommended a reorganization of the methods employed in delivery much on the lines found to work so admirably in Regina. This and a proposal of how those interested should proceed will be found detailed in the Milk Committee's report.

OTHER GREAT DISASTERS OF HISTORY

Outside the toll of life claimed on land and sea by the great war, the catastrophe at Halifax, if reports of two thousand dead are borne out, is by far the greatest disaster in many years. Numerous explosions have occurred in munitions plants in this country and Europe, the most disastrous of which on this side was at the Eddystone plant of the Dupont Powder Company at Chester, Pa., in April last, in which 112 persons lost their lives.

The Halifax disaster is the most ertgic explosion, in the number of lives lost, in the last quarter century. Indeed, few catastrophies of any nature exceed it in number of dead. Among them are the Messina earthquake, in 1908, when approximately two hundred thousand lives were lost; the Mont Pelee volcanic eruption on the island of Martinique, in 1902, when forty thousand persons lost their lives, and an earthquake in the interior of Italy, in 1915, when thirty-five thousand dead was the toll.

The Iroquois Theatre fire in Chicago, in 1903, claimed 575 lives, while the sinking of the excursion steamship General Slocum in the East River, New York, in 1904, left a death list of about 1,400. In 1903 the earthquake and fire in San Francisco took the lives of approximately 1,000 persons, while the loss of the steamship Titanic, in collision with an iceberg in 1912, resulted in a toll of 1,503 dead.

In 1914 the steamship Empress of Ireland went down in the St. Lawrence River, with the loss of 1,027 lives. Then followed the sinking of the Lusitania by a German torpedo, and the steamship Eastland, in the Chicago River, in 1915, with death lists respectively of 1,198 and 812.

In October of this year it was reported that 4,000 persons had lost their lives in a munitions explosion in Austria, but the report never has been confirmed.

Grocers Selling Oleomargarine At 38 Cents A Pound

Oleomargarine at 38 cents a pound is selling in some of the local grocery stores, and the first sales are reported surprisingly large. One merchant contrived to substitute "oleo" for the usual butter ration, and, in his own words, the family remarked upon the excellence of the butter. It is expected that the quality of the margarine will have a wide appeal, and will gradually bring the price of butter down from the profiteers' plain of 50 cents.

THE WAR CHARITIES ACT, 1917.

THE War Charities Act, 1917, defines "war charities" as follows: any fund, institution or association, other than a church or the Salvation Army, whether established before or after the commencement of this Act, having for its objects or among its objects the relief of suffering or distress, or the supplying of sends or comforts to sufferers from the war, or to soldiers, returned soldiers or their families or dependents, and any other charitable purpose connected with the present European war. Any question whether a charity is a war charity shall be finally determined by the Minister.

The Act also provides:

(1) It shall not be lawful to make any appeal to the public for donations or subscriptions in money or in kind for any war charity as hereinbefore defined, or to raise or attempt to raise money for any such war charity by promoting any bazaar, sale, entertainment, or exhibition or by any similar means, unless—

(a) the war charity is either exempted from registration or is registered under this Act; and,

(b) the approval in writing of the executive committee or other governing body of the war charity has been obtained, either directly or through some person duly authorized to give such approval on behalf of such governing body; and if any person contravenes any of the provisions of this section he shall be guilty of an offence against this Act.

(2) This section shall not apply to any collection at Divine Service in a place of public worship.

The Act was assented to on the 20th of September, 1917, and the above section so far as it relates to registration is applicable to War Charities on the 20th of December, 1917. After that date, collections made other wise than on behalf of a registered War Charity by subscriptions, donations, bazaars, sales, entertainments, exhibitions or similar means of collecting money are illegal.

Will Borden Enforce Conscription?

Indications Are That Leaders of the Union Government Are in a Quandry—Contradictory Statements Made By General Mewburn and Other Unionist Speakers

The following is an extract of the speech delivered by Mr. Mewburn, the Minister of Militia at Hamilton, taken from the Toronto Globe (Unionist) Saturday, November 3rd, 1917.

"The Military Service Act is not just to my choosing, but it is better than nothing. One thing I am opposed to in the new measure is the limitation to one hundred thousand men. We are in this war, or should be, not with one, two or three hundred thousand men, but to the very limit of our resources. (Cheers.) We must send men overseas according to the needs of the men already at the front." (Renewed cheering).

When the speech was made, from which the above was taken, Mr. Mewburn was new as a Cabinet Minister, a couple of weeks campaigning for election and he had changed his ..... mind and accordingly announced at Dundas, Ontario, that all farmers within Class "A" called out for service under the Military Service Act, who are honestly engaged in farm work, in the production of food stuffs for Canada and her Allies will be exempted from Military Service and dismissed from the army. The Toronto Globe, the great advocate of conscription and chief apologist for the Union Government in Ontario was so pleased with this second pronouncement that it has published it in large type almost every day since, and on December 6th, 1917, in the following words:

Exemption of Farmers.

It is officially announced in Ottawa that all farmers coming within Class "A" called out for service under the provisions of the Military Service Act, who are actually employed on a farm in the production of foodstuffs for Canada and her Allies and whose services are necessary in the work of such farm, will be exempted from Military Services. If their claim for exemption is not allowed by a Tribunal an immediate appeal should be made. Arrangements are being made to extend the time for such appeals. The Minister of Militia further states that if a farmer so called out for anilitary service, who is now honestly employed in the production of foodstuffs, should be drafted into the Army, General Mewburn feels it will be his duty to relieve him from Military Service on condition that he returns to the farm and continues to be so employed.

Now it must be remembered that Mr. Mewburn, the Minister of Militia, is not the head of the Canadian Army, but only a civil head of a Department of the government and has no power to do what he promises. Neither is it possible for Mr. Mewburn or anyone else to exempt the farmers or any other class from the Military Service Act. The Act provides for exemption of individuals by the Tribunals, but there is no provision in the Act for the exemption of a Class, and the Military Service Act can be modified only by the authority that enatced it, viz., Parliament itself and the Minister of Militia is trying to hand the farms a gold brick and they know it.

As it appeared that the farmers were not taking Mr. Mewburn's announcements seriously, Hon. Newton Wesley Rowell, the man who, to advocate Conscription, came to the rescue. He announced at Midland on December 5th that the Government had passed an Order-in-Council providing for representatives of Agriculture at the hearing of the Tribunals (what is left of them) and providing for the right of appeal from the decisions of the Tribunals. or fear that the farmers will not take this announcement seriously, the Government has now appointed Mr. W. R. P. Parker, a Toronto Corporation lawyers to investigate all claims of the farmers where grievances are alleged—a task of some dimensions surely. The Globe also has an editorial lament about the tragedies of the old couple being left alone to carry on the burden of "the old homestead." The Unionists forces think these efforts will surely satisfy the farmers of Ontario—at least until after the elections. We must, however, remind Hon. Newton Wesley Rowell and the other members of the Borden Government that the farmers are not foolish—the days of selling lightning rods are past.

In the Province of Quebec the Unionist ministers and candidates are also trying to hoodwink the people on the actual working out of Conscription. Mr. Rainville, Mr. Borden's Deputy Speaker in the House of Commons, says all farmers and industrial workers will be exempted. It was stated on Nomiantion Day in the County of Brome, Quebec, on behalf of the Unionist candidate, that the Act should not be called a Conscription Act in Quebec, but rather an Exemption Act and the same statement is made generally by Unionists candidates in that Province and it is not surprising that different members of the Government should endeavour to face both ways on Conscription. What is the record of Sir Robert Borden, the Prime Minister on the subject? At the beginning of the Session of Parliament in 1916 he said in the House of Commons:

"My Right Honorable Friend has alluded to Conscription—to the idea in this country, or elsewhere, that there may be Conscription in Canada. In speaking in the first two or three months of this war I made it clear to the people of Canada that we did not propose Conscription. "I repeat that announcement to-day with emphasis."

On May 18th, 1917, when an election had to be forced and something had to be done to attract the attention of the people from the profiteers and the food barons, the J. Wesley Allisons and J. Wesley Flavelles, Mr. Borden announced to the country Conscription to be applied at once for the immediate raising of 100,000 men.

At this date there is not one of the hundred thousand in khaki, and Mr. Mewburn, the Minister of Militia, says that it is not the intention to send over 100,000 men at once—that 25,000 is all that is necessary and others will be sent from time to time. After a few days' campaigning in Ontario, Sir Robert held a Cabinet meeting on a Sunday in the Red Room of the Queen's Hotel, Toronto, and later announced that all of the 100,000 men it was expected would be got from Class "A" of the first draft—Classes B, C, D and E could therefore expected to be excused.

The newspapers having announced the statement of His Honour, Judge Winchester, that the married men would soon be called out, Sir Robert Borden felt it necessary to say that such action was not contemplated by the Government. A few days later when speaking at Oshawa, Ontario, Sir Robert was asked what would be done if the first draft did not produce the required number of men—his answer then was that he would have to ask Parliament to pass another Act extending the principle of Conscription. This apparently could not be done except by raising the age limit above 45 years. In this way Sir Robert is busily working to satisfy all phases of opinion until December 17th. The head of the Unionist Publicity Campaign, Sir John Willison, is reported as saying to the electors of South York that "one of the objects of the Military Service Act was to ensure an adequate supply of labour for the farms." Only a few weeks earlier Sir John Willison's Co-Worker in the Unionist Publicity Campaign, Joseph E. Atkinson, was telling the people of Toronto in his paper, the Daily Star, that the farmers of Ontario were very much in need of a campaign of education. Leaders of the Unionist Government are in a quandry as to which way they are heading, but the average voter is not in doubt.

Canadian Officers Visit All American Camps in France

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By J. W. Pegler.)

WITH THE AMERICAN EXPEDITIONARY ARMY IN FRANCE, Dec. 12.—Canadians among the American forces were balloting to-day on the Canadian election. Two Canadian officers visited the American camps, recording the votes of the citizens of the Dominion.

Two Americans, ex-officers in the Canadian army, were announced to-day as about to receive commissions in the Pershing Expeditionary Force. Both fought in the American army ranks in Cuba and China.

Jewish Republic Is The Plan Of Israel Zanguill

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By Lowell Mellett.)

LONDON, Dec. 11.—Israel Zanquill saw his dream of a Jewish republic coming true to-day.

Such a separate independent state in Palestine is the great Jewish leader's hope for the future, as he expressed it to the United Press to-day while exulting in reclamation from infidel hands of the Holy City of Jerusalem. I would call it the Republic of Judea or of Israel, he said. It would be an autonomous, separate nation, but I would have it temporarily under the protection of some great world power, England, the United States, or perhaps all allies combined. This protector would continue only long enough to make certain that the new Jewish nation was solidly established. None of us who hope for such a nation expect or believe that all Jews wherever now located will come to Palestine and live under new country. It is my belief, however, that Jewish farmers who are finding it hard to make a living in many places of the world would do so. Moreover these are the sort of men who would form the most solid basis for the republic. They should be given some aid to permit their return "home."

Jerusalem, once again restored to us from Turkey's ruthless grasp of centuries, is an ideal spot for a capital. It would be a site for a great commercial or trading city. My plan would not be to bring to Jerusalem Jews who have prospered throughout the world. Rather, I would have drawn to the new capital and new nation the oppressed of other nations.

Most important of all, with a Jewish nation established, Jews throughout the world would feel they had a home once more and this even if their condition and circumstances did not enable them to emigrate to Palestine.

My suggestion for a temporary protectorate is based on a desire that the Jewish nation and interests of its people should be permitted to grow under the fostering care of some great power which has no self interest in Palestine.

Thirteen million Jews throughout the world to-day look to Jerusalem, the Holy City restored. What could be more fitting than a Jewish nation reborn after centuries of Jewish travail.

Sherwood Camp Elect Officers

At the annual meeting of Sherwood Forest Camp, 50, held in W. O. W. hall, Monday night, a large proportion of the membership were in attendance.

Con-Com. E. S. Ivey opened the meeting at 8.30 p.m., and after initiation of members the Camp proceeded to elect their officers. At this stage Head Deputy A. E. Hubbard of Toronto presided over the meeting.

The result of the election was as follows:

P.C.C.—E. S. Ivey.
C. C.—Ed. Lebar.
Adv. Lt.—Wm. Dummitt.
Banker—Richard Waram.
Clerk—Fred Sutcliffe.
Escort—Geo. Killingbeck.
Watchman—Earl M. Robertson.
Sentry—Hy. White.
Managers—Robt. H. Carr, Jos. W. Worth, Robert N. Jones.
H. C. Del.—Jos. Wm. Worth.
Alt. Del.—Richard Waram.
Asst. Clerk—Thos. B. Moffatt.
Pianist—Mrs. B. Pilling.

After conducting the election Mr. Hubbard thanked the scrutineers for the efficient manner in which they handled the ballots, and asked C. C. Ivey to again take charge of the meeting. The Chairman then called upon Sov. G. N. Gordon to address the meeting.

Mr. Gordon, who is the local representative of the Executive Council, was given Head Camp honours and a great ovation. Mr. Gordon thanked the members for their reception. He was very much impressed by the enthusiasm and large attendance present and particularly that the Camp had succeeded in obtaining a large number of new lady members.

He spoke at length of the difficulties insurance companies and fraternal organizations were passing through at the present time, owing to the war. The industrial centres were particularly hard hit in this respect, and owing to the constant moving of the people from one centre to another it was most pleasing to see that the local camp had greatly increased in membership.

Touching on the question of rates, he said that the Order was actuarially solvent, based upon the N. F. C. table of mortality, and that barring calamities such as the recent Halifax disaster, they were adequate and would not require any adjustments.

He urged the members present to cause of the sound basis of the rates, to have no fear in approaching their friends to become members of the Order.

In conclusion, he complimented the members in their wise selection of officers. They had chosen to conduct their business during the coming year and he gave them assurance he would lend them his full support and again thanked the members for their kind appreciation of his past services.

The business session being over, coffee and cake were then served by the lady members in their usual and obliging manner.

SPECIFIC FOR BRONCHITIS.

The turpentine used in Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is not the ordinary commercial article, which is little used because of the unpleasantness of taste, but is specially extracted from tamarac and spruce gum and, so combined with other valuable ingredients as to be at the same time pleasant to use and wonderfully effective in the cure of affections of the throat, bronchial tubes and lungs.

MOCK TRIAL AT KNOX CHURCH WAS A GREAT SUCCESS

Accused of trifling with a lady's affections and attempted kidnapping of same lady, Abijah Pippins (Mr. A. Parker) was acquitted and handed over as a hostage or bonus to the plaintiff, Leonora Smithers Trustly (Miss K. Tucker) at the Mock Trial last night in Knox Sunday School.

This entertainment was a huge success in every way and a credit to those responsible for the splendid manner in which it was carried out, absolutely without a hitch. The trial itself bubbles over wih humour, ridiculous situations, the jury composed of a disreputable-looking conglomeration of freaks, ranging from a trim little lady doctor (Miss K. Hall) to a Jewish peddler (Mr. Max Peters). The appearance of each juror alone brought forth screams of laughter. Happy Hooligan especially appealing to the younger element of the audience. The costumes were cleverly thought and carried out, and the actors all that could be desired.

Local Hits.

Throughout the trial good-humoured local hits at the politicians, newspapers and citizens of Peterborough were cleverly brought out to fit into the situations, and were highly appreciated, calling forth hearty applause.

The Cast:

Officer of the Court, Mr. R. Hillier.
Lawyer Fussyboy (for Plaintiff), Mr. J. Anderson.
Lawyer Snapcash (for Defendant), Mr. C. Thurber.
Abijah Pippins, Defendant, Mr. Al. Parker.
Leonora Smithers Trustly, Plaintiff, Miss K. Tucker.
Amelia Bedelia Arrowroot, her Companion, Miss C. Peters.

The Jury:

Levi Hockheimer, Hebrew Merchant, Mr. Max Peters.
One Lung Gong, Chinese Laundryman, Mr. White.
Mrs. (Dr.) Anaesthetic Pullem, Woman Doctor, Miss K. Hall.
Vanderbilt Persimmons, Coloured Barber, Mr. W. Cartner.
Jamison Jams, addicted to Fevers and Chills, Mr. Fred Drake.
Gotleib Wurstmacher, Dutch Sausage Maker, Mr. D. Beavis.
John Measles, Amateur Football Player, Mr. W. Smith.
Happy Hooligan, a Tramp by Occupation, Mr. A. McLeish.
Footlight McGuff, a Stranded Actor, Mr. G. C. Roy.

The Programme.

Imitation church chimes, played on a concertina, Pte. Loader.
Solo, Mr. Fred Hartshorn.
Solo, Miss Fanning.
Recitation from Robt. W. Service, Mr. J. John.

The entertainment will be repeated to-night.

SLEEPLESS NIGHTS WITH ECZEMA.

Mrs. Link, 9 Walker Street, Halifax, N.S., states: — "After three years of miserable torture and sleepless nights with terrible eczema, and after trying over a dozen remedies without obtaining anything but slight temporary relief, I have been perfectly and entirely cured by using Dr Chase's Ointment. After the third or fourth application of this grand Ointment I obtained relief and a few boxes were sufficient to make a thorough cure.

GET HIGHER INTEREST THAN PAID TO PEOPLE

U.S. Making a Little Money on Its Bond Issues

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—Of the $3,324,128,750 loans actually made to the allies by the United States Government, out of a total of $3,883,900,000 credits extended, approximately $1,100,00,000 has been loaned at the rate of 4 1-4 per cent. per annum. About $2,200,000,000 was loaned at rates varying from 3 to 3 1-2 per cent. per annum.

It is not generally known that the United States Government is now lending money to the allies at a higher rate of interest than it is paying for money borrowed from the American people. It was generally supposed that the allied Governments were obtaining accommodation at the same rate of interest.

This was the case in the first few months following our entrance into the war. The Bond Issue Act of April 24, providing for the first Liberty Loan, expressly stipulated that the loans made to the allies should bear the same rate as the public issue. Under the terms of the Act of September 24, the second bond issue measure, the loans made to the Allies were "to bear such rate or rates of interest as might come from time to time be determined by the Secretary of the Treasury."

There are tunics in all shapes and lengths.

Georgette sleeves are as popular as ever.

Fire In Shell Loading Plant

Canadian Press Despatch:

WILMINGTON, Del., Dec. 12.—Fire broke out this morning in the shell loading department of the Bethlehem Steel Company's munition plant a short distance below Newcastle, Delaware. The flames caused an explosion of loaded shells, and they were scattered everywhere, the report says. The roar of the explosion resembled a bombardment.

LONDON, Dec. 12.—Premier Lloyd George will make a statement on the war before the Christmas adjournment of Parliament. Chancellor of the Exchequer Bonar Law made the announcement in the House of Commons to-day. It had been expected that the Premier himself would speak and that he would outline very fully the war aims of England.

The GRESSMAN Company Limited

HANNA, STANDARD OIL AND BORDENISM

One of the Powers Behind The "Union" Government

Can any reasonable man doubt that out of Canada's 8 million population, 5,000 upright men, free from entangling alliance could have been found, any one of whom would have been as capable of administering the office of Food Controller as Hon. W. J. Hanna—and have proved to be equally honest and equally above the suspicion of a bribe?

If this be true, the question naturally suggests itself: Why did the choice fall on the representative of the Imperial Oil Company, the instrument in Canada of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey—known throughout the length and breadth of the United States as the Mother of Trusts and the most remorseless antagonist by fair means and foul, but mostly foul, of all competitors, the most monstrous price-fixer the world has ever known?

When we contemplate the signal success of the Food Controller where the interests of the bacon barons, the price-fixers and the profiteers are concerned, and his pitiable, callous, purposeful failure in all that pertains to the comfort of the consuming masses; when we see the Government that appointed him turning a deaf ear to the outery of the people, but recommending the despoilers of the people for the bestowal of hereditary titles—what further proof need we ask that sinister and corrupting influence is working its way at Ottawa.

With bacon quoted at 60 cents and ever going higher, and all the other necessaries of life soaring in its wake, with the Food Controller issuing school boy essays on political economy.

Is hunger, with sickness and its ever attendant ills to come stalking through our streets? Or are the people going to wake up to their impending danger?

Does it not behoove us to ask: Upon what bacon does our Hanna feed that he has grown so great?

And be it remembered Electors of Canada, that this is not a controversy as to whether or not this country shall continue to do her part in the war! Is it strange that a Government, whose instruments are so familiar with fish, should seek to draw a red herring across the trail? This is a contest in which the Big Interests with their cohorts the Trusts, the bacon barons and the profiteers, seek to perpetuate their ungodly calling and are using the war and the Canadian soldier as a subterfuge whereby they hope to continue to make the people their footstool.

Halifax Cemeteries Are Filled

(Special to the Toronto Star and the Peterborough Examiner).

HALIFAX, Dec. 12.—Two of the oldest cemetaries in Halifax will be filled to capacity by [illegible] from the great disaster. [illegible] metery in the heart of the [illegible] resting place of Joseph [illegible] many other celebrated men, will be filled now. In Holy Cross Cemetery, where Sir John Thompson, ex-Premier, lies buried, only interments in family plots had been permitted, but in the silent areas of Fairview, St. John's, and Mount Olivet, there will be room for all. St. John's is a cemetery of representative Churchmen. Mount Olivet, on the outskirts of the city, is one of the new Roman Catholic burial grounds, but probably in the years to come one to which the saddest memories will cling. There, after that agonizing April day in 1912, when the Titanic went down, they gathered into one dedicated area the victims of the seas. Side by side, with these in the ground, made sacred by sorrow and human tears, will sleep now till the end of time, the victims of the greatest land disaster in the history of anada. Every hour of the day sees these silent processions of death. In some are a hearse and mourners, flowers and final emblem; in others there are none or the mourners walk for the poor and friendless are many, and they may no doubt ride as comfortably at last on drays or other waggons as under the silver trappings and waving plumes. For some the graves are waiting, but in many many cases the last rites must be deferred until the shovellers and sexton can be found.

"Fighting Odds" At The Empire

Maxine Elliott Starring in a Great Picture

A story of biz business exposing the intrigue and trickery of unscrupulous financial powers is told in the latest Goldwyn photodrama, "Fighting Odds," by Rol Cooper Megrue and Irvin S. Cobb, which is presented at the Empire Theatre to-night and to-morrow, with Maxine Elliott, noted beauty and stage favourite, making her debut as a star for Goldwyn.

The automobile industry furnishes the background and foundation for "Fighting Odds." A rising manufacturer, James Copley (played by Henry Clive), becomes the object of the schemes of the unscrupulous John W. Blake, (Charles Walton), financial power of Wall Street, and is made the head of a gigantic motor combine. But in his sudden rise to power he steps into the trap set to ruin him as a business man.

Blake brings about a condition which makes Copley criminally responsible for the failure of the combination and results in his being sent to prison. His loyal wife (played by Maxine Elliott), who has been a wonderful influence in all of his former successes, clears his name and brings Blake to account.

Matinee at 2.30, 10c.; evening, at 8 o'clock, 15c.

Addressed Ministerial Association

An address was delivered to the Ministerial Association on Monday by Mr. Joseph Wearing, M.A., on the subject of "The Spiritual Responsibility of the Layman." Mr. Wearing first outlined the influence of laymen of spiritual thought, and traced this influence in the past through the channels of philosophy, science, and literature. He pointed out that modern psychological research had proved conversion to be a real experience, which can only be explained in supernatural terms. He also showed that science has never been opposed to religious principles, but only to certain religious beliefs. "We find now," said the speaker, "that the investigations and results of science have considerably strengthened the Christian doctrine of God." Referring to the scope of laymen in the work of the Church, Mr. Wearing discussed the methods used by different denominations, and gave a good deal of credit to the work of the Salvation Army. He believed that after the war there would be a need for concerted effort among laymen to combat certain socialistic ideas which are opposed to religion and morality.

AN APPEAL TO ST. PAUL'S PEOPLE

People of St. Paul's Church are reminded that the Sunday School room is being kept open daily this week to receive donations of clothing for the sufferers in Halifax. A number of the ladies of the Church will also be there making clothing for the same purpose. Members of the congregation who wish to make cash donations are asked to leave the money with Mrs. Turner, 715 Water street, or at Madill's or McDermid's drug stores.

Just plain ability is a mighty good mascot.

Courage and caution make a splendid working team.

Why Are The War Quitters Fooling Both Town and Country?

To save themselves from the disaster which they know is imminent Unionist leaders have not hesitated to make the most unscrupulous bids for votes.

They set out in the first place to fool the farmers by promising exemption. If the farmers are exempted, then it is obvious to the least intelligent mind that the 100,000 men required for overseas service must be drawn from the towns and cities.

Farmers of Ontario do not be fooled by the promises of Bordenites who have failed to fulfill their pledges in the past! You are being fooled by the Mewburns and Bordens and Rowells, who promised exemption to the farmers' sons. Listen to this:—

Can Mr. Kemp deny that claims for exemption were made to him by employers of Toronto, who pleaded that they had always supported the Conservative Party, and were smeared in lines of production that were important, and that their interests would be materially interfered with were the workers for whom they claimed exemption called up for service overseas?

Will Mr. Kemp deny that he replied in sympathetic terms to these Unionist manufacturers of Toronto, sympathized with their demands, and sent on the letters to the tribunals to influence the decisions of those bodies in favour of the exemption of the workers of Toronto employers?

If the farmers are to be exempted, and the workers of the towns and cities to be exempted, where are the 100,000 men to be obtained in Canada? The Union Government must be fooling either the employers of the towns, or the farmers of the country. Can the farmers of Ontario repose any confidence in a Government that resorts to such trickery in order to obtain votes?

Farmers of Ontario, Union Government has promised its friends in the towns and cities to exempt their workers! If the men are to be raised in Canada for service overseas, they must be taken from the farms as well as from the towns!

Several Discouraging Cases.

The Agent's report for November, presented by Mr. George Powell, was for the most part a sordid story of conditions that are perhaps wisely guarded from the observation of the general public. Fortunately they are not numerous, neither are they novel but a feature of the agent's recital yesterday was that some of the families apparently have sufficient, if temporary income to live in comfort. Their ignorance of the elementals of household management is evidently the greatest obstacle to their advancement to a plane of living that could be theirs if they were but provident and economical in the conduct of their home affairs.

During November there were ten children kept at the Shelter, all of them boys under ten years. "If they were girls we could dispose of them more easily," Mr. Powell added. Eight boys are at present under attention and another was expected last night. The agent mentioned some of the special work Mrs. Read has done for some of the children who required particular care.

A four-year-old child in the south end of the city has given Mr. Powell a great deal of worry, but the mother is apparently incorrigible. The little one is emaciated and sickly, due largely to neglect. One of the contributing causes of this illness is the indifference that feeds the enfeebled child pie instead of easily digested and nourishing food. It was decided that Dr. King take up this case with Dr. Greer, M.O.H. for Monaghan.

A Dummer home of five children, the oldest of whom is thirteen years of age, was reported by Mr. Powell. None of these children have been to school.

A north end woman, who has been drinking and otherwise living loosely, and neglecting her child, was also reported. A number of other families in which astounding living conditions have been observed, were also reported. Three such families live in one house with thirteen children sleeping four to a bed, and an effort will be made to disperse the individual family groups. They are receiving comfortable and regular financial assistance, but the money seems to be of no real value to them. At any rate, it is not being used for the improvement of their homes.

Wages for Wards.

Adjutant McElhiney has advocated that the society demand from foster parents adequate wages for those wards whose help is valuable, both on farms and elsewhere. It is his desire, and he is supported by the society, that when boys and girls reach an age at which they begin to render material assistance to their foster parents they should be compensated adequately. He has urged that such wages should be kept in trust for the children until they pass from the protection of the society. Thus they would not face the world empty-handed.

Mr. Powell is taking up this phase of the work, which it is proposed to develop.

Pleased With Matron.

The ladies expressed the highest satisfaction with the work of Mrs. Read, and the Board as a whole has been impressed by the economy reflected in the financial statement. The work has been exacting, and has affected Mrs. Read's health. In recognition of her administrative ability the Board authorised the ladies to engage an assistant to relieve her of some of the work.

At Dr. King's request, a letter of appreciation will be forwarded to Dr Hammond, who administered anaesthetics in two operations Dr. King performed.

Arts and Crafts Column

HUGHSON JOHNSTONE, painter and decorator, 418 Water street, will answer in this column each Wednesday for Examiner readers, questions relating to painting, sign-writing, paper-hanging, kalsomining, furniture polishing, decorating, etc., for the benefit of those who might like doing their own work. Questions sent to the Examiner will receive attention in due course.

Jumbo:—In your interesting "Art Question Column" will you kindly point the proper receipt to make white enamel paint. What I mean, is: How do painters make their white enamel paint?

Ans.—Present-day painters do not attempt to make their own enamels, excepting in special cases. Factory-made enamels are cheaper and better. Still, if you care to experiment, here is one recipe: To five pounds genuine zinc, white ground, in varnish, add one quart of damar varnish. Mix thoroughly, then add one pint French oil varnish, half a pint of pale gold size and thin with pure spirits of turpentine, to the consistency of syrup. This makes a good white enamel for interior work. A little speck of Prussian blue added will improve the whiteness.

Painter, East City.—Please settle bet through your very interesting "Arts and Crafts Column": "A" says all driers are liquid. "B" says, not so. Some are in putty form. Who is right?

Ans.—The function of this column is to advise amateurs to the best of our ability, how they may do their own work in a time when everyone who has the welfare of our Canada at heart, should conserve their resources, and not to "settle bets" for painters.

Housewife, George Street:—What will brighten up my oilcloth; it is not worn, just dulled a bit? I was advised to wash it with buttermilk. What do you advise?

Ans.—Wash it clean and apply a coat of linoleum varnish. Your dealer will recommend one to you. Or wax and polish it as you would a hardwood floor. The varnish treatment is best, however.

X. Y. Z., Peterborough:—Will you please to put answer in "Art Column" on Wednesday for me. How many pieces of paper I shall buy for my kitchen; size, 10 feet long, 14 feet wide?

Ans.—You do not say how many openings are in your kitchen, nor the height of the walls, so I can only guess. It will take about five rolls of ceiling, twelve rolls of wall and eighteen yards of border.

M. M., Weller Street:—Which is the best way to take slight scratches out of furniture?

Ans.—Almost any of the furniture polishes on the market will remove them if only "slight scratches". Just follow directions.

Jane McD. — What colour reflects the greatest amount of light?

Ans.—Yellow is said to reflect more sunlight than any of the others. Although some contend white to be the best reflector.

Bolsheviki Find No Sympathy In Hun Peace Terms

Germans Want Control of All Russian Wheat For Fifteen Years

LONDON, Dec. 12.— The Petrograd correspondent of the Times attributes to a responsible source the statement that during the formal conferences the German and Russian representatives at Brest-Litovska regarding the armistice on the eastern front, the Germans indicated that the following points weer likely to be included in any of their peace negotiations:

Germany is to have control of the Russian wheat market for fifteen years.

All German goods to be admitted to Russia duty free.

No territory now occupied by the Germans to be surrendered.

The correspondent says the Bolsheviki were disappointed by the reserved attitude of the German negotiations and their lack of sympathy with political idealism.

Other causes contributed to their depression, but it is stated they are determined to conclude an armistice at any cost if the latest appeal by the Russian commissioners to the allies fails.

CAPT. KENDALL FINDS BODY OF OLD SEA PAL

Ex-Commander of the Empress Nearly Killed By Big Halifax Shell

HALIFAX, N.S., Dec. 12.—By the shore of those Halifax narrows where he had so often swung to anchor in the old days, Captain Geo. Murray, Port Warden of Quebec, and former commander of the "Empress of Britain," went out on his late voyage. First to find and identify the body was an old sea pal, none other than Capt. H. G. Kendall, of Crippen fame, who was in command of the "Empress of Ireland" at the time of her sinking, and later figured in the saving of two British ships in Antwerp harbour at the outbreak of the war.

Capt. Kendall had come to Halifax just a few days before the disaster. At the time of the explosion he was at the home of a friend in Artillery Row. The house was wrecked, but the Captain himself was only scratched. When he went out afterwards to take his bearings he found a big shell buried in the garden. It had been blown a mile or more from the burning ship, but fortunately had not exploded.

ATTEMPTED TO BRIBE CANDIDATE IN NEW BRUNSWICK

An important news item has come from New Brunswick, where Mr. N. W. Brown, Liberal candidate in Fredericton, has made the following charge:

"I want to say to the ministers who are out on the stump against me, that they are supporting a party in this country, which, on Sunday, the 18th day of November, just past, after they had failed the day before to bribe my solicitor, Mr. R. W. McLellan, with $2,000 to make a mistake in my nomination paper, sent a man all the way up to my home, in Southampton, and offered me $5,000 in cash if I would miss the train next morning, and block an election in the constituency, and thus, by bribing me, the people's candidate, to destroy democracy at home, for which we are fighting in France and Flanders. Shame, Shame! Ten thousand shames on such a German act.

"Since then a Tory lawyer, whose office is up town, called up a friend of mine who lives above the city, and said: Make an excuse to go to Woodstock in your car and go round to Nelson. Tell him to get aboard and come down with him. We will treat him honourably. We will give him a month's trip away and anything he asks."

THE CHERNIAVSKY TRIO

The people of Peterborough are evidently not music-mad. There was a light audience last night at the Conservatory of Music Hall to hear what, in a new and real sense, is expressed in the much-worn phrase a "decided musical treat," but those present were choice spirits and well rewarded for their attendance.

The concert given by the Cherniavsky Trio was, in every sense, the most delightful exposition of chamber music the most exacting could demand. The three Russian brothers are, individually, all artists of the ultimate finish; and, in their concerted music, are veritably three in one, so admirable is the blending of their individual artistry. As one listened to the rich, molten melody, the wonderful harmony, one could not help wishing that the wonderful harmony of the work did not obtain in a nasional sense in great Russia to-day.

The concerted music consisted of two groups of trios, admirably varied to touch every phase of musical expression and character, every number performed with unerring accuracy, delicious harmony and charming ensemble. The chief merit consisted in wonderful delicacy of nuance and pianissimo effects.

The solo contributions were of exquisite finish and delicacy. Michael Cherniavsky, 'cellist, gave a four-fold group opening with an etherial presentation of Schumann's Abendlied, and including a brilliant Rondo by Boccarni, a deliciously dainty cradle song of his own composition, and the the perennial Popper's "Harlequin."

The pianist, Jan, was perhaps the best of the soloists in the wider musical sense, combining brilliant technical resource with beautifully contrasting delicacy and dynamics. The Chopin Nocturne was delightfully done and the tours de force in Tausig's setting of Schubert's Military March were robustly effective.

The violin soloist, Leo Cherniavsky, has a beautiful, though delicate tone and comprehensive technique. His playing of the Meditation from Masenet's "Thais" was full of rich tone and revelation of sentiment, while his other contributions of a more sprightly and showy character, the Correlli—Kreisler "Variations" and one of Paganini's pyrotechnical caprices, were delightful demonstrations of virtuosity.

Altogether the evening was a musical night with artists, admirable and artist in solo and magnificently effective in ensemble.

British Columbia Retains The Voluntary Subscription Plan Of Maintaining Patriotic Fund

The December bulletin of the Canadian Patriotic Fund contains the following report, showing that the voluntary system of maintenance will be continued in 1918:

British Columbia has fired the first gun in its 1918 campaign. Under date of November 8th, Lieut.-Gov. F. S. Barnard issued the following appeal to the people of his Province:

At the meeting of the National Executive, held at Ottawa, on October 26th, at which all of the provinces of the Dominion were fully represented, the policy for the year 1918 was fully debated, and, upon resolution, it was unanimously decided to continue the voluntary system, it being considered neither necessary nor desirable to fall back upon the Federal Government for assistance for the year 1918. Therefore, all branches throughout Canada are requested to use every effort to continue the system of voluntary contributions.

We must all realize the enormous burden which the war has placed upon the Federal Treasury, so that, while we have an organization through which sufficient funds may be obtained altogether apart from taxation, it would appear to be entirely wrong to forfeit such source of revenue and thus make it necessary for the Government — already sorely pressed for funds—to find $15,000,000 or $20,000,000 additional, because it is quite certain that what the Patriotic Fund can do for $12,000,000 per annum would cost the government $20,000,000 and perhaps more. The fund as it is at present administered, is flexible, and may supply what and where assistance is most needed. This can be done in an efficient, sympathetic and economical way. On the other hand, Government administration could not discriminate between those who have and those who have not. Hence, the enormous difference in the cost to the country, which would mean nothing short of absolute waste.

The Federal income-tax, which is now in force, exempts incomes of unmarried men up to $1,500 and married men to $3,000 per annum. Therefore, it is safe to say that not more than one man in ten in this Province will be affected by this tax. That being the case, what are the other 90 per cent. going to do, individually, to assist in the prosecution of the war?

The issue of this great struggle means either national life or death. It is a case of serfdom or freedom. Every man must fight or pay. If you are not directly taxed, you can help by assisting to support the dependents of the men who are fighting and dying for you, by voluntary supporting the greatest national fund Canada has ever had.

The small sacrifices we are asked to make in maintaining this fund and kindred organizations are nothing, absolutely nothing, compared with the sacrifices of our gallant soldiers and their dependents; but you say: "Yes, support the dependents properly, but let the Government do it." Why should we who remain at home in security and comfort be relieved of all direct personal effort and inconvenience, or anything you may wish to call it, while our boys are making the supreme sacrifice so that we may be thus secure. No, that argument is bad. This is our war—the people's war—just as much as it is the war of the soldiers. Individual help is urgently needed; it is demanded. Every one can help. Canada, as a nation, has said continue this voluntary system. This being the case, every man in Canada should feel it a privilege to have this channel afforded through which he may assist. The Government are not undertaking this work. Therefore, the people must. For three years and a half we have not faltered; we cannot afford to do so now.

While we expect our gallant soldiers to fight, stay-at-homes must continue to pay. The last thing we would dream of would be the thought of a British or British-Canadian Army quitting. Can we at home think of quitting payment of our money to assist in properly supporting the dependents of the men whom we expect to fight, and to fight until the day of victory.

On behalf of this fund, I appeal to all of the members of all committees of all branches throughout the Province of British Columbia to do everything in their power to place this most important matter strongly before the people of each individual district, so that there may be no doubt as to the continuation of sufficient funds forthcoming to properly carry on the work so long as there may be occasion for it.

In the household where children are it should be the rule to use sugar only with other foods and at the close of a meal.

FARMERS TANGLED BY THE UNCERTAINTIES OF THE WARDEN'S POWER TO EXEMPT SONS

The rotunda of the Munro House after luncheon to-day looked like a joint meeting of the County Council, the Farmers' Club, and Farmers' Institute, minus its lady members, with a complete roll call of each organization. From the Warden down to horney-handed hired men and "A2" sons, all parts of the county seemed to be well represented. Practically all the Reeves of the Peterborough townships had their little followings of neighbours, who moved from group to group, apparently befuddled and obfuscated, completely at sea and with no one to guide them to solid ground.

Some of them had come in from remote rural communities to attend a military appeal tribunal which, they said, they had been notified would be conducted at the City Hall. There, however, they found Judge Huycke with a pile of voters' list appeals before him, and no direction or instructions regarding the tribunal supposedly scheduled to sit to-day. The farmers, reeves and all, alternated between the Council Chamber and the Court House, where Warden Max Brown was struggling with the vague duties that had been thrust upon him as the result of rural discontent and agitation over the operation of the Military Service Act.

At first there was a feeling that the Warden was the dispenser of exemptions, but some of the dubious Reeves believed that his powers were limited to receiving and considering appeals preparatory to their hearing by the tribunal.

"He's a buffer till after Monday," said one of the township men. "If they were so anxious to exempt farmers, why didn't they appoint farmers to deal with the farmers' sons and hired men? The Government took alarm at the work of the tribunals, and the Warden is only a straw man, a Mr. Hanna. No power has been deputed to him, and his position is simply that of an adviser."

The fact that they had been ordered to appear before a tribunal to-day only to find that there was no tribunal to receive them, aroused certain suspicions among some of the appellants, and one Reeve, who thinks more than he talks, put the pertinent question to a companion as to how the Warden could be given a power of exemption that had not been provided for in the Military Service Act. "It's camouflage, that's what it is," he concluded.

TO-DAY'S WAR NEWS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, December 12.—A local attack by the enemy yesterday afternoon against our positions north of Lavacquerie, Cambrai front, was repulsed, says to-day's official communication. We carried out a successful raid last night in the vicinity of Pontruet north of St. Quentin, in which we captured prisoners and a machine gun.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, December 12.—Russian officials in London, who are establishing direct communications with General Kaledines and other leaders of democratic organizations in Russia, declared to the Associated Press to-day that the movement to overthrow Bolsheviki was supported not only by the Cossacks, but by almost all leaders of other parties. These leaders, it was said, are confident they will be able to make short shrift of the Bolsheviki.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, December 12—The Bolsheviki have dispersed the Senate, the highest Russian court, and at all other courts of Petrograd in keeping with a recent decree of People's Commissaries, substituting new revolutionary tribunals. The only opposition met was at the Palace of the County Judges, who refused to be dispersed. They were arrested by soldiers. Leon Trotzky, Bolsheviki Foreign Minister, has issued a decree dismissing all Russian Ambassadors and their staffs.

CONSIDERATION FOR THE FARMERS

Reeve Bullied, of Chandos, and Reeve Lane of Anstruther and Burleigh, also ex-Reeve Hill, this afternoon addressed His Honour Judge Huycke on the advisability of giving the farmers every consideration in the matter of exemptions. Reeve Bullied, of Chandos, pointed out that the three northern municipalities had voluntarily sent one-sixth of the population to the front. This was confirmed by Reeve Lane of Anstruther and Burleigh, also ex-Reeve Hill.

In reply Judge Huycke assured the deputation that the farmers would receive every consideration not because they were farmers, but because they were food producers.

"The army requires them, and the army must have them, unless they can better serve the nation at home," said Judge Huycke.

12 BELOW LAST NIGHT

The lowest figure reached last night was the same as the previous night, namely, 12 degrees below zero. The highest yesterday was 10 above. Low temperatures still continue all over the continent and there will be no immediate material change.—W. F.

JUDGE HUYCKE SAYS THERE IS NO FARMERS' TRIBUNAL

"There is no farmers' tribunal. This is the only tribunal there is, according to the Act." In this manner His Honour Judge Huycke replied to Allan Caldwell, a farmer, who this afternoon appeared before the Tribunal over which Judge Huycke is presiding, with an appeal to have his son, Hugh Caldwell, exempted. Caldwell wanted to secure possession of a written statement which he had submitted to the Appeal Tribunal, which he intended to present to the "farmers' tribunal," as he called it. He was given permission to make a copy.

Worked 400 Acres.

Cross-examined by Crown Attorney Hatton, Caldwell said that he and his son Hugh worked four hundred acres of land. He admitted that he had only sixteen acres of fall crop on the entire four hundred acres.

"What do you do in the winter?" inquired Mr. Hatton.

"We lumber," replied witness. Last year Caldwell produced between twenty-five and forty acres on the four hundred acres. In addition to this, about thirty acres of hay was produced on the farm. Two other boys, aged fifteen and thirteen respectively, help to work the farm.

Judgment was reserved.

PTE. HENDERSON IS MISSING

On to-day's official list of casualties from Ottawa appears the name of Pte. J. E. Henderson, of Peterborough, who is officially reported wounded and missing. Pte. Henderson was with the Fort Garry Horse, and is evidently a casualty following the charge of the Fort Garrys on the Cambrai front.

Tidal Wave Felt 35 Miles Out At Sea

(Special to the Toronto Star and the Peterborough Examiner).

BOSTON, Mass., Dec. 12. — The tidal wave caused by the Halifax explosion swept thirty-five miles out to sea, according to the story told to-day by Kenneth Casson, of this city, who was on a returning transport off the coast of Nova Scotia the day of the disaster. He declared a huge wave swept over their vessel, smashing the pilot house and damaging the superstructure.

Voice of The People

To the Editor of The Examiner:

To prevent misunderstanding of the Warden's position regarding farm exemptions, let me say he was appointed by the Government by telegram to represent the Government fully and that his representation will be taken accordingly. Some people have supposed that his appointment meant that he might recommend, but that there was no authority behind it. The Government will take the Warden's representations and recommendations in West Peterborough. He is an official representing the county, and as such, just like the Mayor, must be considered a fit and proper person to speak for those he represents. The Government has agreed to this, which was the recommendation of Mr. Burnham to the Government, and the recommendations of the Warden will be treated as final.

Yours truly,
W. H. BURNHAM.

A BIG VOTE OF CREDIT

(Special to the Toronto Star and the Peterborough Examiner).

LONDON, Dec. 12.—Chancellor of the Exchequer Bonar Law moved a credit of 550,000,000 pounds sterling in the House of Commons this afternoon.

Among the gifts that are being sent from Peterborough for Halifax relief are one hundred pairs of boots from Mr. B. F. Ackerman and $50 worth of children's coats and clothing from Mr. R. C. Braund.

Twenty-nine Rinks Practically Complete

The tankard skips selected by the Curling Club Monday, were R. M. Waddell and W. M. Lang, and the District Cup Skips, A. W. Archibald and Ray Best. The prospects for the winter's activites were never brighter. The roster of members is practically complete but it is understood that there are a number of remaining names to be presented.

The selection of the twenty-nine rinks last night left only two leads open. This provides for 116 players, and there are quite a number of others unattached. So favorable have been the ice-making conditions that only the finishing touches remain before the purple marker picks out the rings and invites the most enthusiastic to throw the first stone.

plendid Responses From Bonner-Worth

The management and employees of the Bonner-Worth Company, who already have done much for patriotic work, made a hearty response yesterday to the urgent call from Halifax for relief. Directly the call came the management appointed a committee of three in each department, who went amongst the 225 employees and in two hours had collected $170, represening an average contribution of about 80 cents each.

As half the staff is under 18, some idea of the loyal spirit, even in the younger people, may be given.

A four o'clock one from each of the committees was appointed to spend the money on suitable garments in the city, thus keeping the money in Peterborough. The time taken by the purchasing committee will not be deducted, or will the committee lose their war bonus.

The committee, who returned with a well chosen stock of women's and children's warm underclothing were enthusiastic in their appreciation of the consideration shown them by the merchants. Mr. Robert Fair allowed a discount of 10 per cent. and the Turnbull Company sold at last year's prices.

The management of the factory have promised 100 pounds of wool for the relief fund, besides which they have allowed several employees to pack bales of clothing which the girls themselves contributed.

SUCCESSOR TO MR. F. J. SQUIRE

Charles H. Brewster has been appointed by Judge Huycke to sit on the Military Service Tribunal at Havelock, in the place of F. J. Squire, who last week was arrested on a charge of perjury. Reeve Wm. Mathieson is the second member of the Board. Nineteen cases remain on the list to be disposed of. Fifteen are railway men, whose cases will be dealt with by the special C.P.R. tribunal.

PUBLIC SKATING RINKS SOON READY

Of the five public skating rinks the city has planned to provide for the people, several of them are already in splendid condition and are growing more popular nightly. The sheet in the yard of the old west ward school is one of the best in the city, and there is another, not many blocks away, on Walton street. Inverlea Park will have a rink for the north end, but in the south two new locations have been chosen. Last winter there was only one rink in the south at the corner of Wolfe and Stewart streets, but this has been closed to the public recently by the high fence the C.G.E. has built around the entire block on which the old carbon works is situated. Hence the city has moved to the field north of the Colonial Weaving factory, where a bigger rink will be built. The south end youth will also have a large area of ice on King Edward park. The cost of operating the rinks is comparatively small. Ald. Dobbin has applied himself to the arrangement of these public facilities during the past year. Last winter's expenditure was ridiculously small and the outlay this season should not be much larger.

PETER ROBINSON CHAPTER I.O.D.E.

Spend a Pleasant Afternoon With Them Saturday—Proceeds For Navy League

It is known that out of the millions of tons of merchant ships that have been sunk during the war, the dependents of crews who have lost their lives are in many cases in dire necessity. There is no patriotic fund or pension system covering their cases, notwithstanding that this class of the community is to-day really the most important and one on which we depend the most, for without sailors to man the ships, our products both from the mine, field, factory and fisheries would not reach their destination; the trade of the Empire would cease and the countries of the Empire would be open to invasion.

OBITUARY

ELIZA J. CLARKE.

Eliza Jane, beloved wife of Charles Clarke, died at Nicholls Hospital on Tuesday morning. She leaves to mourn her death her husband, three small children, five brothers and four sisters.

The funeral, from 871 Stewart street, will take place on Thursday, at 2.30. Service at the house, conducted by Adjt. McElhiney, at 2 o'clock. Internment at the Little Lake Cemetery.

WM. M. CLARKE.

Death claimed one of the most highly and respected residents of Galway in the person of Mr. William Clarke. The deceased was taken ill on Sunday night, 10 p.m., on Nov. 25. Dr. T. A. White was immediately called, then Dr. R. S. Frost was called in on the following morning, when the doctors decided an operation necessary.

On Wednesday morning he was removed to the Ross Memorial Hospital, Lindsay, where he underwent a severe operation of the bowels. He died on the following Sunday at 10 p.m.

A beautiful wreath of flowers was given from the Kinmount school, of which he was a trustee for nine years. The funeral was held on Dec. 5th, with a large attendance, from the family residence to St. Mary's church. The deceased was 51 years of age.

He leaves to mourn his loss a sorrowing wife, four daughters and one son, Mrs. J. I. Simpson, of Kinmount, Percy, Zeta, Kathleen and Helen at home.

LOUIS G. FOBERT

Louis Gabriel Fobert died on Monday, December 10th, at the family residence, Chemong, after an illness of some weeks' duration.

Mr. Fobert's death will be keenly regretted by all who knew him, he having been universally known as a good friend and a worthy citizen. He was born in Buckingham, Quebec, exactly 77 years from the day he died—Dec. 10, 1840.

For three generations Mr. Fobert's family had been identified with the lumber trade in the Ottawa Valley. At 17 years of age he came to Ontario —then Upper Canada—and was connected with the Campbell and Hudson, and the McDougall and Ludgate Lumber Companies.

Later Mr. Fobert retired from the lumber business and entered the hotel business in Bridgenorth. His honest dealings and strict order built up so large a business that Mr. Fobert built the Chemong Hotel, which he conducted several years later, retiring into private life and residing for the balance of his life at Chemong Park. Only two years ago Mr. and Mrs. Fobert celebrated their golden wedding.

He is survived by his wife, who was formerly Elizabeth Marjorie Jane Kearney, sister of Mr. P. A. and J. E. Kearney, Young's Point. One son, W. A., at home, and two daughters, Clotilda, at home, and Mrs. J. S. Sullivan of Detroit.

The funeral took place this (Wednesday) morning at 8 o'clock, to Young's Point.

REFERENDUM CAN BE SUBMITTED TO PEOPLE WITHIN SIXTY DAYS

Sir Wilfrid Laurier Makes Direct Reply to Sir Robert Borden's Contention—Four Meetings Were Held in Calgary Last Evening—Ten Thousand Persons Heard the Liberal Chief Disuss the Issues of the Day.

TWO CURRENTS OF OPINION

Special to The Examiner:

CALGARY, Dec. 13.—As a direct reply to Sir Robert's contention that the holding of a referendum would mean a delay in sending reinforcements to the Canadian forces overseas, Sir Wilfrid Laurier made the declaration to a Calgary audience last night that if returned to power he would see to it that a referendum on conscription would be taken within sixty days of the convening of parliament. Sir Wilfrid declared that the main objection of delay raised by Conservatives against the taking of a referendum in order that the will of the majority could prevail, was without foundation because he would see to it that there would be no delay. He said that if Sir Robert Borden could not institute a referendum without delay then he (Sir Wilfrid), would show him how, and he specified that it would be done within thirty days of the assembling of parliament.

FOUR MEETINGS.

Sir Wilfrid's four meetings in Calgary last night were the most remarkable of his present tour. The late arrival of Sir Wilfrid's train prevented him from reaching Calgary until eleven o'clock at night. From seven o'clock until eleven, ten thousand people sat in the new Grand Theatre, Knox Church, the Central Methodist Church and Paget Hall, and they waited patiently, singing patriotic songs and listening to impromptu speeches until the Liberal Chief arrived. Sir Wilfrid did not finish his Calgary addresses until half past one in the morning, and as he hurried from one hall to the other the crowds kept themselves in good humour singing, "We Won't Go Home Until Morning," and one speaker typified the general sentiment when he said, "We came many miles to hear the grand old chief and we are going to hear him if we have breakfast brought in."

Sir Wilfrid said that the reason why he braved a severe winter to visit the west was because he wanted to answer in person, notwithstanding his seventy-six years of age, the charge of traitor cast upon him by unscrupulous opponents. He said that throughout his long career he had always decided public questions that came before him on the one great principle of the good, not of one race, not of one province, not of one creed, but of the whole Dominion of Canada. He said he was preaching in Calgary the same doctrine that he preached in his old home constituency of St. Sauveur, Quebec, at the beginning of the present campaign, when he told his compatriots of French origin that his heart is in the war and that he intends that Canada shall fight in the war to the finish, because he believes in his heart that in this contest Canada is participating in a righteous and holy war against Germany.

CONSCRIPTION ISSUE.

"Whatever Sir Robert Borden may believe about obtaining the troops," he declared, "I myself believe that I can obtain the troops that Canada needs by appealing to the hearts and to the soul of my fellow countrymen in this holy cause. Sir Robert Borden thinks that he must use compulsion. For my part I do not want to use compulsion. I want to persuade you I am a Liberal of the English school and it is by these methods that I want to succeed. By compulsion you may get the bodies of the men who will rush to the exemption tribunals and ask for exemption, but if they go to fight willingly you will get their hearts as well as their bodies and I want every man who goes to feel that his heart and his soul are in the fight." (Cheers.)

Sir Wilfrid said that he wanted to win the election not so much for himself, because at his age personal considerations were immaterial, and he already had his share of what the world could give, but for the sake of Canada, because he believed that the cause he represents is a better policy for Canada's good than the policy of his opponents.

"In the course of my long career," he said, "I have met both victories and defeats, but no victory has ever elated me and no defeat has ever discouraged me. It will be the same experience again this time. If we are victorious I see before me more duties, very arduous duties, but I will put on the harness and I will try to do the best I can for the country I love, as I have done in the past, but if I am defeated, the following day I will be at my post again, a member of parliament, a private in the grand army of freedom, fighting for the right as God gives me the privilege of seeing the right." (Cheers.)

At one of the meetings where labour was very largely represented, Sir Wilfrid Laurier expressed satisfaction that Labour and Liberalism were uniting and he said that if it should be his good fortune to form an administration, he would endeavour to give to Canada, as he did in 1896, the best men that Canada had and who would be willing to serve the Dominion.

Labour Representation.

"Indeed," he said, "I would go out in the ranks and would not confine myself to one class. I would endeavour to see that all the people were represented."

Sir Wilfrid paid great attention to the need of agricultural production, and said he agreed that farmers should be exempted from conscription and remarked that the only difference between him and the government regarding these exemptions was that he stood for it openly, and the government stood for it sneakingly. Sir Wilfrid crystalized the present contest by declaring that in Canada to-day there are two currents of opinion, just as visible as if they were traced before the people in chalk. These two currents of opinion were the great masses on one side and the classes on the other side. "The calsses are with the Tories," he concluded amid cheers, "and the masses are with the Liberals."

THE HEINTZMAN STAFF ENTERTAINED AT LUNCHEON

Mr. B. H. Britton, of Heintzman & Co., entertained his agency staff and a few friends at luncheon last evening at the Empress Hotel. After a fine dinner, Mr. Britton explained that it was the custom of the company in all its branches, of which there were twenty-nine throughout Canada, to have an annual gathering of this nature for the exchange of ideas for mutual development and expressions of opinion from others outside of the manager and staff. He was glad to be able to inform those present that two returned soldiers were on his staff and there was room for others, who would be welcomed.

His Worship Mayor Duffus congratulated Mr. Britton on the energy and push shown by the company since locating in Peterborough and stated the city was always interested in the development of its business concerns as well as its manufacturing interests. To the young men on the agency staff he left a good motto when he said, "that the man who wins is the man who is in the race and not the looker-on."

Ald. Stratton was also pleased to be present and congratulated Mr. Britton on his fine warerooms, which added greatly to the business section of the city where they were located. He was extremely glad to have him as a neighbour. He felt that with the energy behind the company in Peterborough exhibited by Mr. Britton and his staff that the business here would greatly develop.

Mr. G. N. Gordon made his address specially to the young men and gave some excellent and practical advice. He believed that a young man should have confidence in himself. Confidence in what he had to sell or do, and if he put sufficient energy and effort into it he was bound to succeed.

If he had any problems to solve he should take the big ones up first and get them out of the way and not shove them aside for future attention. Mr. Gordon's address was listened to with much appreciation.

Mr. R. M. Glover was also present and thanked Mr. Britton for his kind invitation.

Mr. Britton thanked all present for their attendance, Ont., writes: "I was very much run down and could not sleep either day or night, and my arms and legs ached so that life was very miserable. After using six boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, I feel well and strong again."

Mr. Charles Gentleman of the staff, also made a few short remarks, and felt it had been a pleasant and profitable evening.

Mr. F. B. Hutchinson for the young men, also made a few short remarks.

CHEER LIKE AT A BALL GAME

Pte. Hartley Says Canadians Are Enthusiastic When Enemy Plane is Brought Down

Mrs. D. Hartley has received the following letter from her son, Pte. S. C. Hartley, formerly of the 93rd Battalion:

France, Nov. 16.

Dear Mother,—Am writing you a few lines in answer to your last letter. We are having wet weather here and lots of mud I can tell you. I see by the papers they are calling up the boys for conscription in Canada. We need them I can tell you. I have seen lots of the Peterborough boys. I saw young Daimard and had a good talk with him. You may guess what cheer it gives us boys to meet others from our own home town. There is some hard fighting going on here now, but I think things will all quiet down in a months time. I suppose you see by the papers the way the Huns are killing the women and children with their bombs. They come over our lines from twenty to thirty a day and throw bombs at us, and on moonlight nights they are worse, but we go over and give them twice as much as they send and when we bring down one of Fritz's planes the boys cheer just like at a ball game at home. Have not felt so well since I got the gas. Christmas will soon be here. I want you to have a happy day that day mother, as it only comes once a year, and remember your boy is fighting for you in France, and nothing gives us more pleasure than to know our loved ones at home are well and happy. That is what we are fighting for. I have been in France a year this month and two years a soldier gone New Year's Day, and for a lad 19 years old I think I am doing my bit. I've had no leave yet but hope to soon. Love to all at home. Wishing you all a merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

From your loving son, Stanley Hartley, with the British Expeditionary Force, France.

Pope Gratified

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

ROME, Dec. 13.—Pope Benedict is intensely gratified at the Christian liberation of Jerusalem from the hands of the Moslems, the United Press was told by the Vatican authorities to-day. The Holy Father, it was said, is greatly concerned as to the city's future. Some suggestions have been received at the Vatican that the Pope leave Rome and re-establish the head of the Catholic church in the Holy City. It was stated authoritatively that the Pope did not approve of such a plan.

COULD NOT SLEEP.

"THE FILM OF FEAR"

By ARNOLD FREDERICKS

"You don't need to go. I've got to. I'm a detective, and I'm working for Mrs. Morton on a most important case." As he spoke he took a bill from his pocket and pressed it into the man's hand.

The janitor responded at once. "I'll fetch it up, sir," he said. "Wait for me here."

Duvall occupied the few moments consumed by the janitor's absence in examining, by means of his pocket electric torch, the surface of the roof on which he stood. The smooth flat terra cotta tiles showed no distinguishing marks. Here and there spots of paint, marred by footprints, indicated where the painters at work on the building had set their buckets, no doubt while painting the wooden portions of the top floor, and the metal chimney-pots on the roof.

The man returned in a few moments with the ladder, and Duvall lowering it to the main portion of the adjoining house, saw that it was of sufficient length to permit his descent. In a moment he had slipped off his shoes and was cautiously descending the ladder.

Once on the surface of the main roof of the house he had intended to take down the ladder and by means of it descend the remaining six or feet to the roof of the back building, but he found that means for this descent already existed. A rough, but permanent, wooden ladder led from the higher lever to the lower. Duvall judged that it had been placed there to provide easy communication between the upper roof and the lower. Leaving the ladder where it stood he made his way down to the roof of the back building.

It was covered with tin, and he walked softly in his stockinged feet to avoid being overheard.

His first act was to go to the wall of the apartment house that faced him, and make a thorough examination of it by the light of his electric torch. He judged that in the position in which he now stood he was about on a level with the floor of Ruth's room. The brick wall of the apartment building facing him was blank, that is, it contained no windows. After a minute examination Duvall was forced to the conclusion that no entrance to the girl's bedroom had been made through it. The bricks were solid, immovable—the cemented joints firm and unbroken. A moment later he turned to the left.

Here the rising wall of the attic story of the house faced him, reaching to a point above his head. Two dusty and long unopened dormer windows, similar to those facing on the court, confronted him. He remembered that the servant of the house next door had informed him earlier in the week, that the attic was, and long had been, unoccupied.

Whether the attic was tenanted or not had no bearing on the problem which confronted him. The windows might serve as a means whereby anyone could reach the roof of the back building from the house proper, but they did not suggest any means whereby anyone might reach the windows of Ruth's bedroom. And by ascending to the point on the attic roof where his ladder stood the problem was no nearer a solution, for a person standing there was on the edge of the court between the buildings, seven feet or more above the girl's bedroom window and as many away from it. He turned away, and approaching the rear edge of the back building, looked over.

To his left some eight feet away, was the fire escape before the rear window of the girl's bedroom. Standing on that sharp edge, he realized that in no way could he reach the railing of the fire escape except by jumping, a feat that an expert gymnast might have hesitated to attempt, at that height above the ground. And could it be done successfully, what about the damage to the paint upon the fire escape's iron surface? And yet it would seem that a young girl had accomplished this feat, without noise, without making the least mark to register her passage. He thought of the telltale handkerchief, which he had found on the fire escape earlier in the evening, then turned away with a feeling of annoyance. The thing was, he realized, an impossibility.

A sudden sense of the passage of time made him hurry to the roof of the rear building of the house at No. 162. Like its neighbor it was built with an attic story, and in the rear were two dormer windows opening in the same way upon the lower roof. Could these windows by any chance be those of the room of Marcia Ford? It seemed highly probable, since, if she had operated from the roof they could afford an easy way to reach it. Very cautiously he crept up to the nearer of the two windows and looked in.

The room before him was in total darkness, and the very faint radiance from without was not sufficient to enable him to distinguish anything within it. The window, however, he saw to his delight was open, and the opening, although small, was quite large enough to enable him to crawl in. Holding his electric torch in one hand, he crept into the room.

The beam of light from his torch, although powerful, was of course, concentrated. He swept it about the room, to make sure that it was unoccupied. It was a small room, long and narrow, with the single dormer window, by which he had just entered, at one end, and a similar one at the side, in the slanting mansard roof. It contained a small bed, a chiffonier and dresser, a table, some chairs and a trunk. It was a woman's room; one glance at the dresses told him that, and a handkerchief lying crumpled on the latter's top proved to be identical with the one he had found on the fire escape, both in its general character, and in the initial "F" in one of its borders. Beyond any doubt he was now in Miss Marcia Ford's room.

Had he been inclined to doubt it, two photographs upon the wall would have convinced him. One was a picture of the Ford girl herself. The other was a portrait of the woman of the cab, the one that Duvall fully believed to be the author of the attacks upon Ruth Morton.

He examined the various articles about the room with the utmost care, but nothing of any interest rewarded his search. It had been his hope that he might find something of definite value—the typewriter, perhaps, upon which the threatening letters had been written, the black sealing wax, used in making the death's-head seals, the paper employed by the writer. None of these things was in evidence; there was no typewriter, the table contained a small bottle of ink, a couple of pens, and some cheap envelopes and a writing tablet of linen paper quite different from that upon which the warning letters had been written. There was nothing, absolutely nothing, in the place to connect its occupant with the sending of the letters, except the room's location in such close proximity to that of Ruth Morton, and the photograph of the woman of the cab, hanging upon the wall.

Duvall, greatly disappointed, was about to take his departure, when he observed at the far end of the room a door. Whether it led to another room or to a bathroom, or merely to a closet, he did not of course know. There was danger, he fully realized, that Marcia Ford might return at any moment. There was equal danger that, upon opening the door he might find himself in another room, possibly an occupied one. He thought at one time that he heard sounds on the far side of the door, but when he paused and stood listening, he could distinguish nothing, and concluded that he had been mistaken.

Shutting off the light of his pocket torch for the moment, in order that should the entrance lead to another room its rays might not betray his presence, Duvall grabbed the door knob and turning it softly opened the door.

For a moment he had a glimpse of a black cavern and then with incredible swiftness, something struck him a heavy blow in the face. What it was he was too much surprised and stunned to realize. His electric lamp fell from his hand and clattered to the floor.

Realizing his helplessness in the almost total darkness, he bent down, groping about in an unsuccessful effort to recover the searchlight. And then, with a loud cry, a heavy body projected itself upon him, grasping wildly at his hair. An arm, clothed in some silken material, encircled his throat. He felt himself choking. And at the same moment a strange and irrational terror seized him. He seemed in the grasp of something uncanny, something inhuman, in spite of its very human cries. With a shudder he sprang to his feet, unable to locate the missing electric torch, and shaking the shrieking figure from him, plunged toward the window by which he had entered.

A chance to buy Royal Oak Tires

"Tougher than Oak"

at bargain prices !

Sale will last from Saturday, December 8th, to Saturday, December 15th, both days inclusive

You are not going to have the opportunity much longer of buying Royal Oak Tires or any tires at present prices.

The continuous demand of the allied nations for rubber goods is reflected in sharply advancing prices. With raw materials going up, a scarcity of labor, and higher wages, the tire manufacturer finds the pressure too much for him.

Prices of tires in Canada are going to advance soon all along the line.

Prices of tires in the United States have already been advanced from 10% to 15%.

The prudent auto owner, however, is not going to wait until higher prices overtake him; he is going to buy now and put the difference in his pocket.

Why the Reduction?

"Well, if prices are going up, why are you lowering the price of Royal Oak Tires; is there anything the matter with them?"

That's a fair question and demands a fair answer.

There is only one reason why the prices are being lowered at all on Royal Oak Tires and that is because we want to introduce them quickly; to make them better known without the delay which usually attends the growth in demand for a new article. Another reason is we want to get as many orders as we can NOW so that we can continue steady shipments all winter, avoiding in some measure the confusion, excitement, and waiting that result when orders are held over until the Spring.

So far as quality goes, Royal Oak Tires are A1 value in any way you take them.

The Value is There

The highest grade of rubber is what they are made of—you can't beat that—welded by hand into a tough wear-resisting fabric that endures like solid oak.

We know this because we have proved it—proved it by actual road tests and we stand ready to prove it again.

So there can be no doubt as to the standard of Royal Oak Tires; they yield all the wear and stand all the rough service that you would naturally expect from a tire that has so many natural advantages to start with.

But remember—

The low prices we are quoting on Royal Oak Tires are for A FEW DAYS ONLY!

That means just what it says, the sale will be for seven days only, commencing Saturday, December 8th, and ending Saturday, December 15th. There will positively be no sales at these prices later.

This information is not for the man who knows tire values; he won't have to be told that he's getting a bargain; but it is for the benefit of the man who has purchased his car within the last few months, and who has his tire experience before him.

A man only needs to read our prices and compare them with what he has been accustomed to pay for first-class tires to realize absolutely the truth of the assertion: that through this special offer the buyer is getting the biggest bargain that he has been offered this year in tires.

By ordering Royal Oak Tires next week, therefore, you not only get a bonus of several dollars (far in excess of what you could get by leaving the money in the bank), but you make sure of getting the best tires obtainable and just when you want them.

Delay Means Increased Prices

Make no mistake about it; rubber supplies are growing scarcer, prices are going up—they have already been increased substantially on the other side, and if you wait till Spring you not only stand a chance of being disappointed in delivery; but what is even more important, perhaps, you most assuredly will have to pay much bigger prices than these quoted for this special sale.

The sale will last from the 8th to the 15th of December, both days inclusive, after that—on the morning of the 17th—prices will go back to normal. Such are our instructions from the manufacturers, the Oak Tire and Rubber Company, Limited, Toronto, and we will not be permitted to change them.

Those who can recognize a real bargain when they see one will not lose any time in profiting by this opportunity to save money.

Peterborough, Dec. 11th, 1917.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Dear Sir,—About Mr. Burnham, I think it is too bad for such wicked things to be said about Mr. Burnham, as I know for the truth that he was one of the first to help the soldiers' wives at the beginning of the war, when he loaned a sum of money to all the soldiers' wives until their separation money came through. I know of a great many soldiers' wives that had as much as fifty dollars each and they paid him when they liked, and I know that he has done his share to get the soldiers' wives separation checks enlarged to twenty-five dollars, and all I hope is that the Union government gets through so they can send the men over to help our poor husbands and sons through. I have got a husband and three sons, one killed, one wounded, a husband and son still in France, so I guess I should have four votes to help them to send the slackers over to help the poor lads that have not seen a bed for two or three years. I see in the paper where Mr. Hall warned his supporters from canvassing the soldiers' homes because they were not heated. No, I guess he found the soldiers' wives were more heated than the house, as they told them where to get off at. You can bet they did. I wish one would come to my door. They would find me a little bit warmer than my house. We think more of our husbands and sons than we do of a 5c loaf. We should worry if we have a cup of tea and toast as long as they, our men, help and look after them and get them back to their dear ones and their beds. I guess Mr. Hall has not got any sons in the fight or he would go to bed and pray for conscription instead of a cheap loaf.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor. From a—Soldier's Wife and Mother.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—I wish to draw the attention of Mayor Duffus and the members of the Council to a communication appearing in the press Monday night, in which F. W. Miller signs himself "Relief Officer," and exposes to the public the fact that he, as Relief Officer of the City of Peterborough, gave relief to a Mrs. Webb, a widow and the mother of two sons overseas fighting for their country.

What right has Mr. Finch Miller to publish to everybody the fact that Mrs. Webb, a widow with two sons at the front, was so poor that she required relief from the city. Is it not bad enough that this unfortunate woman had little means without the shameless attack that has been made upon her and the humiliation that this man has tried to impose upon her, by reason of the misfortune that she is without means and does not hold a soft, fat municipal job like Mr. Miller? It seems to me a proper case for the Mayor and Aldermen to hold an investigation, and if this man is guilty of this offence, to dismiss him. He has no right to use the people's money to the injury and pain of another.

Yours truly,
CENTRE WARD.

To The Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—It has been very amusing to read the various letters which have been written of late regarding who should have the instruments which the members of the 93rd Band laid aside owing to their going overseas to France. Now, I consider any one wishing to use these instruments, such as the 57th Band, who, if medically fit, should be in the service. Why, you say, because they have received pay from the Government, which places them under an obligation re playing soldiers or aiding recruiting, and notice they have been very kind in playing the soldiers away at different periods. But is it not their duty to do so, because they are the Military Band. Now, sir, if it had been the Temple Band that had written saying what they had done, I would take notice for, I understand they played in the different parks last summer, receiving in return, I believe, above $300.00, which they gave to various patriotic funds, and their instruments are not yet worn out. Yet, in one letter, I read if the instruments of the 93rd Band are not soon put to use they will soon be in the scrap heap. I say this, if the 57th Band does not play any more next summer than they did this one, they will not need any instruments at all.

Sir, I would be ashamed to ask for the instruments of a better musician than I was, because of having enlisted. I say, give the instruments to the men who have done their bit. I suppose next summer if the 57th Band succeed in securing the instruments, we shall have to pay them what they ask to play the instruments we gave them.

Thanking you for your space, I remain,

Yours truly,
"One Who Don't Want Something for Nothing."

Always Had Headaches

Liver Was Torpid and Bilious Spells Brought Sick Headaches — Lost Much Time, But is Now Completely Cured.

Newtown, N.B., Nov. 23.— Here is convincing evidence that however much you may suffer from liver trouble and consequent biliousness there is cure in the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney Liver Pills.

Overeating is the most common cause of sluggish liver action. You lose your appetite, have distressing bilious spells, usually accompanied by headache and vomiting, the bowels become irregular, constipation and looseness alternating, digestion is upset and you get irritable and downhearted.

No treatment so quickly awakens the action of the liver and bowels as Dr. Chase's Kidney Liver Pills. For this reason this medicine is wonderfull ypopular and has enormous sales.

Mr. Charles R. Tait, Newton, N.B. writes, "I was nearly always troubled with headaches, and would often have to stop work for a day or two. I lost many a night's sleep ever month with bilious sick headaches, and although I tried doctors' medicines and also many other patent medicines, it was without success. When I had these headaches I would vomit, and could keep nothing on my stomach.

"I purchased a box of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills from G. M. Fairweather, Druggist, of Sussex, N.B., and after taking one box I was so much relieved that I continued to take them until I am now completely cured. My advice to anyone suffering from sick headaches is to try Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and be completely cured."

Mr. A. S. Mace, J.P., endorses the above statement, and says: "This is to certify that I am personally acquainted with Charles R. Tait, and believe his statement in every way to be true and correct."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Substitutes will only disappoint. Insist on getting what you ask for.

WHAT'S THIS?

Peterborough, Ont., Dec. 12.

Editor, Examiner:

Dear Sir,—In last night's issue of the Review (Wednesday night's paper, I saw an account of Mr. R. R. Hall's meeting in in. This paper said that Mr. R. R. Hall had a small audience there and that it was not necessary to open the second balcony. True, the second balcony was not opened. I defy the Review to make such a statement in the paper. I was present at the meeting and the pit of the Grand Opera House was filled up pretty good.

Yours truly,
Lonelydale.

ALL SURPLUS WHEAT GONE, SAYS HOOVER

What We Send the Allies Now Must Be the Result of Our Own Saving.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—Herbert C. Hoover, the Food Administrator, in a statement deplored published protests in Chicago against the wheatless and meatless days inflicting unnecessary sacrifice. He said the reports were "either malicious or emanate from personal interests."

"The results from meatless days have for the first time given us sufficient reserves of meat to allow us to only partially comply with the quantities required by the Allies for shipments," he said. "It should be a matter of satisfaction to the entire American people that their devotion in this matter now enables us to at least partially fulfill our duties to the Allies in this respect.

"As to wheat, we have already exported the whole of the surplus of the 1917 harvest, over and above the normal demands of our own population. It is necessary, therefore, for the Food Administration to restrict the export of wheat, so as to retain in the United States sufficient supplies to carry our own people until the next harvest. Therefore, all exports of wheat from now forward are limited entirely to volume of saving made by the American people in their consumption of wheat and wheat products. We are continuing wheat shipments for December as far as our situation allows, but even with all the conservation made we are still unable to load over 400,000 tons of foodstuffs urgently required by the Allies during the month of December alone.

"Statements of the above character given out for personal interest are in little accord with the spirit being shown by millions of homes in the United States in an endeavour to aid the Food Administration in its task."

A NECESSITY IN THE HOUSE.

Most of the common ills of life arise from a torpid, sluggish condition of the Liver, Kidneys or Bowels, and because they act on each of these organs in a direct and specific way Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills overcome serious and painful diseases over which ordinary medicines have no control.

HEAD STUFFED FROM CATARRH OR A COLD

Says Cream Applied in Nostrils Opens Air Passages Right Up.

Instant relief — no waiting. Your clogged nostrils open right up; the air passages of your head clear and you can breathe freely. No more hawking, swollen mucous membrane and relief snuffing, blowing, headache, dryness. No struggling for breath at night; your cold or catarrh disappears.

Get a small bottle of Elys Cream Balm from your druggist now. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic, healing cream in your nostrils. It penetrates through every air passage of the head, soothes the inflamed or comes instantly.

It's just fine. Don't stay stuffed-up with a cold or nasty catarrh.

GRAIN MARKET

There is no let -up in the demand for cash oats, and the market continues on the rise. Prices were quoted 1 1-2c. higher on the C.W.'s at Fort William in store, following a similar advance on Winnipeg market. An equally strong demand for Ontario barley and rye has forced prices on these up 2c. to 30c. The shortage of mill feeds is again emphasized by a further advance of $1 per ton on bran, shorts, and middlings. The scarcity of cars is causing a good deal of difficulty to local dealers, the situation again having become serious and no relief in sight.

Manitoba wheat — No. 1 northern, $2.23 1-2; No. 2 northern, $2.20 1-2c; No. 3, $2.17 1-2; No. 4, $2.10 1-2, including 2 1-2-cent tax in store, Fort William.

Manitoba oats—No. 2 C.W., 82 7-8c.; No. 3, 79 7-8c.; extra No. 1 feed, 79 7-8c. in store Fort William; No. 1 feed, 75 3-8c.

Barley—$1.25 to $1.26.

Peas—No. 2, $3.70 to $3.80, according to freights outside.

Millfeed—Car lots, delivered, Montreal; shorts, $44; bran, $38; feed flour, per bag, $3.25; middlings, $48 to $49.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

DIVERGENT PATHS

By DONALD CHAMBERLIN

Having business in a small town in the west I found within its limits a very pretty park bounded by substantial improvements. In its center was a bronze statue of a man in civilian's dress, in one hand a roll of parchment. I fancied that the original was either a distinguished public man or a philanthropist—quite likely the latter. Meeting a man who appeared to occupy an average position in the town I accosted him and asked him whom the statue represented.

"There's a story connected with it," he replied, "and if you will sit beside me on one of these benches I will tell it to you."

We seated ourselves, and he told me the following story:

"This is Rogers' park, and that is a statue of Ben Rogers, who founded it. More than fifty years ago Ben and Sam Rogers were boys, somewhat ragged, playing marbles and ball and such other boys' games right here where this park is now located. It was then a vacant tract and considered worthless. Now the property bordering on it is worth millions.

"Sam Rogers, the younger brother, was picked out for a failure in life because he couldn't hold on to his money. He was what was called chicken hearted, and whenever he saw any one in trouble for want of money down went his hand into his pocket. Ben, on the contrary, was marked for a rich man. He looked out for himself and rolled up money in a small way from the time he was ten years old.

"Ben Rogers stayed right here in this town and accumulated money slowly till the man who owned the land on which we are sitting died, and it was sold out for a song. Ben bought it and conceived the idea of making a park of it. He secured options on all the bordering property, then gave his original purchase to the town on condition they would make a park of it.

"Sam Rogers when about twenty-five years old left the town, regretted by every impecunious person in it. The more successful citizens said, "A good riddance." At the end of a dozen years Sam came back and surprised every one by bringing a fortune with him. When asked how he got it he said it was by pure luck. This was all they could get out of him, but I learned the truth long after his death. He had loaned a man a hundred dollars to save a piece of property he owned, the property afterward became very valuable, and when the owner died, having no one else to leave it to, he left it to Sam Rogers.

"Sam on his return resumed his giving to needy persons, only he now gave $10 where formerly he had given 10 cents. His brother, Ben, had been saving his money and had got enough together to begin to think about making an investment on a larger scale. It was soon after Sam's return that the original owner of this property died. Ben not having enough money to carry out his enterprise called on his brother to go in with him. Sam said that he didn't want to make any more money than he had already, but he would loan Ben all he wanted.

"I was then studying law with Ben Rogers' attorney and know whereof I'm going to tell you. Sam paid no attention to the securities his brother gave him and one day woke up to learn that he had been swindled out of all he possessed. He never told any one how he lost his fortune and enjoined secrecy on his brother's attorneys. By this time he was too old to make another fortune and lived a precarious life till he finally died from want of proper sustenance and medical attendance. A number of persons whom he had befriended bought a lot in the cemetery and buried him there.

"Ben Rogers became the most influential man in the town, and when any important town matter was to be decided he was called upon for his opinion. He built a church on a worthless tract of land he owned and sold off the rest of the tract for another fortune. He established other institutions, contriving to make money out of all of them.

"When he died he left money for a suitable monument, desiring that he should be buried in the park that bore his name and which it had given him so much pleasure to have provided for the enjoyment of the people of his native town. His executors had been instructed by him before his death to provide that statue, for which and its pedestal $50,000 had been provided in the will."

When the narrator had finished his story I expressed a desire to visit the grave of Samuel Rogers. He told me that the cemetery was not half a mile away, and I determined to take a stroll in that direction. He also told me where to find the grave in among the less desirable lots. I thanked him for his story and passed on.

When I reached the cemetery I asked a well to do looking person I saw there if he could direct me to the grave of Samuel Rogers. He looked at me doubtfully, then said:

"I reckon you're looking for the monument of Benjamin Rogers, the philanthropist and founder of Rogers park. It's in the center of the town."

I passed on and presently at a little distance saw a grave covered with flowers. Approaching it I read on a cheap headstone the name "Samuel Rogers, the friend of the poor."

To the Electors of East Peterborough

Ladies and Gentlemen,—

I have the honour to accept the unanimous nomination of the Liberal Party to contest the election as a candidate to represent the people of East Peterborough in the House of Commons.

Now is the time in the history of this country when we should be guided by true Liberal principles and stand by the masses as against the classes; stand by the people who earn their bread by the sweat of their brow and against the classes who exact unjust profits and extortionate tolls out of even the very necessities of life.

The profits made by War Profiteers should be investigated. The profiteer should be made to disgorge his excessive profits to be used to increase the pay of our soldiers, their mothers, wives, sisters and dependents. None of them should ever be subjected to the indignity of cold charity by this grateful Nation on whose behalf they have suffered or died.

I have no confidence whatever in Sir Robert Borden who supplied our troops for many months with the Ross rifle and defective ammunition, which he must have known would jam and become a useless weapon after our Canadian boys had nobly entered the battle. The Ross rifle was used by our troops in six battles. In each battle the rifle jammed, and many a Canadian soldier was needlessly killed of wounded, and some of them languish to-day in German prisons justly cursing the Borden Gobernment without a chance of voting against it.

We must destroy the parasite, the profiteer, the grafter and the camp follower, who are our worst enemies, and fight our common foe with all the resources at our command.

I appeal to the women of this Riding, who are casting their vote for the first time, to act on the pure impulse of their hearts alone, and vote according to the dictates of their own conscience. My heart goes out in sympathy for them in these anxious times.

Let us unite our people in this Great War as the armies of Great Britain and France are united, marching and fighting side by side—the parents and guardians of Freedom and Justice.

With firmness in the right as God gives us to see the right, I appeal to you fellow electors to press on to a finish the great war in which we are engaged; to bind up the nation's wounds; to care for him who shall have borne the battle and his widow and orphan; to do all which we may achieve, and to cherish a just and lasting peace with all nations.

For these reasons I appeal to you my fellow electors for your vote and influence in the pending election on Monday, December 17th next.

Your Obedient Servant,

W. H. Johnston.

Had Bronchitis FOR THREE YEARS COULD GET NO RELIEF

Bronchitis is generally the result of a cold caused by exposure to wet and inclement weather. It begins with a tightness across the chest, difficulty in breathing, and a wheezing sound comes from the lungs. There is also a raising of phlegm from the lungs, especially in the morning. This is at first white, but later becomes of a greenish or yellowish color, and is occasionally streaked with blood.

On the first sign of bronchitis you should check it immediately by using Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and thereby prevent it becoming chronic and perhaps turning into some more serious lung trouble.

Mr. Theodore P. Beers, Upper Main River, N.B., writes: "I was troubled with bronchitis for three years, and could get no relief. I was always worse when I got wet. I tried lots of different medicines, but none did me any good until a friend told me to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. I got three bottles and before I had them half used I was better.

"My mother is now using it for asthma. It is a great medicine and we never want to be without it.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25c and 50c; manufactured only by the T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

The Gift That is Everlasting

Combining Permanence, Pleasure, Economy, Elegance

Such a gift is Thos. A. Edison's favorite invention—the New Edison Diamond Disc Phonograph. With ordinary care it will outlast you. During the years to come it will afford pleasure to all the family for all occasions. Its cost, spread over a period of months, means but little outlay and saves its cost many times by affording recreation, rest, comfort, entertainment at home.

Yet, what a magnificent possession! Artistic, ornamental, useful and substantial. It is the gift of gifts. No other Christmas treasure will hold so great and permanent a place in the hearts of your family as

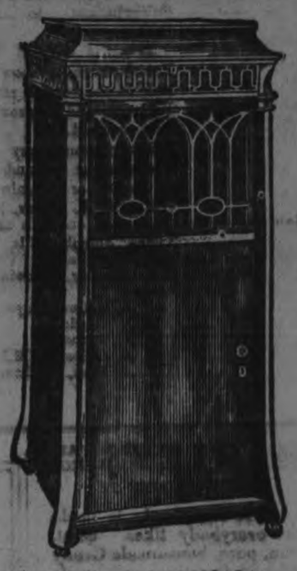
The NEW EDISON
"The Phonograph with a Soul."

Heretofore it has been the custom to judge a phonograph by the artists it had, the strength of the motor, the size of the cabinet—the friends who had them.

But one day, about four years ago, Thos. Edison changed all that when he came out of his laboratories with the announcement that he had succeeded in re-creating music so perfectly that the real could not be told from the re-creation.

To-day people judge a phonograph by its musical quality—thanks to Edison.

We might tell you of the superb mechanism in the New Edison; the genuine diamond point that never needs changing; the cabinets designed by artists of renown; the records that never wear out—but these are side-lights beside the one great, supreme fact that it gives you real music—that it has lifted the "talking-machine" from the realm of a toy to a wonderful musical instrument.



Let others boast of their mechanical features, and proudly claim that their "talking-machine" can play Edison records. The fact remains that there is only one Edison Disc Phonograph capable of really re-creating music—and over five hundred newspaper critics have admitted this.

You can, if desired, purchase a New Edison with a small cash payment. Can you think of any outlay of a few dollars that will bring such universal, lasting joy to the whole family? Call and hear it to-day.

To the Electors of East Peterboro

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—

I believe no greater disaster could, at the present time, befall our country than the defeat of the Borden Union Administration at the polls on December 17th.

The Policy of this Administration is the speedy and continuous putting forth of all our National strength for the cause of civilization and freedom.

To carry out this Policy, a number of Canada's ablest Public men of vision—sinking for the present—all political differences now stand together—strong to battle for the right—united to WIN the WAR.

For over three years thousands of Loyal Canadians of many creeds and of different Nationalities, have stood shoulder to shoulder on the Battlefields of Europe, gallantly fighting a common foe, and sometimes standing; sometimes falling, have won for the name of Canada undying fame. Shall we, with all possible speed, send help to these, our heroic defenders now holding the battle-line or shall we, break faith with them as well as "with those who die"—delay—vote—while the enemy advances?

As a Union Candidate in this Riding, I am putting forth every effort to win East Peterborough to the support of the Borden Union Administration and if elected shall to the utmost of my ability support the same.

To this end I now earnestly solicit the co-operation and influence of every loyal, patriotic man and woman in East Peterborough.

I have the honor to be, faithfully yours,

BIG EATERS GET KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take Salts at First Sign of Bladder Irritation or Backache

The American men and women must guard constantly against Kidney trouble, because we eat too much and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys strive to filter out, they weaken from overwork, become sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or you have rheumatism when the weather is bad get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys; to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water beverage and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.

LIVER TROUBLE and HEARTBURN CURED BY MILLBURN'S LAXA-LIVER PILLS

When the liver is torpid and inflamed it cannot furnish bile to the bowels, causing them to become bound and costive. The symptoms are a feeling of fullness or weight in the right side, and shooting pains in the same region, pains between the shoulders yellowness of the skin and eyes, floating specks before the eyes, coated tongue, bad taste in the morning heartburn, water brash, etc.

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills gently unlock the secretions, clear away all effete and waste matter from the system, and give tone and vitality to the whole intestinal track, and are by far the safest and quickest remedy for all diseases or disorders of the liver.

Mrs. A. Cummings, Manchester Ont., writes: "I have used Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills some time, and can faithfully recommend them to anyone suffering from heartburn and liver trouble. I tried a great many other remedies but they only relieved me for a time. I believe Laxa-Liver Pills to be a valuable remedy for all sufferers from liver troubles."

U. S. CRUISER HEARD EXPLOSION AND RUSHED TO AID OF HALIFAX

Thought Germans Were Attacking the Stricken City

HALIFAX, Dec. 13.—How the crew of a U. S. warship rushed to the aid of stricken Halifax on the morning of Dec. 6th, believing the city had been attacked by Germans, is one of the glorious incidents of the catastrophe. Forty miles out at sea the American blue jackets heard the explosion. At once they concluded that the city was under bombardment. "Clear for action," came the brisk command. At topmost speed the great cruiser came rushing to the port. When they realized the actual situation, they never hesitated, but docked and landed, and gave their help. British bluejackets landed, too, and were joined by R.N. C.V.R. men. All that night the city was under naval patrol. How much the city owes to these gallant fellows can never be told.

Mrs. Alfred Hawkins has received the sad news that her husband, Pte. Alfred Hawkins, has died of wounds. The sympathy of the entire community will go out to her in her bereavement. Pte. Hawkins was a splendid soldier and was respected by all his friends.

At a recent meeting of the Ladies' Aid of the Methodist Church, it was decided to send the two autograph quilts to Capt. C. R. Spencer, to be presented to Kitchener Hospital in England. There are hundreds of names on these quilts, which will be of interest to any of our Millbrook and Cavan heroes who may be unfortunate enough to have cause to enter this hospital, as they would recognise most of the names.

The next meeting of the Ladies' Aid will be held at Mrs. H. Dunford's, the second week in January, 1918.

The Allied Armies March on Ingersoll Time

HUNDREDS of thousands of Ingersoll Radiolite wrist watches have been supplied to the Allied Armies in France and England. Many thousands, indeed, have been distributed in Canada to the gallant overseas contingent of the Dominion.

This is the Ingersoll most widely used in the Armies. It is sturdy and stands hard knocks that would put ordinary watches out of business. Because of these qualities in Ingersolls, a group of Canadians set up in France an "Ingersoll Chateau" with a sign on the outside: "Old gold watches taken in part payment for Ingersolls." You can get this and other models at the dealer nearest you.

British Stop Formidable Attacks Around Bullecourt

Crown Prince Rupprecht Attempts to Break British Lines By Great Concentration of Men and Guns ---Bavarian Shock Troops Attack in Dense Masses to Accompaniment of Intensified Artillery Fire---Fierce Fighting Is Continuing.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(By William Philip Simms.)

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, December 13. — British forces early to-day had apparently stopped Crown Prince Rupprecht's long-prepared attempt to break the British hold around Bullecourt. Fighting was still continuing fiercely, but as this is cabled it appears that the Germans only succeeded in advancing a few yards. The attack was perhaps the most formidable the British have yet had to sustain in this section. It was made with the greatest concentration of men and guns the Germans have tried on this sector. The attack was patently designed by Crown Prince Rupprecht to break Byng's lines. The German objectives were far beyond the first British positions. Bavarian shock troops attacked early Wednesday morning in dense masses to the accompaniment of an intensified artillery fire which showed a tremendous concentration of guns. The German drive seems arrested early to-day with the enemy holding only a short section of advanced British positions.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON (Official), December 13.—Three attacks were made by the Germans in yesterday's battle, the War Office reports. The first two were repulsed. At the third attempt the enemy penetrated the obliterated British trenches at the apex of the angle in the British lines nar Bullecourt. Local fighting continued until late in the evening without changing situation.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, December 13.—Active artillery fighting is in progress along the whole front, the War Office announces.

A MATTER FOR EARNEST PRAYER

The Ministerial Association met in Session on Wednesday afternoon in the Y.M.C.A. parlours. Among other matters which came before them was the duty of earnest prayer upon the part of all Christian people at this critical time in the nation's history. It was felt by all that the present was a momentous hour in the history of Canada and the British Empire, and that never was the need for calm and clear thinking, and hence, for Divine guidance, greater than it is to-day. Different proposals were considered. The final course adopted was that each minister should follow whatever method he deems wisest in presenting the situation to his people, and that he urge upon all the members of his church to make the use of their franchise in this crucial hour, a matter of earnest prayer.

Bazaar Is Still Drawing Big Crowds

Over one hundred and twenty-five people attended the luncheon yesterday at St. Alphonsus Lyceum, and all were enthusiastic in their appreciation of the splendid menu and service.

To-day a still larger number attended, and through the efficient management no one was neglected.

Names Omitted.

In the dining-room, through an oversight, the names of Mrs. Kennedy and Miss Nora Devlin were omitted, both of whom have done a great deal to forward the success of the affair.

Sodality Booth.

The Sodality Booth, of which Miss Coughlin, Miss M. Kelly, Miss Eva Guerin, Miss N. Brady, Miss E. Dercher, Miss K. Tobin, and Miss Nora Healy are in charge, is doubly a centre of interest on account of the grain jar, of which the holder of the lucky number will win a car.

Father McColl and a committee of fifteen men will announce the result, which is being eagerly looked forward to, at the beginning of the week.

Fried filet of fish is excellent served with cabbage salad.

BOLSHEVKISM A DANGER IN THE UNITED STATES

Situation Developing in the Middle West Is Appalling One According to Wm. G. Shepherd. Who Compares Conditions With Those in Russia

GERMAN PROPAGANDA

William C. Shepherd, staff correspondent of the United Press, who since 1914 has visited all belligerent nations and served on many war fronts, returned from Russia on leave a month ago. Since that time he has been travelling and lecturing in the Middle West. The following article is from a trained observer who has been stirred by a serious condition and a danger not generally sensed.

(By William G. Shepherd, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

CHICAGO, Dec. 13.—Bolshevikism is trying to poison and weaken the military strength of the United States just as it did in Russia.

To an American conversant with the situation in Russia and familiar with the methods and tactics of the Bolsheviki and their German conspirators, the situation developing in the Middle West under the very noses of the most patriotic elements among our citizenry, is an appalling one.

As a nation we are as much a factor in the war as any one of the allies which have already paid their heavy toll in dead. As a people Americans at home have not gotten the war spirit. The issues are little discussed and less understood. The situation is ideal for a spread of Bolsheviki propaganda. Everywhere the question is "When will the war end"; seldom is it "How will the war end?" For months the stock question of German propagandists in Russia has been "When will the war end?" It is the question, the constant reiteration of which finally undermined the Russian morale and brought about a collapse.

America is not angry, Germany knows this, counts on it. It is her game to avoid arousing this nation. Bernstorff played it well. The propagandists he left behind are playing it well. Germany well knows that to sink an American transport would fill the front pages of American newspapers and carry sorrow and anger to every corner of the United States.

The American Navy's brilliant convoy system is not to be under-estimated, but the fact remains that no transport filled with troops has been sunk. The fact has the same lulling effect that German inaction had on the Russians. German propaganda cannot be preached to an angry American public. The German game is to keep the American people tranquil while the poison of German propaganda is poured into them by the Germans in the United States. This was the German manoeuvre in Russia.

It is to German advantage not to provide heavy American casualty lists just as long as German peace propaganda can be carried on in American cities. When the propaganda campaign fails, America will learn the meaning "of frightfulness." To one who has been in Europe in war time, who has seen the life and death struggle there, and the desperation of the citizens in their willingness to sacrifice everything to stamp out Germany's military menace, the apathy and the unthinking selfishness of unaroused, unangered Americans, is something of a shock in that it can mean nothing other than an indefinite dragging out of the conflict. American action spurred by anger and alarm can alone bring a satisfactory answer to the question of "When and how will the war end?"

RELIEF SHIP AT HALIFAX

HALIFAX, Dec. 13. — The relief ship Northland, the second vessel sent from Boston with supplies and clothing for the destitute here, arrived to-day.

SAD CASES AT HALIFAX

Broken-hearted Men Searching For Missing Dear Ones, Haunt the Hospitals, Morgues and the Newspaper Offices

NO ELECTION TALK

Special to The Examiner.

TORONTO, Dec. 13.— The Toronto Star to-day publishes the following from a staff reporter:

HALIFAX, N.S., Dec. 13.—A tall, grey-haired man, his eyes streaming with tears, entered the Chronicle office, saying: "I must find her, I must find her. Have you heard anything of her?" He was asking for his daughter, all the rest of the family he knew to be killed. All day long he had been seen, heart broken, going to newspaper offices, morgue, hospital and ruins. This morning he was still seeking his Isabella.

"I have found the three children," he exclaimed, but his voice changes to minor, "three children and their mother killed."

The mother is the old man's daughter. The three children were scattered throughout the city. He has only succeeded in finding and bringing them together.

DADDY AT WAR.

"My daddy is at the war." This is all a dear little brown-haired, blue-eyed child of two and a half years of age can tell of who he is. Not a soul belonging to him has yet been heard from. He is being cared for at a private home in the city. They are advertising his whereabouts and personal appearance. Perhaps somewhere a mother, still incapacitated, is mourning her baby as dead. The glad re-union may yet come. There have been many such cases.

The enormity of the situation is such that it is hard to get information to re-unite the scattered families; many still living think each other dead. Some who were thought to be living are known to be dead. A gold bracelet, a small black handbag containing a marriage certificate and 2 cents were what I saw Robert Simmonds handling pathetically. These were all that were left to him of his home, his wife and baby. They had been found in the ruins on Duffuse street by Captain John Gray and brought into the Chronicle office and advertised. I shall never forget the look on his face when they were handed to him. Not only his wife and baby gone, but his brother also. For a time he thought his father also was dead, but eventually found him in Truro amongst the wounded. Simmonds is still seeking his wife's mother.

A sad case is that of a man whose wife died only one week ago. He placed his three motherless children in the orphan's home. Now he cannot even find their bodies.

NO ELECTION TALK.

One week ago to-day men talked about election on the street corners of Halifax. Some were against "Union." Halifax had not to wait for an election to bring union. Sorrow has brought it, and sympathy. Four days I have been here and never heard an election mentioned, until this morning at the hotel breakfast table a man asked another in a dazed, abstracted way, as though he had just remembered it: "What day is election day?" he said.

"Help," said another at the table, "is all Canada should think of now. We cannot think of politics with 25,000 of our people homeless and suffering, and mourning all about us."

MANY PROMINENT SOCIAL DEMOCRATS HAVE BEEN ELECTED

Bolsheviki Only Succeed in Getting 44 Members in the Constituent Assembly But Intend to Control That Body in Spite of Election Results

KORNILOFF DEFEATED

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, Dec. 13.—The latest returns from the elections to the constituent assembly show that 195 members have been chosen as follows: Social Revolutionists 102, Bolsheviki 44, Constitutional Democrats 17, Ukraine Social Revolutionists 9, Minimalists 11, Jews 3, miscellaneous 9. The Socialist Democratic representatives include M. Kishkin, former minister of public welfare, who is under arrest in St. Peter and St. Paul Fortress, and Prof. Paul N. Milukoff, Social Revolutionists, M. Kerensky, Mme. Breshokavakaya and M. Tchernoff.

The Bolsheviki intend to compel the constituent assembly to be subservient to them, says the Petrograd correspondent of the Times. In the meantime the assembly stands adjourned indefinitely.

KORNILOFF DEFEATED.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—Counter revolutionary efforts against the Bolsheviki appear to have received a setback in the reported defeat of General Korniloff in a battle in South Central Russia. Unofficial advices contained a rumour that General Korniloff was wounded and that his capture by the Bolsheviki is anticipated. According to a report received in London the battle was fought between Bielgorod in the Province of Kursk and Sumu, in the Province of Kharkov, approximately 300 miles south of Moscow.

NO PEACE CONDITIONS.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 13.—No German peace conditions have been submitted to the Russian delegates, according to an official telegram received from Berlin. Up to this time nothing has been discussed except the armistice.

TO ARREST LEADERS.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, Dec. 13.—Bolsheviki government issued a decree ordering the arrest and trial by revolutionary tribunals of leaders of Constitutional Democratic party assisting the counter revolution.

Borden Responsible For Failure Of Quebec To Answer Call To Arms

Not One Nationalist Candidate in the Province Endorsed by Laurier, S. W. Jacobs, K.C. Declares at Big Liberal Mass Meeting in Grand Opera House--Mr. R. R. Hall's Eloquent Address on the Issues of the Day Roundly Cheered--Enthusiastic Reception Greeted the Local Candidate.

TWO SPLENDID MEETINGS MAKE IMPRESSION

Large and enthusiastic crowds turned out to hear Mr. R. R. Hall and Mr. S. W. Jacobs, K.C., of Montreal, who yesterday afternoon and evening addressed mass meetings in the Grand Opera House. The reception that greeted the local candidates was an enthusiastic one. Able and eloquent addresses were delivered by both speakers, who discussed the big issues of the campaign and the fight which the people are making to free themselves from the control of the big interests that dominate the present government. At the evening meeting Mr. Hall made a deep impression on the audience and his address, which penetrated deep into the issues that are confronting the electors, was punctuated with cheers, while Mr. Jacobs lived up to his advance notices as a brilliant and eloquent speaker.

Mr. J. J. Hartley, who presided at the evening meeting, made a brief address, in which he asserted that the Liberals were doing as much to win the war as the supporters of the Borden government. Mr. Hartley assured the audience that Canada would carry on to the end and a new regime would give the nation a new place in the war.

Conscription Will.

Mr. Hall followed with a vigorous appeal for equitable taxation of all the resources of Canada. The speaker reviewed some of the more recent activities of the Borden administration, and also Bourassa's rejection of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, it being alleged by Bourassa that Laurier was too British and was endeavouring to play Quebec into the hands of the English speaking people. Mr. Hall went on to show how Sir Robert Borden was forced to ally himself with the Quebec Nationalists. The conscription bill, which was designated by the Borden government as a measure to round up the slackers in Quebec, has been converted into an instrument whereby ninety-four per cent. of the eligible men in the province of Quebec are to be exempted. It has been shown, said Mr. Hall, that there will not be twenty-five hundred men taken for military service from the province of Quebec. If Quebec was to give her quota of men, seventy-two thousand men would have to be taken from that particular province before one man is taken from the rest of the Dominion. If compulsory service is to be enforced it should be enforced fairly in all parts of the country.

A Critical Time.

We are passing through a very critical time in history, said the speaker. We should approach this subject with all due solemnity and sincerity. For the past forty years Germany has been preparing to impose her will on the remainder of the world. To win this war we must not be guided alone by sentiment but by a sincere desire to put forth every effort to bring the conflict to a successful conclusion. We must work in harmony with each other and supply each other's mutual wants. If Canada is to continue in this war then it is best for Canada as an ally of Great Britain to consult the British government and ascertain her wants and endeavour to supply them. The policy of the Borden government begins and ends with the idea of sending one hundred thousand men overseas.

The United States has thousands of ready trained men that are waiting for ships to carry them overseas. Has the Borden government done anything to stimulate shipbuilding in this country? What is the greatest need of the Allies to-day?" asked Mr. Hall.

"More feed," volunteered a voice in the audience.

The food production of the countries at war, is decreasing each year and the real battle of this war may yet have to be fought out on the plains of the north-west with tractor machinery and a strong organization of men working under the supervision of the government of the country.

Mr. S. W. Jacobs, K.C.

Although Mr. Jacobs depreciated the announcement of his talent as a public speaker, when he drew near the close of his address the audience shouted "go on," and one voice cried out, "We'll stay all night." He complimented Mr. Hall on his eloquent speech, which, he said, revealed a careful study of the country's greatest needs in this crisis. Even Sir Robert Borden could learn from a Peterborough attorney the big and broad questions that demand the government's careful attention at this time. "If, as Mr. Hall says, Sir Robert cruelly laughed at the statement that food supplies are an essential necessity to the Allies, all I can say is that he who laughs best laughs last, and Sir Robert may not be so jubilant after this election."

"As I have been invited to speak here, and am expected to contribute to the lighter side, to deal with jokes, I shall begin with Hanna," Mr. Jacobs remarked that Hanna was one of the figures mentioned in the book of Samuel. She had gone to the temple to pray that she might have a child. The Lord heard her mumbled prayers and she became the mother of Samuel the prophet. Our Hanna is likewise the mother of a profit, of the Standard Oil Company's profit, remarked Mr. Jacobs, to the amusement of the crowd, who immediately recognized the reference to the Canadian Food Controller. Imagine, he continued, the man who was supposed to safeguard the interests of the great body of the Canadian people in the supply and the prices of their very necessities of life, imagine that the man who is given this responsible position is none other than the general counsel of the Standard Oil Company in Canada. We really have a

AN EASY WAY TO WIN THE WAR.

The action of the Union Government and its heelers in holding farmers' conscription in suspense till after the election is in foolish contrast with the cry that there is immediate need of reinforcements for Canadian troops to prevent Canada from dropping out of the war.

Especially, however, is the consistency of the Government minimised when we are assured that the fate of the Empire depends upon the return of the Borden Government. Never mind conscription or food production—only return "Sir Robert L. Borden," and the trick is done.

The Grand Master of the Grand Orange Lodge has issued an appeal to his brethren—to stand by the Borden Government. He says:

Remember this, brethren, that to support Sir Robert L. Borden at this crisis will mean the probable early victory of the Allies and the end of the war.

This is a mighty easy way out of the terrible military mess in which the world is wallowing; but it is an awful reflection that the price we have to pay is a continuance of the weak-kneed national leadership that resulted in so much wasteful and ineffective war administration in the past three and a half years.

The Grand Master's plan for ending the war is on a parity with "Captain Boasbdil's" plan of defeating a hostile army.

WHERE THE BLAME LIES.

The pseudo-patriot "Unionists" do their best to inject the disuniting element into the contest. After the Borden Government has been directly answerable for corrupting the patriotic sentiment of Quebec, we have these dis-Unionists having the assurance, the shamelessness, of placing the blame upon Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

The Ottawa Journal quotes a French-Canadian "Union" candidate, Dr. Chabot, as saying that "If Laurier and others had made an attempt to enlighten and encourage them instead of allowing Bourassa to influence them (the French-Canadians) the result would have been vastly different and the Military Service Act might not have been necessary."

And, pray, who "allowed" Bourassa to corrupt and debauch the French-Canadians with his anti-British treason? It was not Sir Wilfrid. Bourassaism and Nationalism were designed and directed to "kill Laurier."

It was Borden and the Borden Government and party that "allowed" Bourassa to poison the French-Canadian mind.

In the election of 1911 the Borden party had Bourassa as "our leader" on a Conservative election platform in loyalist Ontario. It was Borden and his party that helped circulate in that election hundreds of thousands of Bourassa's treason sheet, Le Devoir. It was due to this political alliance that Bourassa and the Nationalists gave twenty-eight Parliamentary supporters to Borden, elected on the anti-British cry of Bourassa and Nationalism.

It was Borden that took and kept in his Cabinet three anti-British Nationalists to represent Quebec and inspire loyal sentiments in the French-Canadians.

It was Borden and the Borden Government that has allowed Bourassa to preach through his newspaper, sedition, disloyalty, and contempt for British institutions, and hostility to Canada taking any part in the war.

Bourassa was "allowed" to send out every day, since the war began, and before, 25,000 or 30,000 copies of his paper Le Devoir, super-charged with the rankest treason.

He was not molested; but small fry like the Prescott Messenger and the "Soo" Express, that made a single slip of expression of criticism of Government matters, were prosecuted and condemned to suspension.

It was Borden and the Borden Government that allowed Bourassa and the Nationalists to have their full play in the work of poisoning French-Canadian war sentiment to an extent that made the Military Service Act a pretended necessity.

Yet we are invited to forget all that and unite in condemning Laurier, the man who has had Bourassa's knife turning between his ribs the past fifteen years.

The Bourassa-Nationalist chickens are coming home to roost, and the Borden Government, otherwise the "Union" Government, are trying to disown their brood, even with hypocritical cowardice trying to shift the blame to innocent shoulders.

If Bourassa is the deadly enemy of the Union Government and its win-the-war objects, why doesn't it suppress his newspaper, belching treason every day, and put him in jail?

THE ARTFUL DODGERS.

The "Union" manipulators of this campaign, alarmed at the "hostility of the farmers to conscription," hastened to adopt measures to prevent the farmers' vote from slipping.

It was asserted by the Minister of Militia that farmers' sons would be exempted right and left, and he even went so far as to say that he would bring back farmers' sons from the fighting ranks.

A big show was made of appointing men, such as wardens of counties and others, whose duty it would be to take the farmers' sons under their wing and procure exemption.

All this is buncombe. No power, outside of Parliament—and there is now no Parliament—no Minister, no county warden, no individual can legally interfere with the operation and application of conscription; and all the statements to the contrary are false assurances to deceive voters.

In North Perth the Liberal candidate, learning that Conservatives were gathering at their headquarters conscripted farmers, putting them through some bogus form of exemption, communicated with the Department of Justice, Ottawa, and was informed by the Deputy Minister, Mr. E. L. Newcombe, that

"no instructions, other than those issued to every tribunal in Canada have been issued by the Department of Justice or the Military Service Council to any person or persons or on any subject connected with the exemption of farmers' sons."

So that neither agents nor representatives of the "Union" Government, nor even the Minister of Militia, have any power or authority to declare, as some political underlings are doing, that some hocus-pocus has been devised to override the Conscription Act and to exempt farmers wholesale.

The political "lightning rod agents" are fooling the farmers. The latter will have to stand the decision of the local tribunals, and abide by their decisions, until the result of appeals is decided.

The farmers' sons will do well to trust to the appeal tribunals rather than to the election agents who are assuring them without authority that farmers' sons are exempted. They tell them that so that they will not have an excuse to vote against the conscriptive "Union" Government.

These ghost stories are intended to serve till after the election. Then the farmers will find that they must take their chance with others and submit to the decision of the appeal tribunals, and have exemption allowed or refused, according to the provisions of the Military Service Act, whose provisions no authority outside of Parliament has power to modify or change.

If farmers' votes are to be influenced by promises of wholesale exemption, they should remember that nobody has authority or power to make such promises, and that such promises are the shallowest and crookedest electioneering claptrap.

The "Union" Government claims to be non-partizan; but there never was a partizan Government more adept in adopting the shady devices and dodges of the "practical politician."

WHAT IS THE POWER BEHIND THE LIBERAL-UNIONIST PRESS?

Driven to desperation by the rising tide of public indignation which no longer can be checked or deflected from its fateful course, the Unionist Press no longer attempts to defend the Big Interests or Bordenism, but is resorting instead to the aid of experts in camouflage.

The latest cry of the Unionists in distress is that "A vote for Laurier is a vote for Bourassa."

Liars it is said require to equipped with good memories. Had the Union Publicity Committees consulted the files of the Toronto Globe they would have discovered that this electioneering cry had been anticipated by the Globe over a year ago. Here is what the Globe wrote in its chief editorial of Tuesday October 24th, 1916:

BOURASSA AND HIS IMITATORS.

The ravings of Henry Bourassa at Sir Wilfrid Laurier are not the lowest or most vulgar crimes against decency which Canadian journalism has to suffer these days. Bourassa's judgment may be so warped by disappointed ambition or his mental perceptions may be so deranged by intellectual perversion that he may at times believe what he speaks or writes. Under such conditions Bourassa may have spoken the other day when he used this language:

"So long as the spoliation of countries, the fostering of race feuds, and disregard of human rights shall serve her policy of plunder and rapacity so long will Great Britain, as she did in the past, find in Sir Wilfrid Laurier a slave and a valet, willing and ready to use the wonderful gifts with which Providence has endowed him to drag the people of Canada deeper into the abyss opened by the consequences of Britain's policy. I do not hesitate to say that Sir Wilfrid Laurier is the most nefarious man that not only the Province of Quebec, but that of Canada has ever had. Not only did he use his prestige and his talents to betray his own nationality, but he also betrayed his mission—the bringing together of all races in mutual respect and justice and tolerance, and not by lowering the one in the eyes of the other."

There is not a man in Canada, at once honest, intelligent, and sane, no matter what his political affiliations, who holds the opinion of Sir Wilfrid Laurier which Bourassa expresses in these words. In speaking them Bourassa proclaims that he himself is not honest, or is not intelligent, or is not sane. If he is the victim of mental disease his case is not rare, even though it is pathetic.

But more despicable than Bourassa, more deserving of public rebuke, are the journalists who believe in Laurier's integrity, in his unfaltering patriotism, and in the unblemished quality of his statesmanship, but who, day in and day out, falsify every fact they present and corrupt every mind they influence with the reiterated declamation: "A vote for Laurier is a vote for Bourassa." No editorial writer in Ontario can be so utterly ignorant of recent events in Canada as to believe that statement.

Is it any wonder Goldwin Smith, in his last years, used to challenge his journalistic brethren with his persistent question: "What is the power behind the Press?"

The Electors of Canada are not unreasonable in asking the Toronto Globe, in the light of its more recent editorials, adopting the above electioneering cry which it condemned over a year ago: What is the power behind the Unionist Press? What sinister influence are at work to force the Liberal Unionist Press of Ontario to eat its own words. Why does the Globe conceal the truth?

A vote for R. R. Hall is a vote for a free and virile Canadian Press.

AN INDIRECT LIGHTING SYSTEM FOR THE HOME

A Gift That Will Be Much Appreciated by Every Member of the Family

Gifts to the house for the benefit of the whole family will probably enjoy a greater vogue this Christmas than ever before, notwithstanding the hoary-headed jokes about new furniture mother wanted for herself and presented to father. This will be the direct result of all the education of the last year along the lines of thrift, of which an important part is obtaining the best returns for the money expended.

Since this is the electrical age, attention will naturally turn to the gifts which will best serve the home. What will the whole family enjoy and what, more than anything else, in the electrical line will make the home brighter and more attractive? A proper system of lighting. There are enough dark shadows over the world in these days of wartime, hence the greater need for banishing them as far as possible from the home. Ever notice how the bogies disappear for the older people, as well as the little people, or seem less grim when the light is turned on in a dark room?

Probably no greater revolution has been wrought in the past few years through the use of electricity than by the new semi-indirect method of lighting homes. Through a handsome glass bowl the light is diffused, dispelling gloom away from the corners of the rooms, filling the place with an agreeable, restful daylight radiance. Installing the semi-direct system of lighting, many people believe that their sole reason for doing so is because of the beautiful effects obtainable. Possibly it is at the time, but they will soon rejoice in another—the reduction of eye-strain for the whole family. Many school children, it is stated, are wearing glasses today simply because of injury to their eyes through faulty artificial lighting in their homes. The eyes of the children have been strained by study at night in too bright a glare of light, or in the shadows of the room.

If semi-indirect electric lighting will make home a brighter, cheerier, and more attractive place, prevent eye-strain, and consequent nerve-strain, and save expenses with eye specialists, installation of this method would surely be a good investment for the head of the household and a much appreciated Christmas gift for the family.

Consult Grand & Thorpe, Electricians, for a semi-indirect or other modern system of electric lighting.

"SO LONG LETTY"

Musical comedies that promote laughter from the rise to the fall of the curtain, are more in demand than the sombre sort, and of the former there is not in the amusement field to-day a more pronounced hit than "So Long Letty," which is coming to the Grand Opera House next Tuesday, Dec. 18.

Nothing quite so gorgeous, so bright and so entertaining has been offered within the past few years. There is a very interesting and funny story to its plot, and the production is staged in a lavish manner and presented by clever people whom Mr. Morosco has specially engaged, and the performance given makes an entertainment that affords delightful and tuneful diversion, and that is all that is intended. The music, especially the orchestration, is full of charm and beautifully rendered by an augmented orchestra, while the song number for the most part are of a catchy and ingratiating quality.

"So Long Letty" holds the record for long successful runs in all the principal theatres and is rightly termed a cross-continent success, for it had its birth in Los Angeles, California, and is now on tour of all the principal cities throughout this country. In addition to the excellent cast of players Mr. Morosco is bringing to this city, there is a chorus of California beauties with a wonderful array of costume creations, the most elaborate ever shown in a piece of its kind, and they are worn by the most shapely and prettiest lot of women that Mr. Morsco has so far corralled for this aggregation.

The stage settings are of an elaborate character throughout, and the various ensembles and dances are out of the beaten path. In a word, the coming edition of "So Long Letty" is about the best that Mr. Morsco has so far given the theatre going public. Seats are now on sale for this important engagement.

Voice of The People

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Allow me a few lines in your valuable paper in regard to the separation allowance being raised $5.00 (five dollars).

We soldiers' wives and dependents can surely look for an earthquake if it is the case. I would not thank the Government any to raise it to twenty five dollars and the price of living at the present day.

Some people think soldiers' wives should not exist, but let me tell you they are the only people that should be looked up to, for I don't know of any others who have to put up with more misery and hardships. No matter where you go you are due to insults, and people seem to think they are the only ones who have a good time; but I fail to see any one taking a good time out of $45 per month. I am sure, had they furnished us with the extra $5.00 some time ago we would have bought a Victory Bond.—Ha-ha.

SOLDIER'S WIFE.

MR. RYE AND MONAGHAN BRIDGES

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Mr. Rye, the man who likes to scrap, but can hardly find any one to scrap with. He says "Monaghan bridges are all, or nearly all, past service." His predecessors Messrs. Howden and McIntosh, gave strict attention to the affairs of Monaghan, and did not scrap with anybody, and have nothing but kind references to make of their old colleagues in the County Council. The bridges of North Monaghan, in general are a credit to his predecessors, and those who take care of them, particularly Mr. George Moncrief, who rebuilt Hogg's bridge, and Warde's and Whitfield, rebuilt at the instance of Mr. Howden.

No further reference to Mr. Rye is necessary, save to inform Mr. Rye that the only thing "scrapped" as a result of his eagerness to scrap, is himself, and would say that scrapping will not improve bridges, nor will it improve crude banks, that is necessary to launch boats for hire, and the half decent convenience of those who hire them.

Yours respectfully,
F. J. BULLIED,
Chairman Roads and Bridges.

Dear Sir,—Both girls who dealt with Cressman's on Tuesday in connection with the buying of ladies' and children's underwear for the relief of the Halifax sufferers were sorry to see by last night's paper you had omitted Mr. Cressman's name as one who had shown us kindness and was very generous, allowing us to have some goods at last year's prices and also 10 p.c. off all things we got.

Trusting you will be as kind as to spare us a corner of your valuable paper. We thank you.

(Signed) Committee of Girls Appointed by the Bonner-Worth.

MANY FARMERS PRESENTED THEIR CLAIMS FOR EXEMPTION BEFORE WARDEN'S TRIBUNAL THIS MORNING

Warden Brown had a busy session at the Court House this morning when a long file of farmers and their sons touched his agricultural sympathies with tales of woe he, as a farmer, fully appreciated. This afternoon there was a new group outside the County Council Chamber waiting to carry their complaints before the "S.O.S." tribunal, the powers of which some of the hard-headed farmers are decidedly skeptical, although they do not permit their doubts to go the length of overlooking even the flimsiest chance of keeping their sons on the land where, they say, they are more needed than at the front.

The farmers' tribunal, and by the way, why not a tribunal of machinists for machinists, and of labourers for labourers, and so on, will continue its operations until it has disposed of all the appeals from the farmers of Peterborough. Just how long that will take isn't evident to the Warden and Mr. Knox, his associate tribune, but it will extend beyond the anxious 17th, and the Warden expects that he will be hearing applications even through the Christmas season.

In the meantime the newly kalsomined corridors of the Court House are wide-eyed at the greatest array of coon, bear and other long and short-haired coats that have gathered within its precincts in many a day. Some of them come up a little stooped about the shoulders, but the Warden sends them away with chests thrust out by the confidence his dicta engender and the knowledge that the farms are not to be depleted and that the soldiers from the soil are to be even less than the judicial and business tribunals decided.

The Warden's recommendations are going through to the higher authorities and will carry the fullest weight, according to the opinion prevailing at the Court House.

CLUB ROOM FUNDS FOR THE WAR VETERANS

Subscriptions have already been received for the fund to furnish club rooms for the Great War Veterans' Association. The sum of $2,000 is required for this most worthy object, and the committee of which Mr. E. A. Peck is chairman, will commence a campaign next week. In the meantime subscriptions are being asked for through the newspapers, and it is hoped that there will be a ready response. The work that the Veterans did for us overseas, the suffering that many of their members went through in the cause of liberty, alone should be sufficient to ensure that the public should be anxious to assist them now that they are home. The War Veterans are doing a splendid work in this city. They have a relief fund to look after cases of distress among soldiers' dependents, and a relief committee appointed to fight the battle of the soldiers' families while the husband and father is overseas. The G. W. V. A. have been successful in securing many reforms from the Government, including three months' post-charge pay, a forty per cent. increase in pensions, and a change in the method of classification, and an increase in the separation allowance.

Adequate club rooms for business and social purposes are an absolute necessity. Many Canadian cities have supplied their Veterans with permanent quarters at a cost many times greater than the $2,000 which is being asked from the citizens of Peterborough. Ideal quarters have been decided upon in the Royal Bank Building, and with the help of the citizens the Veterans will soon be comfortably housed in rooms where they can continue their splendid work on behalf of the soldiers' dependents as well as in the interests of the returned men.

They fought for you. what are you going to do for them?

J. J. Turner	$25.00
G. A. Gillespie	$25.00
Mrs. Jos. Sanderson	$ 5.00

Mrs. R. J. Devey, 385 Park Street, treasurer.
Mrs. Joseph Mills, president, Women's Auxiliary.
S. Whatley, secretary, War Veterans.
J. J. Duffus, Mayor.
G. N. Gordon.

INQUIRY HAS BEGUN

Investigation into Halifax Disaster is Under Way To-day

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

HALIFAX, N.S., Dec. 13.—The official enquiry into the collision between the French steamer Monte Blanc and the Belgian Relief steamer Imo on December 6 was begun this a.m. before Mr. Justice Dr. Ysdale, Judge-in-Admiralty, who is assisted by Captain Howes, R.N., and Wreck Commissioner Demers, acting as nautical expert assessor.

When the enquiry opened only members of commission, a large array of counsel witnesses, and a few newspapermen were present, the general public apparently being too busy rebuilding to attend. At the outset lawyers asked for the exclusion of all witnesses except the ones giving evidence.

Captain Lamodec was the first witness called. Examined by Mr. Henry he said the Monte Blanc was loaded at Gravesend Bay, N.Y., with a cargo of T.N.T. gun cotton and dry picric acid, and a deck-load of benzol, for the French Government. The cargo was heremetically sealed and nobody allowed to smoke. Captain Lamodec said his ship had not carried munitions before. The ship came to Halifax to receive orders where to join her convoy. He received his orders from the British pilot. Mackay came on board at Halifax, the evening of December 5. He was absolutely sober. No liquor was on the Monte Blanc, as it had been forbidden by the French Government. The morning of the collision was quite clear.

The Allies Are Beating The Submarines

LONDON, Dec. 13.— The Allies are beating the submarine war game, Sir Eric Geddes, First Lord of the Admiralty declared in the House of Commons to-day. Shipbuilding is increasing above ship losses and the destruction of submarines is increasing, he declared.

"We must have ships, more ships, and still more ships, and now I want the men to build them," Sir Eric added. He said plans were made, and the steel had been obtained, an that unless he mistook the spirit of the country, there would be an adequate response to the appeal for men.

Military Voters' Act, 1917

To the Editor, Examiner.

Sir,—As I have had so many inquiries as to the soldier's vote, will you please allow me, through your columns, to state for the benefi of all inquirers what the law is on this subject. It is as follows:

The returned and discharged soldiers and nurses, as well as all persons, male or female, that have enlisted on enrolled or are called out for and placed on active service in the C.E.F., the Canadian Navy, Militia, Volunteer Reserves, Air Service and Motor Boat Patrol, whether of age or not, including Indians, are all entitled to vote.

Soldiers and Nurses in uniform vote, under the Military regulations, wherever they may be.

Discharged Soldiers can vote by place on producing their discharge papers and making oath that they are the persons named therein.

The above need not be on the Voters' List; they may vote whether on or not, wherever they happen to be on Polling Day.

Yours truly,

Jas. G. Guise-Bagley.

But German Sea Offensive is Failing Says British Authority

Canadian Press Despatch:

LONDON, Dec. 13.—When the Associated Press inquired of a high naval authority to-day, "if the anti-submarine war was going well, and what was the reason for the high rate of sinkings in the past three weeks," the answer was: "The enemy has had more submarines at work. He has actually been attempting a submarine offensive of the greatest possible magnitude in an effort to reinforce his offensive on land. He is trying to bring off a coup which will incline us to peace. He has failed signally on sea as on land, and he has had to pay a heavy price. Our counter measures are meeting with increased success and the enemy will experience a constantly increasing difficulty in maintaining his campaign."

BORDEN RESPONSIBLE FOR FAILURE OF QUEBEC TO ANSWER CALL TO ARMS

food controller. He is Sir Joseph Flavelle, and the Henderson commission found that this sterling patriot made about 80 per cent. profits in the bacon he supplied the British army. "When Borden found that Flavelle had reaped the immense sum out of the people and the army, he had him made a baronet. If Flavelle had made only 40 per cent. he might have been made a duke, and if it had been only 20 per cent. he would probably have been made a prince."

At a banquet given by the Canadian Club in Montreal, Mr. Hanna, rising from a sumptuous repast, told the housewives of that city to make bread out of breadcrumbs and also advised them to eat less. Imagine the solicitor for the Standard Oil Company telling those people in Montreal, who are going with only one meal a day, to eat less. Subsequently he assured them that they would feel better if they pulled in their belts.

England has a real food controller. If an English dealer charges one ha'penny more than the price set by the Government, he goes to jail. In the United States Mr. Hoover is doing valuable work. Why doesn't Mr Hanna get some ideas from Washington, seeing that there are days when we may truck and trade with the Yankees? There is one thing that may be said in favour of Hanna. He has asked for no salary, and he's getting just about as much as he is earning.

"Sir Joseph Flavelle is one of the men in the entourage of the Borden Government. He is what Lord Athelstan would call 'big business.' He made two millions out of one branch of his business last year, and the country retains him as chairman of the Imperial Munitions Board. He is the man who stored his own bacon on munition ships with that advantage over his competitors.

Ballantyne a Profiteer.

"When the Union Government was being formed it was found that the West was top-heavy. Borden, therefore, looked around for a representative of the big interests in the East, and his eye fell on Mr. Charles C. Ballantyne. Mr. Ballantyne is a profiteer. A profiteer is a man who makes as much money out of the Government under the present conditions as he can.

"Mr. Ballantyne is vice-president of the Canadian Explosives Company. The Montreal Star published on 17th September a statement of the affairs of this company, showing that it had a capital stock of $4,000,000. Personally I think most of it is water. How much do you think the Canadian Explosives paid in dividends? The report showed that they paid 200 per cent. on their capital stock, $8,000,000 profits on a capital of $4,000,000. They have taken over the explosives plant of Curtis & Harvey, and expect to make $6,000,000 out of it alone next year. And the Canadian Explosives Company has been dealing directly with the Imperial Munitions Board and the Government."

Mr. Jacobs said he regarded it as perfectly indecent that any man should want to form a part of that very Government with which he was doing so much business. Mr. Ballantyne is also president of the Sherwin-Williams Co., whose paint and varnish is used on all the shells made for the Government, and who painted the Quebec Bridge for the Government at a price of $150,000. He is intimately connected with many of the big interests that are doing business with the Government, and yet Mr. Ballantyne desires to get into the Government to do business with himself.

Mr. Jacobs touched a sore spot when he attacked the bestowal of titles upon Canadians. If elected in his division in Montreal, he would move a resolution to prevent any Canadian citizen, from accepting titles of that kind. Referring to Lord Atholstan, Sir Hugh Graham of the Montreal Star, Mr. Jacobs said "Thank God we haven't his peer in Canada, and when he goes to England they will all be together in one room of the House of Lords. This country is a democracy, and it is the intention of the people that it shall remain one. Have you ever heard of these men being on the side of the people? They belong to the plutocracy and we have at once a line of cleavage with the aristocracy and the big interests on one side and democracy and the common people on the other."

Borden and Quebec.

"I have lived all my life in Quebec," proceeded Mr. Jacobs, "and I would like to make a plea for the French-Canadians. They are not bad fellows, but they have been badly led. The Prime Minister of Canada is responsible for the lack of recruiting in Quebec, and I make that statement with full responsibility of what it contains. We have the Nationalist school of thought in Quebec, founded by Bourassa, grandson of the great Louis Joseph Papineau, leader of the rebellion, who procured for us the constitutional privileges we now enjoy."

Mr. Jacobs recounted Bourassa's opposition to sending soldiers to South Africa, and stated that Bourassa then severed himself from the Liberal party, and began to plough a lonely furrow himself. Finding that he represented only his own opinions he moved to Montreal from Ottawa where he had lived, established his newspaper Le Devoir, and founded the Nationalist school of thought. He allied himself with a number of young men and had made Sir Wilfrid Laurier's life miserable since 1901. He declared that Laurier was an Imperialist who was trying to drive the Canadian people into the abyss of Imperialism. An alliance was effected between Bourassa and the Conservative party after the Naval Bill was introduced into the House of Commons. He saw his chance and decided to destroy Laurier.

Recalling the significant bye-election at Drummond and Athabasca, in which a Nationalist was returned in a constituency that had been strongly Liberal, Mr. Jacobs declared that the money, the sinews with which that election had been won was supplied by Sir Herbert Ames, "the gentleman who is the honorary secretary of the Canadian Patriotic Fund."

"He bought thousands and tens of thousands of copies of 'Le Devoir,' paying for them with his own cheque and had them distributed throughout the length and breadth of that constituency, and, in 1911, throughout the entire province. By this means Sir Herbert Ames inculcated Nationalism into the minds of the people of Quebec. And in 1911, Sir Herbert Ames, Lord Atholstan, and Bourassa returned 27 Nationalists from that province.

Taught Idea of Resistance.

"What did Sir Herbert Ames pay that money for? To teach the people to resist every kind of tribute or assistance to the British Empire, directly or indirectly. Laurier had proposed his shipbuilding policy, and had that been carried out we would now have our east and west coasts patrolled by our own vessels, not by American ships in the Atlantic and Japanese in the Pacific. They sent young men into the remote districts taking a census of the male babies and the young men up to thirty years, stating that this census was for the conscription of their sons to man British warships.

> They sowed the wind in 1911, and to-day they are reaping the whirlwind, and if there are no recruits forthcoming from Quebec, it is due to Lord Atholstan and Sir Herbert Ames in their alliance with Henri Bourassa.

Replying to the Borden propaganda that Laurier has formed an alliance with Bourassa, Mr. Jacobs asserted that Sir Wilfrid hadn't spoken to Bourassa in ten years, and quoted a well-known incident to substantiate his statement. Bourassa caused Laurier to be hooted by Laval University students in the streets of Montreal.

Alliance With Borden To-day.

"The Nationalists are allied with the Conservative party as it exists to-day. In the George Etienne Cartier division in which I am running, my opponent, Dr. Bernier, has declared himself an anti-conscriptionist, and has promised that if elected he will see that the Conscription Bill is repealed and that all conscripts in khaki are immediately discharged from the service."

Mr. Jacobs stated that the Nationalist league had presented a declaration to that effect to every candidate "The letter was sent to me, but I threw it in my waste paper basket. My opponent, Dr. Bernier, signed it. Take up the Montreal Star, La Patrie, or the Gazette, Conservative papers supporting Borden print the list of candidates to be supported, and you will find Dr. Bernier's name in the list. He has received the money necessary to run his campaign. It came from the Conservative headquarters in St. Francois Xavier Street. I stated that Dr. Bernier has received his $200 deposit money from that source, and challenged them to deny it, but it was not denied. Is that not evidence of an alliance? Bernier tells the people on the hustings that he is against conscription, and his name is included in the Unionist lists in the Conservative papers. Dr. Bernier will contribute that $200 to the Canadian treasury after this election is fought out."

Discouraged Recruiting.

Mr. Jacobs mentioned the appointment of the Rev. Dr. Williams, pastor of St. James' Methodist Church in Montreal, as chief recruiting agent in the strictly French-Canadian province of Quebec as an evidence of improper method of winning recruits in that province. "What would you think if a French priest had been appointed to recruit in an Orange section of Ontario? The Government didn't want recruits from Quebec. They meant to isolate the province, to place it in a position in which they could hold it up to the scorn of the English-speaking people of Canada. They appointed young English-speaking officers who couldn't speak French, and sent them into districts entirely French. Are you surprised that they didn't succeed?"

Mr. Jacobs recalled the incident in which Sir Sam Hughes forbade the 65th Regiment's guard of honour in the Corpus Christi procession to carry rifles. The custom had prevailed from time immemorial. Three years ago Gen. Hughes ordered that because this was a religious procession the guard must not carry rifles. He stated that it was against the King's regulations and must be put a stop to. Then there was an impasse. Mr. Doherty threatened to resign, but Sir Sam's will prevailed. The guard stacked their rifles in the 65th Regiment Armouries and marched to Lariviere's hardware store and were handed rifles with which they marched.

"Were them Ross rifles?" a man in the audience asked.

"They must have been," Mr. Jacobs replied. They didn't do any damage that day. The French-Canadians never forgave Gen. Hughes for that, and Bourassa spread the news throughout the province until Sir Sam was persona non grata with the whole populace. I won't say whether he was right or wrong, but I give you a few reasons why the recruiting campaign under General Hughes was not a success.

Laurier Endorsed None.

"We are charged with an alliance with the Nationalists. I hurl that back in the teeth of those who make it. There are 65 Liberal candidates in Quebec, and not one man has any relation or alliance with the Nationalists. Armand Lavergne is running in Montmagny, and against him is a Laurier candidate who is doing all he can to defeat. There were 22 Nationalists in the House when it prorogued. Since practically all of them voted against conscription, not one has been selected by Laurier as his candidate in this election. They are shining in the obscurity from which they should never have come forth. I hope that this election will be the death blow to the Nationalist party, which has cursed the province these past six or seven years.

Reports from Country.

"Affairs in this country have reached the stage in which we no longer have any newspapers. We have to get our information by circular or word of mouth." Hence Mr. Jacobs reproached the Canadian press for its distortion of the news, and reading a telegram from the Liberal headquarters announced the following as the latest forecast of the election for the Liberal party—62 out of 65 seats in Quebec, 20 in the Maritime Provinces, according to Mr. E. M. Macdonald's information, 20 seats from Ontario, and 30 out of 57 in the West.

"If this preview is at all correct, and I believe it is, Sir Wilfrid Laurier will be returned by a handsome majority."

AFTERNOON MEETING.

A large and enthusiastic rally of men and women fellow-wishers for good government and clean administration, attended the afternoon mass meeting in the Opera House yesterday afternoon, when clearly outlined and substantiated proofs of the need of a government which will respect the laws laid down by Confederation and necessary to democracy, were given. Mr. J. J. Hartley occupied the chair

FOOD PRODUCTION.

Mr. R. R. Hall spoke and showed clearly how the Borden Government's policy of robbing the grain-producing provinces of the men necessary to work the land will result in various national calamities, the raising of the cost of food, the demoralization of the troops, who knew their loved ones were dying from hunger and the dire probability of the starvation of the armies. Borden has done nothing to stimulate grain production, or encourage shipbuilding when, in the face of Lord Rhondda's warning that Canada must produce food or victory will slip from our united grasp, plainly outlines the urgent need of the allies. Without ships supplies cannot be taken to the armies or the Atlantic be bridged for the transportation of troops.

The possibilities of the prairies of the North West are wonderful. It is estimated that organized effort could produce 500,000,000 bushels of wheat from what under the Borden administration will be years. The possibilities of this giant addition in solving the greatest problem of the war is plain. England has called for 300,000,000 bushels of grain and with the North West worked under organized effort the cost of living would be brought down, and Canada could take a vital part in winning the war.

The present government is making no use of the possibilities of Canada, and is furthering the possibility of a course for starving our armies into submission. If separate peace should be made with Russia her vast grain production would be a deadly weapon in the hands of the Hun.

LAURIER'S POLICY.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier's policy is plainly defined. He proposes conferring with Great Britain upon how Canada can best serve. This is the same policy for the allied countries each country having her allotted task each country having her allotted task in bringing about peace.

"DO NOTHING POLICY."

Mr. Burnham has not at any time declared his policy for the West Riding, and has adopted his usual "do nothing policy". The only thing he ever did was to buy a vacant lot to build a Post Office and Customs House—the lot is vacant still.

The Metal Products Company, which lived by government contracts, was allowed to slip from Peterborough, throwing scores out of work, and taking a monthly pay roll of $60,000 out of the city, when one word from Mr. Burnham to the effect that one more contract would be given by the government if the plant were removed, would have kept it here.

SOLDIERS' WIVES.

Mr. Hall spoke briefly of the unjust treatment given to the soldiers' wives. Nothing has been done to increase the meagre allowance proportionately with the increased cost of living. Mr. Hall's first act on his election will be to see that the soldiers' wives receive an advance in allowance, and to see that returned soldiers shall be provided for by special courses which will insure against their having to search employment. Mr. Hall concluded by hoping all men and women would weigh the question at length before voting.

MR. JACOBS OF QUEBEC.

Mr. S. W. Jacobs, K.C., expressed his pleasure, particularly in the fact of his coming from Quebec, whose people, he said, have been sadly maligned through the press. The issue of the elections to them is quite as vital as to any other province. He spoke of the unjust restricted franchise to the 'hand-picked' lady electors who have done no more 't 'n others who are not allowed to vote.

ALWAYS UNION.

The Borden Government, he admitted, was 'union,' and always was 'union' since it joined the Nationalists in 1910. The faults of Quebec lie at the head of the Borden Government and their friends, who joined the Nationalist party which preached no more contribution to Great Britain either in men or money. Bourassa's policy was financed by Borden, and receipts from Sir Herbert Ames, who paid Bourassa for circulating Le Devoir are to be shown. Lord Atherstone is largely responsible for the spirit of Nationalists. What the press says of Laurier's alliance with Bourassa is untrue. If there is any coalition it is between Sir Robert Borden and Baurassa.

A UNION CANDIDATE.

Mr. Jacobs quoted Mr. Bernier, a "Union" candidate in Montreal, who has declared himself to be an anti-conscriptionist:

CONSCRIPTION.

Is conscription necessary? "That," said Mr. Jacobs, "should be decided by the people of a democratic country where the people are king. If the policy is necessary submit it to us and if we don't want it say so and Canada may take the cowardly place she would declare herself ready to take.

The people must govern in every British possession. In Australia conscription was submitted to the vote of the people, soldiers and women, and was not carried—still voluntary enlistment went on. In South Africa there was no question of conscription yet the German possessions are cleaned up by voluntary system. Ireland has had no conscription. If conscription is necessary why is it not enforced to bring out the thousands in India. England knows more about the people's wishes than Sir Robert Borden.

THE REFERENDUM.

There are at present 24 million men in the field, millions in training, yet Mr. Rowell says without 100,000 more the war is lost! Conscripts go into battle in a bitterly antagonistic spirit. Mr. Rowell admits the referendum is necessary, but there is not time. The Hun is at the gate. Borden says the need is imminent, yet the whole animus has been frittered away since the Militia Act was passed, while the iniquitous purchase of the C. N. R. went through in short order.

The Union Government to-day is like two cats tied by their own tails together. Mr. Carvell, one of its constituents had already declared his attitude when he called them "the same crowd of grafters." Gen. Sir Sam Hughes, K.C.B., told Borden he was a liar.

BORDEN'S WAR ACTIVITIES.

Sir Robert Borden has done more to harm recruiting than any other man. He held up contingents to give contracts to his friends and when the exposures came out the "underling was fired and the Manager kept."

BORDEN IN QUEBEC.

Why has Sir Robert never spoken in Quebec? Not because he had not the chance. In Montreal "the heart of the Tories," it is suspected, Doherty and his brethren paid hoodlums to disturb meetings that their cause might gain sympathy.

Sir Robert Borden is responsible for the Nationalists. He has supported them upon the Liberal party through the versatile press, such as the Globe.

BELGIAN CHILDREN PLEAD FOR CHRISTMAS GIFT.

The orphan children of Belgium do not ask for toys this Christmas, they do not ask for luxuries, but what a joy it would be to them if, through your generosity, they could have one full meal on Christmas Day.

For they have subsisted—you could not call it live—on a bowl of soup and a slice of bread per day, except in such cases, where the generosity of their well-to-do allies make it possible to rescue starving children for a few short weeks, and take them to places in Holland, where they can be given proper food and attention.

You will enjoy your Christmas Day infinitely more, knowing that you have done something for the sake of the Belgian children.

MILITARY TRIBUNAL DEAL WITH A NUMBER OF CASES

The Appeal of Percy Drain Was Disallowed—Other Cases Heard

Percy Drain, of Clarina, together with an elder grown-up brother, work a two hundred and eighty acre farm. The elder brother was exempted. Two other brothers, aged fifteen and twelve years respectively, also reside on the farm. The father is dead.

Judge Huycke expressed the opinion that the Tribunal did eminently right when they exempted one brother and disallowed the claim of the other.

The appeal was disallowed.

Judgment Reserved.

Hugh and Thomas Kelly work two hundred acres of land about six miles from Norwood, in South Dummer. The former, who is married, appeared on behalf of his brother, whose exemption was disallowed by the Tribunal. Four brothers work two farms near Norwood, a fifth brother who works in Smith Township was given temporary exemption by the Bridgenorth Tribunal, and a sixth brother attends the Business College in Peterborough.

Thomas Kelly, the appellant, said he knew of no reason why he should not go, except that he was employed as a farm labourer.

The two brothers who reside in Asphodel were exempted.

Judgment was reserved.

Will Be Re-examined.

William S. Wilson asked the appeal tribunal to exempt him upon the grounds that he was physically incapacitated. Wilson was passed as an A2 man.

"You don't expect me to disregard the finding of the Medical Board?" Judge Huycke asked.

"I suffered from a nervous breakdown in 1914 and 1915," volunteered the appellant.

Wilson was sent up for further examination.

MOCK TRIAL REPEAT.

The "Mock Trial" was repeated in Knox Church Lecture Hall last night before a good and enthusiastic audience. The different characters acted with more confidence, with the result that the performance again went without a hitch. A few more local "hits" were given, and the audience were not slow to catch on.

The musical programme was also of a high order, the artistes being: Mr. George Kenyon, piano solo and accompaniments; Mr. Frank Clarke, banjo selections; Mr. George C. Roy songs from "Harry Lauder"; Messrs V. Morpet and Jno. Anderson and Rev. James Mackenzie, songs; and Mr. Charles Coleman, in usual good style, selections from Harry Lauder.

Miss Cora Peters also acted as accompanist.

SHOULD BE MORE CHIMES.

Since Belgium came into such world-wide prominence, our attention has been directed to the Carillons of Belgium, about which Canadians knew very little. The Church chimes are coming into their own here to a certain extent, and yet we have not nearly enough of them. The chimes have not as yet been given the fixed place in our lives that their importance warrants.

What contributes more to making a Sunday morning what a Sunday morning should be than to hear the church chimes pealing out all over the city? Said a well-known business man to the writer: "When I was a boy living in the town of M——, there were four churches each with a good bell. They rang for five minutes at 10 o'clock every Sunday morning, for five minutes again at 10.30, and then continuously from 10.45 to 11 o'clock the hour of the services. After listening to those bells year after year they became as much a part of Sunday as the wearing of my best suit and boots. Unconsciously, those bells became a part of my existence. As a middle-aged man I moved from that town to another where there were no bells. I was completely lost. There was something lacking about the Sunday morning. It seemed flat, like having your porridge cooked without any salt in it. I'm never at home without the church bells or the chimes."

That man's experience is another illustration of the fact that there is something in the human make-up desiring music, desiring it everywhere, and desiring it all the time.

MENACE NOT YET MASTERED

LONDON, Dec. 13.—The submarine menace, in my opinion, is held but not yet mastered, said Sir Eric Geddes, First Lord of the Admiralty, in the House of Commons to-day. Our shipbuilding is not yet replacing our losses. The First Lord said that if the country would economize so as to restrict the use of tonnage and set ships free for more urgent uses; if England would follow the tradition of their race and put forth all their power, relaxing no effort to defeat the submarine evil, then war could end only in victory.

FOUR BIG FIRES TO-DAY

TORONTO, Dec. 13.—Four big fires are reported in various parts of Eastern Canada to-day. The base recruiting office and several stores adjoining, with various military buildings, were destroyed at Ottawa, with a total damage of a quarter of a million dollars. In St. John, N.B., St. David's Presbyterian church was totally destroyed. At Valleyfield, P.Q., three thousand were thrown out of employment in the destruction of the Montreal cotton plant, with a damage of half a million. At St. Johns, Q., the Excelsior straw Co.'s plant was destroyed, with a loss of $125,000. In all cases the origin was mysterious.

WINNIPEG, Dec. 12.—To-night's casualty list reports Lieut.-Col. Malcolm Docherty, D.S.O., Commander of Lord Strathcona's Horse (R.C.), as killed in action. On December 4 Col. Docherty was reported wounded, but his wounds were of a slight nature and he remained at duty. It was only about three months ago that Col. Docherty was appointed to the command, succeeding Lieut.-Col. A. J. Heskwith. Col. Docherty was a Winnipeg man, and went to the front at a Lieutenant in May, 1915. He was forty years of age, and served in the South African war with the Second C.M.R.

HALIFAX CITY HALL IS OASIS IN THE DESERT

REAL CHURCH UNION.

Clergyman Arrange Schedule of Nursing and Visiting—Children Cared for.

HALIFAX, Dec. 14. — "Is this where you get clothes? Is this where you get glass? Is this where you get coal? Is this where you get food? Is this where you find out about lost people?" was asked me over and over again.

Practical organization is just beginning to emerge. The city is commandeering all motor cars whatever their condition. Food, clothing, and money continues to pour in from all parts of Canada and the United States. Everyhere we hear of the wonderful beneficience of the United States. Word has been received that 10,000 blankets and 1,000 cot beds, with staff of doctors and nurses, are on the way from a county in Maine.

CHURCH UNION AT LAST.

Common sorrow has made Church Union, hitherto unfeasible, here at last. All the clergymen of the city are giving up their entire time to relief work. They have arranged a union schedule of nursing and services for the patients at the various hospitals.

The homeless children for the present have all been transferred to the Infants' Home as claimants may yet be found. The telegraph offices have been almost buried beneath the enormous increase of telegrams, lines being so engaged by personal and necessary telegrams that newspapermen here from many points are growing impatient.

I have just been to St. Mary's Hall connected with St. Mary's Cathedral. Yesterday they gave dinner to over 300 in an improvised dining room. To-day they are fitting up the dance hall with row upon row of cot beds. In some rooms two and three families are quartered. Others have one family. Here they eat, sleep, live.

A SOLDIER'S FAMILY.

A room about 10 by 12 feet was occupied by a soldier father with bandaged eye, his wife sitting on a mattress with a two weeks' old baby on her knee, with her face badly scratched, and another schild beside her. They had slept on the mattress which was on the floor, occupying nearly the whole space and were now eating their breakfast there. "Just together," was all that was left them.

Another room had the following: In one corner, a wounded soldier half-lying on cot bed; over there the wife bending anxiously over a bundle of blankets on which was her baby, "taken sick in the night"; the other occupant was an old woman twisted with rheumatism eating her breakfast from the top of a piano.

The Instruction Cars Attracted Many Visitors

The Agricultural Instruction cars sent by the Farmers' Institute, was the centre of considerable interest at the Grand Trunk siding yesterday. The contents of the car were practical demonstrations of the possibilities of farming undertaken by organized methods. Miniature chicken runs and hen houses demonstrated the proper care of chickens, and advocated more fresh air for them in the fact that tuberculosis threatens to become a menace, if not stamped out immediately. The feed necessary for chickens and the results of proper feeding in the output of e s were shown, also the proper way to judge poultry.

A new department to most of the local farmers was the farm engineering, demonstrating the machinery necessary for proper drainage, etc.

In the seed and grain department sprouting grains afforded proof of the necessity of skilled choice of grain for seeding, showing the results obtained from the poorer and better grains.

The strides ahead in agriculture under the experimental work of Dr. Cavitz were demonstrated.

The blights, and how to check and detect them, of different grains, fruit and vegetables were also shown.

The car is under the management of Mr. Clarke, who, for twenty years, has given lectures to the Farmers' Institutes.

"THE FILM OF FEAR"

By ARNOLD FREDERICKS

It was not alone the surprise, the nameless terror of the thing, that sent Duvall headlong from the room. He fully realized that the noise of the encounter, the shrieks of his assailant, would quickly bring the other inmates of the house to the room. He had no wish to be discovered there—his entrance had been too irregular, too illegal, for that. With extraordinary rapidity he flung himself through the window and without waiting to observe the result of his intrusion, sped swiftly across the roofs of the two buildings, up the steps to the attic roof, and from there by means of the ladder, to the roof of the apartment building. The janitor sat where he had left him, smoking a pipe. Duvall looked back. Lights were visible in the room that he had just left. He saw a figure, one that closely resembled Marcia Ford, cross the lighted area of the window. There was a second figure with her, smaller, shorter, he thought. Who—what was it that had attacked him? He stood in a daze, unable to grasp the meaning of the experience through which he had just passed.

The janitor took his pipe from his mouth and rose.

"Find what you were looking for?" he asked with a grin.

Duvall shook his head.

"No," he said. "Not exactly. But I'm on the track of it."

"Want the ladder any more?"

"No, not to-night." He assisted the man to draw it up to the roof.

A few minutes later he had reached the sidewalk. He glanced at his watch. It was just eight o'clock. As he walked toward the entrance of the house at No. 162 the front door opened, and a woman came out.

Duvall quickened his pace, but the woman was also apparently in a great hurry. She ran swiftly across the sidewalk and sprang into a cab which stood beside the curb. Duvall was able to get but a fleeting glance at her, but that glance was enough to convince him that she was the mysterious prisoner who had so neatly given him the slip while in the cab the night before. He sprang forward with a cry, but before he had come within ten feet of the cab, the vehicle dashed off and proceeded at a rapid rate up the street.

A second cab came along at almost the same moment. Duvall hailed it but the driver shook his head, indicating that he had a fare. In a moment the second cab had passed, apparently in hot pursuit of the first. There were no other cabs in sight. With a growl of anger and annoyance Duvall turned back to the door of No. 162.

Should he ring the bell and ask for Miss Ford? he wondered. Of what use would it be to request an interview? Yet there seemed to be nothing else that he could do. Miss Ford had not left the house although the other woman, apparently her confederate, had done so. He stood in the shadow of the apartment building, trying to decide what move he should make next.

CHAPTER XIV.

Grace Duvall, on being left at the hotel by her husband, spent a long and very tiresome afternoon. She had expected Richard back long before with news, perhaps of a successful investigation of the woman, Marcia Ford, whose address was so near that of the Mortons. But when six o'clock came and went, with no news of her husband, Grace came to the conclusion that he had probably struck a long trail and being a normally healthy person with an excellent appetite, she went to the dining room and ordered dinner leaving word at the desk where she would be in case Richard returned.

Her lonely meal was over by seven and, not knowing what to do, Grace went out on the sidewalk, with the intention of looking for her friend of the evening before, the taxicab driver, Leary. It was possible that the man might have something more to report. As she reached the door she saw him descend from his cab.

He came forward at once, tipping his cap.

"Taxi, ma'am," he asked.

"No, I don't think so, Leary. Anything new?"

"Not a thing, ma'am. Haven't seen that party since. Can't I take you for a drive, ma'am?"

Grace was on the point of refusing, when a sudden idea came to her. She hastily opened her pocketbook, tore out the pieces of the visiting card that Duvall had left upon the table and fitted them together.

"Drive me to 162 W. 57th Street," she directed, and stepped into the cab.

Leary touched his cap and in a few moments they were speeding up the Avenue.

"Don't go right up to the address," Grace told him through the speaking tube. "Stop a little below, but in a place where I can see the door."

The man nodded, and a little later they turned into 57th Street and drew up alongside the curb.

"Do you think you would recognize the woman who gave you the card, last night?" Grace asked.

"Yes, ma'am. I think I should, ma'am."

"Very well. Watch the doorway of number 162. If she goes in let me know. If she comes out, follow her. I shall probably recognize her myself, if she is the woman I think. I saw her for a few moments at the Grand Theatre last night. But she may not be the same one. We'll know that later."

Leary nodded, and they began a long wait. After what seemed to Grace an interminable time, they saw a taxicab come rapidly down the street, execute a turn, and draw up before the door of number 162.

Grace, as soon as she realized the cab's destination, sprang in the direction of the house. The cab came to a standstill just before she reached it, and two women got out. One of them Grace had never seen before. The other she recognized at once. It was the woman who had fainted in the theatre the previous night.

Neither of the women paid any attention to her, but directing the cabman to wait, passed quickly into the house.

Grace went back to her cab and got in.

"The woman I am looking for has just driven up in that cab," she said. "She has gone into the house. The cab is to wait. When she comes out again, follow her."

Leary nodded, and the two of them settled down for what they supposed would be a long wait. To their surprise, scarcely ten minutes had passed before the door of No. 162 was suddenly opened, and the woman whom Grace had recognized dashed down the steps and sprang into the waiting cab. At almost the same moment Grace saw her husband start forward from the direction of the apartment building, as though in pursuit of her.

There was no time, however, to wait for him. The cab ahead had already started off, and Leary, true to his instructions, was speeding after it. In a moment both vehicles had turned into Seventh Avenue and were driving rapidly uptown.

As minute after minute sped by, Grace began to realize that the chase might prove a long one. They had already crossed to Central Park West, and were now speeding northward again in the neighbourhood of 72nd Street. Then, to Grace's surprise, the cab ahead swerved into a side street, and drew up before the entrance of the hotel at which Ruth Morton and her mother were stopping. The cab had no sooner stopped than the woman sprang out and entered the lobby.

Grace followed her without a moment's hesitation, ordering Leary to wait. The woman hurried up to the desk and, taking a blank card from it, scribbled a few words upon it in pencil, and handed it to the clerk. Grace was unable to hear what she said to him, but the man nodded, and handed the card to a bellboy. The woman sat down in a nearby chair.

Grace, having nothing else to do, and being somewhat afraid that the woman might recognize her, crossed at once to the opposite side of the lobby and, going to the news stand, spent some time in selecting and purchasing a magazine. She stood with her back to the woman, screened by a large palm, but at the same time managed to keep a fairly close watch upon her.

It was several minutes before anything happened. Then an elderly lady emerged from one of the elevators, and under the guidance of a bellboy approached the woman Grace had been following. Grace did not remember having ever seen the older woman before, but she had a distinct impression that it might be Mrs. Morton. She strolled over to the desk and addressed the clerk in a low voice.

"Is that Mrs. Morton—the elderly lady in black?" she asked.

The clerk stared at her, but his reserve melted before her charming smile.

"No, Miss," he said. "That is Mrs. Bradley."

"Thank you." Grace gave a sigh of relief, and turned away.

Looking once more toward the two women, she saw that the older one was addressing her companion with something of reserve, as though she had never met her before. The younger woman spoke quickly, smilingly, for a few moments, shook hands with her companion, and turned away. Grace saw that she was about to leave, and at once followed her, although at a little distance, so as not to excite her suspicions. When she reached the sidewalk the other woman had already entered her cab, and seemed about to drive off.

The cab, however, merely moved to a position further down the street, and by the time Grace had entered her own vehicle the other had again become stationary.

This manoeuvre struck Grace as extremely peculiar. She told Leary to remain where he was, and with some misgivings, awaited the woman's next move.

To the Electors of East Peterboro

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—

I believe no greater disaster could, at the present time, befall our country than the defeat of the Borden Union Administration at the polls on December 17th.

The Policy of this Administration is the speedy and continuous reinforcements of our Canadian troops on the battle-front; and the putting forth of all our National strength for the cause of civilization and freedom.

To carry out this Policy, a number of Canada's ablest Public men of vision—sinking for the present—all political differences now stand together—strong to battle for the right—united to WIN the WAR.

For over three years thousands of Loyal Canadians of many creeds and of different Nationalities, have stood shoulder to shoulder on the Battlefields of Europe, gallantly fighting a common foe, and sometimes standing; sometimes falling, have won for the name of Canada undying fame. Shall we, with all possible speed, send help to these, our heroic defenders now holding the battle-line or shall we, break faith with them as well as "with those who die"—delay—vote—while the enemy advances?

As a Union Candidate in this Riding, I am putting forth every effort to win East Peterborough to the support of the Borden Union Administration and if elected shall to the utmost of my ability support the same.

To this end I now earnestly solicit the co-operation and influence of every loyal, patriotic man and woman in East Peterborough.

I have the honor to be, faithfully yours,

J. A. SEXSMITH

GOOD WORK FOR SICK WOMEN

The Woman's Medicine Has Proved Its Worth.

When Lydia E. Pinkham's remedies were first introduced, their curative powers were doubted and had to be proved. But the proof came, and gradually the use of them spread over the whole country. Now that hundreds of thousands of women have experienced the most beneficial effects from the use of these medicines, their value has become generally recognized, and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the standard medicine for women.

The following letter is only one of the thousands on file in the Pinkham office, at Lynn, Mass., proving that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is an article of great merit as shown by the results it produces.

Anamosa, Iowa.—"When I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I suffered with a displacement, and my system was in a general run-down condition. I would have the headache for a week and my back would ache so bad when I would bend down I could hardly straighten up. My sister was sick in bed for two months and doctored, but did not get any relief. She saw an advertisement of your medicine and tried it and got better. She told me what it had done for her, and when I had taken only two bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound my head began to feel better. I continued its use and now I don't have any of those troubles."—Mrs. L. J. HANNAN, R.F.D. 1, Anamosa, Iowa.

ALL AT HOME SHOULD PREPARE FOR WAR

The first test a man is put through for either war or life insurance is an examination of his water. This is most essential because the kidneys play a most important part in causing premature old age and death. The more injurious the poisons passing through the kidneys the sooner comes decay—so says Dr. Pierce of Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., who further advises all people who are past thirty to preserve the vitality of the kidneys and free the blood from poisonous elements, such as uric acid—drink plenty of water—sweat some daily and take Anuric, double strength, before meals.

Anuric is a discovery of Dr. Pierce, and can be obtained at drug stores. For that backache, lumbago, rheumatism, "rusty" joints, swollen feet or hands, due to uric acid in the blood, Anuric quickly dissolves the uric acid as hot water does sugar. Send 10 cents to Dr. Pierce for trial pkg.

Thorold, Ont.—"I think Anuric is the best I have ever taken. My kidneys had given me trouble for some time. I would suffer from backaches and also swelling of the limbs. I took Anuric and it has entirely cured me of all my backache and has strengthened my kidneys so I feel safe in recommending it to others who suffer."—Mrs. C. A. Clarke, Box 1179.

Toronto, Ont.—"For the last eight years I have suffered with kidney trouble and rheumatism. It began with pains in my back and finally left my back and went down into the foot. It developed into a chronic case. I tried every medicine I could hear of and consulted some good doctors, but still I kept on suffering. About a year ago a friend advised me to give Anuric a trial, and am happy to say I am today a well man—never feel any traces of my ailment no matter what the weather conditions may be. Anuric is a real kidney medicine in every sense."—B. F. Garrison, 5 Matilda Street.

Military Voters' Act, 1917

To the Editor, Examiner.

Sir,—As I have had so many inquiries as to the soldier's vote, will you please allow me, through your columns, to state for the benefi of all inquirers what the law is on this subject. It is as follows:

The returned and discharged soldiers and nurses, as well as all persons, male or female, that have enlisted on enrolled or are called out for and placed on active service in the C.E.F., the Canadian Navy, Militia, Volunteer Reserves, Air Service and Motor Boat Patrol, whether of age or not, including Indians, are all entitled to vote.

Soldiers and Nurses in uniform vote, under the Military regulations, wherever they may be.

Discharged Soldiers can vote any place on producing their discharge papers and making oath that they are the persons named therein.

The above need not be on the Voters' List; they may vote whether on or not, wherever they happen to be on Polling Day.

Yours truly,

Jas. G. Guise-Bagley.

FOR BABY'S TENDER SKIN.

A child's skin is tender as well as beautiful and eczema may be caused by chafing of clothing, the use of poor soap, exposure to cold or sudden change of temperature. Probably no treatment for eczema has ever proven so successful as Dr. Chase's Ointment, and this applies particularly to baby eczema. This ointment is delightfully soothing, stops the itching and consequently prevents scratching. Gradually the sores are healed up, and the skin is left soft and velvety.

Music & Drama

"THE 13TH CHAIR."

Bayard Veiller's striking drama, "The 13th Chair" as staged at the Grand Opera House last night proved one of the most thrilling productions seen in Peterborough in years. The large audience was thrilled as seldom before by a dramatic performance. Mr. Veiller has the punch in his plays. He proved it in "Within the Law" and in "The 13th Chair" he has surpassed all his previous efforts and provided a drama that for sheer gripping interest has not been surpassed by the work of any contemporaneous author. The story of the play is based on the Rosalie La Grange stories by Will Irwin and Rosalie the spiritualist is the centre figure. The action revolves around the fortunes of a group of visitors at the home of Roscoe Crosby. At the instigation of Edward Wales, who is seeking to find the murderer of his friend, Rosalie is brought to the house to give a demonstration. Thirteen people, including the spiritualist, are seated in a circle, the doors and windows are locked and the room is plunged in darkness. The voice of a child, supposed to be "Laughing Eyes," the spiritualist's medium, is heard and Wales questions her as to the death of his friend. Suddenly there is a groan, the lights are turned up and Wales is found to have been murdered, stabbed in the back as his friend had been. The remainder of the play deals with the discovery of the murderer, the mystery being solved in a most dramatic manner, thanks to Rosalie. The action is full of stirring situations and the denouncement is a surprise.

"The 13th Chair" was magnificently acted. Miss Blanch Hall scored heavily as Rosalie, making the part of the spiritualist a most likeable and realistic one. She was delightful throughout and was enthusiastically recalled at the end of the second act. Supporting her was a most adequate cast. Joseph R. Garry's portrayal of the part of Inspector Tim Donaghue was a masterpiece, and Marie Goras charming as Helen O'Neill. All the other roles were well handled, and altogether "The 13th Chair" was the dramatic event of the season.

There was just one feature that interfered with the enjoyment of the event and that was the conduct of a part of the audience. Since the advent of bill board advertising for moving pictures, it has become the custom of managers advertising the spoken drama to place on their posters the words, "This is not a moving picture." It might be advisable for the management of the Grand, the next time a play like "The 13th Chair" comes along to label it, "This is not a comedy," and this might serve to keep away the people who persist in laughing at the serious portions of the play. Last night the most striking part of the drama, the situation that has been acclaimed by critics throughout America as one of the most novel in the history of the stage, i.e. the spiritualistic seance, played in darkness, was utterly spoiled by half a dozen brainless individuals in the gallery who persisted in emitting cat calls and whistles, apparently to the enjoyment of a few feminine gigglers downstairs, but to the disgust of the greater part of the audience, and undoubtedly to the amazement of the members of the company, who must have thought they had indeed struck a "tank" town. Such conduct might pass for humour in the hay belt, but should not be encouraged in a place of this size. The arrest of a few of the offenders would be a benefit to Peterborough theatre-goers.

A one-piece coat-skirt is so treated as to form a one-piece tunic in the back.

HAPPIEST MAN IN CANADA HE SAYS

"It's All Because of What Tanlac Did For Me," States Ward

"I believe I am the happiest man in all Canada to-day and I want to tell the public it's all because of what this Tanlac has done for me," said Henry Ward, who resides at 20 Batavia Avenue, Toronto, and is employed by the Swift Canadian Company, in a recent interview.

"Sometimes," continued Mr. Ward, "when I stooped over a pain would catch me in the small of my back and I could hardly straighten up again. My kidneys were all out of order, and disturbed me so I could scarcely get any rest at night. My stomach was so out of fix that I couldn't eat like other people and for fifteen years I have simply suffered torture. Many a morning my back hurt me so bad and was so stiff that I couldn't raise my head and I would actually have to roll out of bed. I have gone to work hurting so bad that I could hardly drag along and felt that I would be compelled to go back home. I have had to quit work many times on account of my condition and last spring I got in such a bad shape I had to step off for more than a week, and I can't describe my suffering. Then my legs became affected with something like rheumatism and there were sharp, cramping pains going through my muscles that made my legs feel like they were drawing double. Many a night I have had to crawl out of bed, walk the floor and rub to get relief from those awful cramps, and I just tell you I was in misery nearly all the time.

"This is just the fix I was in for fifteen years and while I doctored and tried nearly every kind of medicine recommended for such troubles, nothing did me any good until I began taking Tanlac. Others said so much about Tanlac helping them that I thought I might as well try it. So I did, and when I found it was doing me good I kept on taking it. I have taken six bottles now and I can say it and tell the truth, I am feeling better than I have in fifteen years. I am simply getting along fine and have gained five pounds in weight, which I think is wonderful for one of my age, as I am now sixty-four. I haven't been bothered with my stomach and kidneys since I took my first bottle of Tanlac and I believe these troubles are gone for good. All signs of the rheumatism have left me too. I'm no constipated any more and I feel stronger and more vigorous than I have in many years. I certainly am happy over my wonderful relief and I think it nothing but right that I should tell about it for the benefit of others."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Co., Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.

TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

Look Young! Bring Back Its Natural Colour, Gloss and Attractiveness

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, streaked or gray. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get a 50-cent bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound at any drug store all ready for use. This is the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Suphur Compound no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.

This preparation is a delightful toilet requisite and is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

Submarines Have Been On Offensive In Past Three Weeks

LONDON, Dec. 14.—When an Associated Press enquired of high naval authority to-day "if the anti-submarine war was going well and what was the reason for the high rate of sinkings in the past three weeks," the answer was: "The enemy has had more submarines at work. He has actually been attempting a submarine offensive of the greatest possible magnitude in an effort to reinforce his offensive on land. He is trying to bring a coup which will incline us to peace.

"He has failed signally on sea as on land, and he has had to pay a heavy price. Our counter-measures are meeting with increased success, and the enemy will experience constantly increasing difficulty in maintaining his campaign.

CONTINUE SHIPBUILDING.

"If the shipbuilding efforts can be properly spurred on in England and America the Allies will be able to say within a measurable time that tonnage is being launched at a rate exceeding the sinkings, and also, if the naval measures continue to improve, as it is reasonable to expect, that U-boats are being sunk faster than the Germans are able to build them, and that the German U-boat fleet is steadily dwindling away.

"Much still depends on American shipbuilding, but as encouragement to those who are putting their efforts into that work it may be said with confidence hat the allied navies are able to handle the U-boat."

RETURNED SOLDIER IS LIBERAL CANDIDATE IN NORTHUMBERLAND

Sergt. Sam Dudley Has Son Overseas and Declares Himself Opposed to Borden's Conscription Act—Wants Conscription of Wealth and Resources, Not of Manhood Alone.

Sam Dudley, of Cobourg, a returned soldier, who has a son overseas, is the Liberal candidate in Northumberland. In his nomination address he stated that he was not in favour of conscription, and the Cobourg "World" reports his address as follows:

"Mr. Dudley said he would be in favour of conscripting everything — farms, munition plants, etc., and give the soldier the same wages as those at home are getting. (Cheers from the audience). Was it right to pay a man $5 a day to work at home and only give the soldier $1.10? No. He would be in favour of a constription that included wealth and national industries as well as man power. (Cheers.) I conscientiously believe that this would be in the best interests of the Empire, said Mr. Dudley. My son is overseas. Your sons and my son and by brother's sons are overseas, and if I did not feel convinced that the stand I have taken is in the best interests of the Empire and the soldiers, could I stand here and deliberately talk against my own flesh and blood? No, gentlemen, you can rest assured that, if I am elected, I will vote for legislation that will be in the best interests of your sons and mine overseas, and I reserve the right to vote on any question as appears to me to be in the interests of the soldiers or the Empire. He was not a dyed-in-the-wool Grit. He had voted Conservative.

In concluding Mr. Dudley thanked the convention for the patient hearing he had received. Not once had he been interrupted. To those, said Mr. Dudley, who have sons overseas, let me say that, if elected, I will always use my influence in Parliament to further the interests of your sons and mine. Mr. Dudley sat down amid cheers and "Hurrah for Sam Dudley!"

Enlisted in 1916.

During the fall of 1916 he had enlisted with the 139th Battalion as Sergeant. His son also enlisted and was now overseas. His first duty had been to recruit and he had attested ninety-five young men, some of whom now lie in France—martyrs to their country's cause. When the 139th went overseas he went with them. In England he was given work of looking after the sanitary condition of the camp. He was not, however, sent to France, but instead was ordered back to Canada on duty.

When Field Kitchens Went.

Mr. Dudley told of some of the conditions he found in England. He told how field kitchens that people all over Canada had given money to buy so that the soldiers might have hot meals while on the march were piled up in England and never taken to France at all—hundreds of them—all scrapped. How thousands and thousands of Oliver equipments (belts, water bottles, etc.) were all discarded in England as useless.

Mr. Dudley. I really don't know, and I would not mention any figures because I'm not certain. I don't want to tell anything except what I know to be a fact. Mr. Dudley also told how hundreds of machine guns, machine guns that many municipalities granted money to buy, were scrapped in England. How carts, waggons, and many other kinds of soldiers' equipment, supplied and paid for by the Borden Government, were discarded as useless and scrapped in England

Mr. Sam Clarke.

Mr. Sam Clarke, M.P.P., in his address, referred to Mr. Sam Nesbitt's pretensions that he had dropped his politics.

Boys, can you imagine such a thing? Sam Nesbitt, born a Tory, brought up a Tory, all his life a Tory—suddenly, instantly changed—without any politics. Mr. Nesbitt complains that Sir Wilfrid Laurier appointed tribunals in Quebec who are exempting so many of the men. If Sir Robert Borden and the Union Government were so afraid that Laurier would appoint such tribunals why did they give Laurier the power to appoint the tribunals? If Sir Wilfrid is such a disloyal man as they say he is, then why did they let him appoint the tribunals in Quebec? Mr. Nesbitt now thought Mr. Rowell and ther Unionist Liberals were great men. Sam no longer had any politics. He would praise Liberal and Conservative alike. These Union Liberals were angels now. For two terms he had sat in the Provincial House with Mr. Nesbitt, and during all that time he had never seen the member from East Northumberland vote for or support one measure that Mr. Rowell had introduced. (Cheers.) But now Mr. Rowell was an angel! Sam, you need to be born again! No wonder (pointing to Mr. Nesbitt who had just sat forward in his chair) you sit with bowed head, after telling this meeing you no longer have ing this meeting you no longer have ought to be twins (Cheers.)

Favours Voluntary System.

Mr. Clarke was tired of hearing this lip loyalty. Sick of listening to people telling what they have done, how loyal they have been, etc. Is there a disloyal man in this house? No, not one. Every man was loyal to his country.

Mr. Clarke was not in favour of conscription. Men should not be taken from the farm. Food above all things was needed, not only for Canadian soldiers, but for British, French, and other Allied soldiers. If men are taken from the farm food shortage was bound to occur. I believe in voluntary recruiting. I believe in appealing to the humanity of man. If you can't appeal to the humanity of a man, God help us. I'm as honest, Mr. Nesbitt, in my conviction of the voluntary system as you are in conscription.

In speaking of Sir Wilfrid, he said the people of Quebec loved the old man. He referred to the report in The Globe of how Sir Wilfrid was received in Quebec. How they thronged about him. They loved him and respected him, and the man who is loved at home is no blackguard. (Cheers.) The Conservative leaders had sowed the seed of discord in Ontario and the other provinces against Quebec and stirred Quebec against the other provinces to satisfy political desires, regardless of consequences. Conscription was made a football in other provinces and a club in Quebec. Sir Wilfrid Laurier had over 40 years of political life and had gone through without a scar. A man with that record was a pretty good leader to put at the head of the country to-day. Anyway, Sir Robert and Sir Wilfrid are in the same boat. They both promised there should be no conscription without a referendum—one changed his opinion; the other kept his word. (Cheers.)

Man in the audience: "If Laurier had been in power, not one man would have gone to the Front."

Mr. Clarke: No; you're wrong, my man. Sir Wilfrid couldn't have kept you back!

MOTOR TRUCKS IS NEED OF HALIFAX AT PRESENT

NO NEED OF EXAGGERATION TO DESCRIBE THE SITUATION—SCENES OF RUIN.

HALIFAX, N.S., Dec. 14. — The crying need of Halifax continues to be for motor trucks, cars and military trucks. It is impossible to magnify this. There is no need of exaggeration or of hearsay to describe the situation. Everywhere one gets the most appaling stories first-hand.

The woman who sits beside me on the street car has a child with an eye knocked out, another with an ear almost gone, a mother and sister dead, house in ruins.

Yesterday afternoon I walked nearly a mile along the waterfront. To my right and to my left lay a huge pile of kindling wood, most of it but a few inches in width, with here and there a junk heap and smoke ensuing. I looked from the water front and for half a mile or more it is the same, absolutely no signs to show that but one short week ago here were actual streets, stores, happy homes—families.

In large tracks the fire left not even the kindling wood. Now we come to a heap of wood splinters and kindling with here and there bits of woman's garments, showing a lady's shoe or a stocking. It was a large tenecmnt house. The soldiers are working amongst the ruins.

PTE. LLOYD TELLS OF GOING OVER THE TOP

Peterboro' Boy Who Went Overseas With 93rd Battalion, Gives Vivid Description of Canadian Advance on Ypres Front.

MUD TO THE WAIST

A vivid description of the hot fighting in which the Canadians were engaged last month is given by Pte. Harry Lloyd, formerly of the 93rd Battalion in a letter to his mother, Mrs. A. Lloyd, 868 George street.

Somewhere in France, Nov. 17th.

Here we are again and drawing near to Christmas — only another month to go. I'm getting things together every pay day so that I can send you a parcel at Christmas. You see down here on convalescence we can only draw 10 francs a pay and they only pay us every ten days, so what with little a fellow needs, and a few smokes, she's pretty near "nappoo," but you will have a few souvenirs anyway. I tell you it's a treat to be out of the line for a spell.

My nerves were pretty badly shaken up the last time we went over the top. It was a pretty cold morning and they had to issue rum twice so that we could keep warm. The mud was waist deep in some parts of the trench.

We went over at 6 o'clock with a fine artillery barrage. We had to cross over 200 yards of boggy land in which many of the lads got stuck and were sniped or drowned. We got orders to sit on the far side of this bog to let the flanks catch up as they had a greater distance to come than we. Well we sat in shell holes sniping at Fritzie running back over the hill, and when the half hour was up we waited but no flnaks came up, for they were all shot up so bad they couldn't advance so we had to go on alone, the Canadians. It was the Tommies who were the flanks.

I got blown up off the mud like a feather, and then I came down on my back in the mud, which was nice and sticky—in fact loveable. I got up and started to advance again with what few boys were left and I was within fifty yards of our objective when a shell landed behind me, blew me off my feet, got me above the kidneys, killed two of our machine gun crew and wounded one of our officers. I then hopped into a shell hole and got my wound dressed by our stretcher bearers, who did fine work in the scrap, two of them getting the Militarly Medal. Then O started to scramble back the 800 yards over which we advanced, through the bog and back into the front line trench. It took me 35 minutes to traverse that lot and I was all in when I got there, but believe me our boys took that objective and held it for three days until relieved. Can you wonder why Canada is proud of her soldiers? Well I won't go into any more of that kind of fight, but my word, didn't old Fritzie run. I don't name the place because it's not allowed by the censor, but I am sending you a brooch with the name o nit at Christmas for a souvenir.

Palpaitation of the Heart and Nerve Troubles

WERE CURED BY

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills

When the heart begins to beat irregularly or intermittently, palpitate and throb, skip beats, beat fast for a time, then so slow as to seem almost to stop, it causes great anxiety and alarm and the least excitement or exertion seems to affect it.

Many people are kept in a state of morbid fear of death, become weak, worn and miserable through this unnatural action of the heart.

To all sufferers from heart troubles we would advise the use of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, which by their action in strengthening the heart and regulating the beat remove all the distressing conditions, and impart vigor and vitality to the system.

Mrs. Thomas Davidson, Mount Brydges, Ont., writes: "I have been a great sufferer in the past with nerve troubles and palpitation of the heart. I tried several remedies, but without any good results. My son came in one day and advised me to take Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. After using one and a half boxes, I am fully recovered, and am in a perfect state of health, thanks to your valuable medicine."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

THE LIVE WIRE

He Got the Reputation and Kept It

By EDWARD BOLTWOOD

Copyright . Frank A. Munsey Co.

Carl P. Stryver jumped from the moving trolley car and hurried up a suburban cross street. His energetic gait was almost a run, but it was dignified by the important expression of his face. He had recently acquired the art of always appearing overburdened by vast and mysterious plans.

An appreciative passenger on the rear seat of the car spoke to the conductor.

"That lad's a live wire, hey?"

"You bet!" agreed the official. "The city of Leeton never had no such a booster as Carl P., nor any other city of our size here in Ohier, I guess!"

The 12 o'clock whistles shrieked hoarsely as Stryver burst into his house like a tropical storm. Since the day when he resigned his clerkship in the Leeton bank to accept the office of secretary of the new board of trade he very seldom came home for the midday meal, which he had of late learned to call lunch and which his wife still called dinner. Rose was therefore surprised and genuinely pleased to see him.

"WHAT IN THE WORLD ARE YOU CELEBRATING?"

"Deeley's man hasn't fixed the gas stove," she said. "I can't understand why I shouldn't attend to that, Carl, as well as you!"

"Of course you can't understand, dear," said Carl. "No woman could understand board of trade affairs any better than she could help in them. Deeley has just joined the board, and I want to get into personal touch with him, so I'll attend to the stove myself, perhaps tomorrow, Rosamond."

She smiled good humoredly, for she was not yet accustomed to the impressive alteration of her name which Stryver had established.

"And why not today?"

"Today?" he snorted. "Gracious powers! Today is the biggest day in the history of the board of trade. Mr. Niles is scheduled to arrive this afternoon—the great Amos Niles of Pittsburgh—and if he takes a shine to Leeton people and moves one of his boiler works here it will be a feather in the board's cap, I can tell you, that the city won't forget."

"I do wish you'd stay for din—for luncheon with me!" said Rose.

"We're going to show Mr. Niles how proud we are of the place we live in and how we're always trying to make it better. Goodby!"

It was nearly 5 o'clock when the accident happened. An automobile skidded against a post opposite the Stryvers' house. There was a muffled scream from the covered tonneau, and a stout old gentleman clambered out of it to the sidewalk and shook his fist at the chauffeur.

"You no 'count idjut!" he roared. "You've gone and scared my wife into conniption fits again, you French fool!"

Mrs. Stryver fairly flew to her dining room, back to the front door and down her front steps, bearing a bottle and a glass.

"There, there, dearie!" she said to the limp old lady. "Don't you take on. You drink this, and come right into the house and lie down, and stay as long as you want to."

The lady accepted the support of Rose's strong young arm without an instant's hesitation. The gentleman appeared to be equally accustomed to quick decisions.

"Thank you, ma'am," he acknowledged. "You're real folksy to strangers for a city woman, ain't you? Martha's sort o' half sick. I'd ought to 'a' known better than to fetched her on this trip, and—what's this? Currant wine? Well, say! I haven't seen any currant wine in a reg'lar dog's age!"

"I'll give you a farm made apple pie to go with it," laughed Mrs. Stryver.

He beamed gratefully, and while Rose assisted his wife into the house he turned on the French chauffeur, who was tinkering at the wheel.

"Listen, you!" exploded the old gentleman. "We'll stop here quite a spell. You can mend that axle or not; I don't care two cents. I'd as lief dump the whole shebang into my boiler works for scrap iron!"

"Vairy good," jabbered the chauffeur, touching his cap. "Vairy good, Meester Neels."

Meanwhile at the rooms of the Leeton board of trade the reception committee, high collared and frock coated, waited anxiously for Amos Niles of Pittsburgh. Each of the five members wore in his lapel a small badge shaped like the sole of a shoe and inscribed, "My Heart and Soul For Leeton." The badge had been happily devised by Carl Stryver in honor of the first accomplishment of the board of trade, which was the importation to the city of a shoe factory, now extinct.

Stryver sat at the secretary's desk in a corner of one of the rooms. Beside him sat the landlord of the Majestic hotel.

"We will have the claret served with the entree," said Stryver, scowling at a portentous dinner card.

"Wouldn't you rather have wine than claret?" hinted the landlord.

"That's right," put in Meyer, the committee's chairman. "We've got to blow Mr. Niles clean off his feet. He must be a great spender. Remember the day we called on him, Carl, and the way he ordered people round? I guess we can size up a man Q. T. What jollies a millionaire like him is ings, and plenty of 'em. Make it wine!"

"I had planned the champagne with the seventh course, the truffle croquettes," explained Stryver, "but we'll have it earlier, if you prefer." He glanced at his watch.

"After 5 o'clock already!" he announced nervously.

"Maybe the train's late," suggested the chairman.

"Maybe he won't come by train," Stryver rejoined. "His letter didn't say. By George, is that our telephone ringing?"

He secluded himself in a telephone booth. No sooner had he done so than the hall door of the room opened slowly. Mr. Meyer started and caught his breath. The committee stood at attention, as if being photographed. But the arrival was merely Judge Broderick, a tall, angular old fellow in a crumpled suit of tweeds.

Carl had not observed Judge Broderick. Carl's face was white and set, and he rested both clinched fists on the table, with the air of a United States president, whose entire reputation is at stake, confronting a national crisis in the cabinet.

"Gentlemen," he said firmly, "there has been a change in our arrangements. Amos Niles is at my house. I shall expect you there within an hour or so. Now, leave this to me. Don't ask me to waste time by explaining."

He could not have lucidly explained had he wished to. Rosamond over the wire had given him a jumbled report, femininely unbusinesslike and almost incoherent. It was clear from it only that Amos Niles declined to leave Stryver's house. Stryver plunged down the stairs and into a cab.

"Ryan's grocery!" he shouted to the hackman.

The drive gave him an opportunity to think. He checked items excitedly on his tremulous fingers. He must stop at a florist's, a wine merchant's, a butcher's—

Abruptly the gas stove occurred to him. He rapped frantically on the front window of the carriage.

"To Deeley's!" screamed Stryver. "Deeley, the plumber!"

Then, with a sudden spasm akin to toothache, he remembered the cracked glass of his street door, the parlor carpet too! What opinion would Mr. Niles have about that? Stryver leaned back in the cab and groaned penitently. Why hadn't he taken care of his home? His fingers strayed to the badge in his lapel, and he wondered if the Pittsburgh millionaire had noticed that the porch needed a painting.

The carriage rattled up the street to his house, and Stryver dismounted with his bundles, resembling an overworked Santa Claus. Rose serenely met him on the steps.

"Carl, what in the world are you celebrating?"

"Hush!" he whispered. "Smuggle this gasfitter into the kitchen, can you? Where's Mr. Niles?"

"Up in our bedroom with his wife. The sweetest old people! But, Carl, the stove needn't be fixed this instant. We've had supper."

"Had din—had supper?"

"Yes," smiled Rose. "Mr. Niles said it was the best he ever ate. I managed pretty well, considering."

"Considering my neglect of things, you mean," supplied Stryver sadly. "I guess, Rose, that boosting, like charity, begins at— Oh, my heavens, here he comes downstairs!"

A couple of hours later the five members of the board of trade committee left Stryver's residence, dinnerless, but happy. Amos Niles, genial in shirt sleeves and slippers, had assured them that he was thoroughly satisfied with Leeton and that one of his factories would be erected there. In the returning trolley car Mr. Meyer was moved to enthusiastic comment.

"And the old plutocrat did look satisfied, for a fact," said Mr. Meyer. "How he chuckled over that doughnut, didn't he? Stryver claimed that it was all because of a motor accident, but I believe Carl P. had the whole thing framed up, somehow. That lad's a live wire, hey?"

"You bet!" ejaculated the committee in fervent chorus.

IF YOU WANT EVIDENCE

THAT HEMORRHOIDS OR PILES CAN BE COMPLETELY CURED READ THESE LETTERS—BOTH ARE SWORN STATEMENTS.

TORONTO, ONT., November 24.—Next to personal experience the sworn statements of reliable people is the strongest evidence obtainable. If you have any doubt that Dr. Chase's Ointment will positively and completely cure piles, these letters should convince you.

Mr. Samuel Parker, fruit grower, Grimsby, Ont., has made the following declaration before Mr. W. W. Kidd, Notary Public, of the same place: "I do solemnly declare that I was troubled with bleeding piles and was advised to go to the hospital and have an operation performed. My wife said "No; get a box of Dr. Chase's Ointment." I did so and have used it according to directions whil living in Manitoba, and obtained complete cure, for I have never been troubled with piles since. I am now seventy years of age, and want to recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment to all sufferers from piles. My wife has used it for itching skin and obtained complete cure."

Mr. Donald M. Campbell, Campbell's Mountain, N.S., writes "I have used Dr. Chase's Ointment with great success for hemorrhoids or piles of 15 years standing. After trying all kinds of so-called pile cures, three boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment gave me a complete cure. I have also used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and there are no others so good. You may use this letter, if you wish, for the benefit of others you may suffer as I did."

Sworn before me, Murdoch Gordon Campbell, J. P., in the County and for Inverness County.

If you would like to try Dr. Chase's Ointment at our expense, send a two cent stamp to pay postage and we shall mail you a sample box free. Full size box 60 cents, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Don't Diet Yourself
TO CURE DYSPEPSIA
IT ISN'T NECESSARY

The sufferer from dyspepsia and indigestion who has to pick and choose his food, is the most miserable of all mankind.

Even the little he does eat causes such torture, and is digested so imperfectly that it does him little good.

What dyspeptics need is not dieting, or artificial digestants, but something that will put their stomach right so it will manufacture its own digestive ferments.

For forty years now Burdock Blood Bitters has been making weak stomachs strong, and curing severe cases of dyspepsia and indigestion that other remedies were powerless to reach.

It restores the stomach to a normal healthy condition so that the food no longer causes distress, but is thoroughly digested and assimilated, and goes on its way making rich, red blood.

Mrs. Henry Shaw, Campbellton, N.B., writes: "I was for five years troubled with a weak stomach, and could not eat any food that would agree with me. I tried different medicines, but could not get cured. A friend advised me to take Burdock Blood Bitters. I took four bottles, and now I am in perfect health."

B.B.B. is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

TURKS RESIGNED WON'T COME BACK

Will Make No Effort to Recapture Jerusalem.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 14.—An indication that the Turks will not attempt to recapture JJerusalem was given by Genera. Stoeger-Steiner, Austro-Hungarian War Minister, in replying to a question raised in the army committee of the Austrian delegation, as quoted in a despatch received here to-day from Vienna. The general said Jerusalem was occupied without fighting, the Turks retreating eastward through the town when their positions to the west were subjected to a surprise attack by the British. Jerusalem suffered no damage, he said, and the Ottoman supreme command has given assurances that awtnon damage is out of the question.
Jerusalem will now remain outside the fighting zone, the general said.

29 COFFINS END TO END.

Many Were Those of Former Worshippers in St. Paul's—Some Had Only White Tags.

HALIFAX, N.S., Dec. 14.— In the aisles of old St. Paul's to-day lay 29 coffins ranged end to end. On some were silver plates bearing records of name and age; on others were only white tags, the last identification tickets of the dead within. Those silent inmates were many of them, former members of the congregation From the old church in which they had lately worshipped they were borne again, one by one, on their last journey. But still more and yet more took their places.
In one corner was the white casket of a little child. A group of mourners stood around whispering of its young life, its dreadful fate, and wiping away the unavailing tears. While they mourned, another little child, holding its mother's hand, was laughing and prattling in innocence of the dreadful meaning of things.

REINFORCEMENTS WAIT IN ENGLAND.

Clouds are manufactured by the Borden Government to obscure the situation concerning the number of Canadian troops now in England ready to act as reinforcements for those units at the Front. Major Grant, of Kingston, says England is almost cleaned out of Canadian troops. That is one version.
A returned soldier informs The Advertiser that there are thousands of physically fit Canadians in England who have never seen France, but who have been eagerly awaiting the word to cross the Channel for more than a year.
The commanding officer of one Ontario unit, who has recently returned to his home, says the battalion remains in England as a unit; it has not been broken up, and it has not been given any idea when it may hope to get to France. The men are straining at the leash which holds them back, but cannot trace it to its source or bring about its loosening.
Major-General Mewburn has disclosed the figures of Canadians over seas and their location, up until 14th November of this year. They are: In France, 143,000; in England, 116,000; in Canada, 35,000; total casualties in France and England, 126,580.
Do these official figures look as if England is almost cleaned out of Canadians? According to the Minister of Militia, there are nearly as many there, exclusive of casualties, as in France.
General Currie has been calling for reinforcements while there are 116,000 men ready in England! The Borden Government wants the people to believe that 25,000 more must be sent at the beginning of the year or disaster will follow. Why has the commander to plead for reinforcements? Has his cry been forced from him in order that the Borden Government may make of it party capital? Is help being held back from the men at the Front to strengthen the Borden cause in Canada? Can it be that such vile treason is perpetrated for the sake of party?
In France, 143,000; in England, 116,000! For every 100 men in France, 81 are waiting to reinforce them! Can any other belligerent show such a proportion of reserves? —London Advertiser

DRINK HOT WATER IF YOU DESIRE A ROSY COMPLEXION

Says we can't help but look better and feel better after an inside bath.

To look one's best and feel one's best is to enjoy an inside bath each morning, to flush from the system the previous day's waste, sour fermentations and poisonous toxins before it is absorbed into the blood. Just as coal when it burns leaves behind a certain amount of incombustible material in the form of ashes, so the food and rink taken each day leave in the alimentary organs a certain amount of indigestible material, which if not eliminated, form toxins and poisons which are then sucked into the blood through the very ducts which are intended to suck in only nourishment to sustain the body.
If you want to see the glow of healthy bloom in your cheeks, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, you are told to drink every morning upon arising, a glass of hot water, with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, which is a harmless means of washing the waste material and toxins from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, thus cleansing the entire alimentary tract, before putting more food into the stomach.
Men and women with sallow skins, liver spots, pimples or pallid complexion, also those who wake up with a coated tongue, bad taste, nasty breath, others who are bothered with headaches, bilious spells, acid stomach or constipation should begin this phosphated hot water drinking, and are assured of very pronounced results in one or two weeks.
A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs very little at the drug store but is sufficient to demonstrate that just as soap and hot water cleanses, purifies and freshens the skin on the outside, so hot water and limestone phosphate acts on the inside organs. We must always consider that internal sanitation is vastly more important than outside cleanliness, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities in the blood, while the bowel pores do.

ALLIES' TRANSPORT GREATLY SUPERIOR

FRENCH AND BRITIH HAVE TAKEN SPLENDID EQUIPMENT TO ITALIAN FRONT.

With the French Army in Northern Italy, Dec. 14.—The French troops here already have acclimated themselves perfectly and appear to be working in the utmost harmony with such of the Italians that are left on their sector, notably with artillery which co-operates under joint command. The French, as well as the British armies, have brought their most complete equipment imaginable including a bewildering number of motor trucks, so that their lines may easily and regularly be supplied with every necessity. The scenes behind the front is in vivid contrast to the scene behind any German or Austrian front, which the correspondent repeatedly visited for more than two years, by reason of the superior transportation facilities over the Germans, who are short of oil, gasoline and tires, and who must forward their supplies in horse-drawn vehicles.
The Germans who patrol the French sector apparently are more venturesome than they are along the front in France, for here they boldly cross their lines, regardless of the sharpest bombardment, and invite attacks by French planes in their eagerness to spy out batteries that constantly are bombarding German positions.

JERUSALEM

The history of the city covers a period of about 3,500 years, about 500 of which are prehistoric.
It has been independent for only 500 years.
The following is a brief synopsis of its chief historical events:
1400 B.C., captured from the Jews, immediately.
1046 B.C., recaptured by David.
597 B.C., surrendered by Jehoiachin.
586 B.C., taken from Zedekiah and completely destroyed.
536 B.C., Jews returned to the city under an edict from Cyrus, and rebuilt the city and the temple.
457 B.C., Ezra arrived.
445 B.C., Nehemiah arrived.
For 500 years from this time it was the property in turn of Persia, Macedonia, Syria, Egypt and Rome.
70 A.D., taken and totally destroyed by Titus.
1099 A.D., Latin rule begins.
1244 A.D., taken by the Moslems.
1517 A.D., taken by the Turkish Sultan Selim.
Has been the scene of seventeen sieges.
Has been under six separate religions. Beginning with the ancient Jewish religion, it has seen the worship of Baal, Asherah, Zeus, Olympias, Mohammed and Christ.
The population is about 48,000 and nearly two-thirds of these are Jews.
In 1841, at the instance of Frederick-William IV., of Prussia, a bishopric of Jerusalem was formed jointly by England and Prussia. Three bishops served in succession to one another, one being a converted German Jew and another a German Swiss.

Admission will be by ticket only, and application must be made on the days mentioned. This is important, and mothers and relatives are asked to bear it in mind.

MILITIA MINISTER MUST NOT TAMPER WITH SERVICE ACT

STRATFORD, Dec. 14.—Dr. Rankin, Liberal candidate for North Perth, held a splendid meeting at Rostock, and with other speakers, put the issues of the present campaign before the electors in a forceful manner. Dr. Rankin reiterated the platform he has adopted, and was warmly cheered. Other speakers were R. Wellington Haq, M.P.P., of Listowel, D. K. Erb of Downie, the father of two soldier sons, one of whom is in the hospital. Valentine Stock of Tavistock, whose son has been overseas since early in the war also spoke.
The Liberal platform was thoroughly gone into, and the farmers were cautioned against honeyed offers made by the Bordenites for their votes by intimated tamperings with the military service act. The act was law, and no minister of militia could change it.

A ROUSING RALLY MEETING

GERMAN DEFENSIVE IN WEST MUST BE CONSIDERED ENDED

Must Expect at Least Half a Million Fresh German Fighters on the Western Front Declares Times Military Expert---Germany is Preparing Her Supreme Military Effort There---Greatest Danger in the Next Six Months---Many More Enemy Guns and Aircraft Massed.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, December 14.—"We must expect half a million fresh German fighters on the west front and many more guns and aircraft," declared Colonel Repington, the Times military expert, in an article to-day, emphatically warning the nation that Germany is preparing her supreme military effort there. "Owing to the Russian disintegration and the Italian defeats," he declared, "the enemy is able to put larger forces than ever on the French front.

"There has been much evidence already of the intense transport of troops from the East. There are now 150 German divisions (about 2,250,000 men) on the west front, and about 79 divisions (about 1,185,000 men) on the east.

"From the latter number all those between the ages of 19 and 35 are being withdrawn for service on the Franco-British front. Perhaps some complete divisions will follow. It is possible too that Austro-Hungary will go to France.

"German headquarters has probably decided there is no danger to be feared from Russia for some time, and that it is important to settle the western allies prior to Russia's recovery and the concentration of the Americans in France.

"There is the greatest danger in the next six months. The Central Powers, beset by want and exhaustion of reserves may strike more quickly than we know.

"The long German defensive in the west must be regarded as ended.

"Germany's reinforcements will compel France to use her classes of 1919 [illegible] forces in France are not enough to promise a victory in ambitious offensives. Never has there been the superiority in numbers necessary to a victory.

"In sending so many troops to distant theatres we have made bad use of our forces. Reconsideration of distant operations is necessary and pressing. There are enough troops there to turn the scale in France. It is unavailing to occupy Jerusalem and Bagdad if we are unsuccessful on the main front."

(Special to The Toronto Star and the Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, December 14.—Russia is in for a protracted civil war in the opinion of Russian observers here to-day. The utter collapse of the scheme for holding a constituent assembly reported in latest Petrograd despatches, removed practically the last hope here that the nation might work out its destiny by amicable adjustment of various political factions. Only a handful of delegates to the assembly have appeared in Petrograd. Few of the Cadet delegates are likely to attend in view of the formal announcement by the Bolsheviki government that all adherents of this political faith are enemies of the people subject to arrest. The Bolsheviki are becoming more ruthless in their efforts to remain in power, according to Petrograd advices, which is a further factor in the belief here that a few Russians of a political faith antagonistic to the Trotzky-Lenine factions are likely to hazard their lives by attending the assembly held in the city which is the main stronghold of the Bolsheviki strength. The Cossack revolt to-day was apparently still going strong. Utterly contradictory reports were received from the two sides.

PARIS (Official), December 14.—The War Office announces heavy artillery fighting in Champagne last night.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON (Official), December 14.—Our troops improved their position slightly east of Bullecourt as a result of the bomb fighting in that locality reported in last night's communique. The enemy raided one of our posts last night south of Pronville. A few of our men are missing. On the remainder of the front there was nothing of special interest during the night.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, December 14.—It is reported from Toholosk, Siberia, that Olga, the eldest daughter of former Emperor Nicholas, is seriously ill.

MONARCHY THE REAL AIM

Canadian Press Despatch:

LONDON, Dec. 14. — Real aim of Bolsheviki is a monarchy at least, and possibly despotism, in opinion of Petrograd correspondent of Post. He wires that for more than a month the Bolsheviki have been openly preparing public opinion for acceptance of what he says after all is the only fit term of government for Russia. The popular rumour at present he adds, is that the former Russian heir to the throne, Duke Alexis, will be made Emperor under the German aegis.

GERMANY HOPES TO BREAK THROUGH ON WESTERN FRONT

Her Much Advertised Drive is the First Preliminary to a Peace Offensive Preparatory to the Time When Full Strength of U. S. Army Will Be Felt

A SUMMIT OF STRENGTH

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)
(By Lowell Mellett.)

LONDON, Dec. 14. — Germany's much advertised forthcoming west front drive is her first preliminary to another peace offensive. She hopes to achieve a dent somewhere on the Franco-British line. She wants to claim "invincibility" of her military forces to the German people, to steel [illegible] the overwhelming sacrifices [illegible] must come when America throws her strength into the battle line. She wants to buck up Austria-Hungary to greater sacrifices against that day. She wants to accelerate the "a victory" sentiment in the allied nations. Above all, she wants the war to end before America's legions of men and war machines can be arranged against her and overwhelmingly turn the tide to a certain German defeat. This is the view of observers here. It is based on well defined developments of recent weeks in Germany.

The Kaiser and his military chiefs can well afford to sacrifice thousands of soldiers who must be thrown to the slaughter in a west front offensive. That they are planning such a slaughter is sufficient evidence in view here of Germany's desperation. A tremendous increase in German peace propaganda has been noted recently. Germany to-day is at the summit of her strength. With every hour from now on it oozes away. At home Chancellor Hertling has apparently cemented political ruptures. On seas, by speeding up methods, Germany's submarines are taking a heavy toll of allied shipping. In the field Germany claims major credit for strategy on the recent successful drive into Italy and a great many German troops participated there. Russia has been definitely put out of the war—more than counter-balancing Turkey's utter collapse. Through cleverly exerted, but nevertheless relentless pressure, Germany is extorting food and metal supplies from her neutral neighbours. The Kaiser is at the zenith of his power. To save his autocracy, he must now in this moment of strength, try to save something from the wreck that inevitably is coming by a peace made while Germany is strong. He knows President Wilson's proselyting of the German people, seeking to bring them to their senses and overthrow autocracy will gain with every day henceforth. He and his leaders know the Berlin-Bagdad scheme is gone, with Turkey's smash-up. He knows with allied and American ship-building plans and with the perfection of anti-submarine devices, the German U boat is destined to play less and less a part in the war. He knows his ambitious propaganda seeking to disrupt Italy has failed, that a separate peace with Russian Bolsheviki means nothing. Above all else he realizes that next spring perhaps America will have a great force of carefully trained men on the fighting line and that American aeroplanes will likely start with the allied aviators to screen Germany from the sky.

Venice Is Ready

Italians Are Prepared to Defend the Queen City of the Seas to the Last Drop of Their Blood—Hatred Against the Austrians

ART TREASURES MOVED

Special to the Toronto Star and Peterborough Examiner.

With The French Armies in Italy—(By Henry Wood).—Italy will defend Venice to the last drop of her blood. One needs only to talk to the Italian fighters and see the preparations for the defence of the Queen City to understand this. The traditional Italian hatred of Austrian has crystallised into a nation-wide determination. The city itself is being converted into an unapproachable island. It is capable now of withstanding an indefinite siege of siege. Aside from its natural lagoon defences which encircle the city and completely cut it off from contact with the main land. The Venetian Plains, for endless miles inland, are being converted into a workable labrinth of defences.

Venice is more majestic than ever. The history palaces lining the Grand Canal are closed. The Bridge of Sighs is uncrossed by prisoners. Two-thirds of Venice's population has departed. But the pigeons around historic St. Mark's, refuse absolutely to abandon their city. The tranquility of the pigeons' lives is undisturbed, except by the roar of cannon on the Piave front, eighteen miles distant. All art treasures have either been carried off to places of safety or else buried under mountains of sand bags. The few remaining guides now show in their place the holes pierced in ancient Austrian aeroplane bombs.

Sir Wilfrid's Western Tour Proves Triumphal Success

Enthusiastic Reception of Liberal Leader Shows How Miserably the Attitude of the West Has Been Misrepresented — Splendid Addresses by Hon. W. G. Mitchell and Hartley Dewart.

AT VANCOUVER TO-NIGHT

REVELSTOKE, B.C., Dec. 13.—The four mass meetings held in Calgary on Wednesday night, addressed at some length by Sir Wilfrid Laurier in person, following the [illegible] similarly crowded meetings in Regina the previous evening, and the meetings in Winnipeg, have proved telling object lessons, demonstrating Sir Wilfrid's wonderful vitality. They are bound to have a tremendous effect not only west of the Great Lakes, but throughout the whole Dominion. The enthusiastic reception of the [illegible] representation of his position by Sir Wilfrid Laurier shows how miserably the attitude of the West has been represented to the East by the servile and subsidized Bordenite press. At these meetings Hon. W. G. Mitchell, Provincial Treasurer of Quebec, and Mr. Hartley Dewart of Toronto, have met with cordial receptions and have done effective work. Sir Wilfrid passed through Revelstoke on Thursday night on his way to Vancouver, where he will address four meetings on Friday.

Mr. Dewart's Addresses.

CALGARY, Alta., Dec. 13. — Mr. Hartley Dewart of Toronto, speaking with Sir Wilfrid Laurier at the Grand Opera House here to-night, addressed a crowded meeting. Addressing the packed audience in the First Methodist Church, Mr. Dewart emphasized the danger of people being misled because there were so few newspapers in the Dominion that fairly presented the Liberal case. The effect of the free use of advertising by the Government, and the use that was made by the advertisements for the patriotic and other funds for the victory loan, had proved too much of a temptation to many journals in Canada. It was fortunate that Sir Wilfrid Laurier had been able to come to the West and emphasize to the people of the three provinces, by his addresses at Winnipeg, Regina and Calgary, what his real position was and that he would be able to present it to the electors of British Columbia at the four meetings to be held in Vancouver on Friday.

Soldier Candidates.

Mr. Dewart asked the pertinent question why there were so many soldier candidates running and now endorsed by Sir Robert Borden. Colonel Cecil Williams has undertaken to say all who opposed the so-called Union Government as traitors. Mr. Dewart contended that the characters of the candidates endorsed by Sir Wilfrid Laurier and who were running as

WORLD IS DRIFTING INTO ONE OF WORST FAMINES IN HISTORY

Mr. R. R. Hall's Solemn Warning--Millions of Acres in the Northwest Could Be Made to Produce Grain if Government Inaugurated Business-like Policy--Borden's Neglect a Crime Against Humanity.

Mr. R. R. Hall addressed a representative meeting of the electors at Temperance H[illegible], 4th Line, Smith, last evening.

Mr. Hall said that this was the last meeting that he was holding in the country.

Mr. Hall laid special emphasis upon the fact that 45 million men had been withdrawn from production. They have become the destroyers of property and have become a vast army of consumers. The result has been that there is a great shortage in food production and that the world is rapidly drifting into what may prove to be one of the greatest famines that was ever known in the history of mankind.

Already this famine is upon the people of Belgium, who are dying of starvation.

Already this famine is upon the people of Italy, which is straining the resources of Great Britain and the United States to avoid.

Already this famine is rapidly coming to France, whose production has fallen down, and that notwithstanding the fact that the women of France have actually been performing the work of the beasts of burden.

"Such being the situation," said Mr. Hall, "I ask you, why has not Sir Robert Borden long ago inaugurated a policy of increased food production by the use of gasoline tractors, ploughs, discs, harrows, seeders, and reapers? Millions of acres of land in the North-West could be made during this coming year to produce grain which now only produces grass.

The Government should long ago have placed an order for these agricultural implements, and the whole nation should be organized to produce food in the great plains of the North-West on a most extensive scale, and the American army could be used to help harvest this most bountiful crop.

The criminal policy and neglect of Sir Robert Borden is beyond belief, committing the greatest crime against humanity that this world has ever known, because the Dominion of Canada has the lands that can be utilized by the people of this continent to prevent Great Britain and [illegible] subjection.

Laughed Like Monomaniac.

"Sir Robert Borden has been warned," said Mr. Hall. "He acts? Why laughed like a monomaniac before 3,000 people in Peterborough because I advocated a policy to produce cereals, meats, and fats upon an extensive scale."

Is it necessary for Sir Robert Borden and his servile followers to actually see famine and disaster before they will make one single effort to avert it.

"I therefore appeal," said Mr. Hall, "to the sober-minded electors of this riding, regardless of political parties, to vote against a short-sighted, unbelieving Prime Minister, and to vote against a 'do-nothing, speechless candidate.'"

What we want in this country is immediate action to avert the famine and disaster and ruin that will overtake us before the close of next year.

Truth Is Concealed.

The real truth regarding the desperate situation of Great Britain France, and Italy is being concealed by Sir Robert Borden and his Government, but the force of truth and of want will be brought home to the common people of this country, notwithstanding the wilful concealment of public news by a Government that is completely in the hands of grafters, parasites and profiteers.

Surely the men and women of Peterborough have not become so blinded by passion, prejudice, and interest that they will not believe the truth.

"I say," said Mr. Hall in conclusion, "let Hon. W. J. Hanna, Canadian Food Controller, speak out the truth regarding the world's approaching famine, or else his name will become a byword and reproach to a starving world."

PREPAREDNESS

The Grafton Store, with its doubled floor space, has given the management a chance to largely increase the stock in every department, which means, of course, still greater choice than ever. This is especially noticeable at this Christmas season, in the Men's Furnishing section, where the variety shown in Ties, Neck Scarfs, Gloves, etc., is unusually large and attractive. Men's Jackets, Bath and Lounging Robes are a conspicuous feature, too; that is, much more prominent than before. Altogether, the Grafton Store is indeed the "gift for men" store this year to a greater extent than ever.

Overseas Vote Is Strong For Hall and Laurier

A cablegram received this morning from Liberal Headquarters, indicates the soldier vote overseas among privates in the ranks is going strong for Laurier and Peterborough boys in the Flanders trenches supporting R. R. Hall.

Frank Jones Says:

WHO PAYS THE BILLS?

This election is carried on on the part of the so-called "Union" government regardless of expense; as well might be done when its election expenses are evidently paid out of the public chest. The elaborate posters, flamboyantly conceived and executed, evidently come from the same source as the Victory Loan posters, whose cost was legitimately met by the use of public funds.

This election sets new precedents. The "Union" government, which claims to be non-partizan, goes to the country upon the most iniquitously brazen partizan franchise act capable of being concocted outside of Germany. The Union government determines the franchise in its own interests, designates the candidates it delights to endorse, and, to complete the autocracy of its methods, pays its election expenses out of the public chest, and in every way loads the dice to such an extent that a fair deal, an honest expression of public opinion is morally impossible.

If the assumption, irresistibly suggested, that the Union government is paying its election expenses out of the public treasury is not justified, then we are thrown upon the alternative that they are contributed by the "big interests," the profiteers and plunderers whom the Union government, when its name was Borden, assisted to exploit the public resources to their own enrichment; so after all the assumption is justified that the Union government is having its campaign financed by the money of the people.

Sir Robert Borden's way of "making Quebec fight," consists in escaping 97 per cent. of the men called to report for service.

FOOLING THE FARMERS.

Mr. Burnham, the Borden-Union candidate, writes a letter to the papers with a misleading effect, if not intention. He says that Warden Brown was appointed by the government to "represent the government fully," and that his representations will be taken accordingly in the matter of exemption of farmers.

This is to be taken to mean that the government is anxious to exempt farmers, for one reason, to lessen their hostility, and get the farmers' votes.

As a matter of fact, Mr. Warden Brown has no power whatever to affect the decision of an appeal tribunal; and his "recommendation" will have no more effect than the appeal of any drafted man made by himself.

The arrangement of his appointment is a part of a hullabaloo that is raised by the government and its understrappers to attempt to show the spurious interest of the government in conscription.

It is vitally important to conscript men and to get them into the ranks at once; but that is subordinate to getting farmers' votes—for election day. After that the business will be on exactly the same basis as it is now—the appeal tribunals will decide as to exemption; and there is no power or authority that can affect their decision.

It does not depend on Mr. Warden Brown, or Mr. Burnham, or anybody else, whether exemption appeals are sustained or dismissed.

Any assurance or intimation to the contrary is merely a vulgar, ordinary electioneering trick.

Canada needs to be saved from the Huns as well as from profiteering politicians seeking popular endorsement under false pretences.

PLAYING WITH THE MEN AT THE FRONT.

The Globe asks:

"Isn't the man at the front more worthy of your support than the 'slacker' who lets the tired-out heroes of the first division hold the place in the line that should be his?"

This is buncombe—of a piece with the hysterical illogical appeal to passion The Globe and Unionists are making.

Who but the Union government is withholding help from the "tired-out heroes at the front" Last May, Sir Robert Borden declared for instant conscription as the only means of raising at once for the front greatly needed reinforcements. Yet he took his time—three months dawdling over the Military Service Act in Parliament; and now, eight months have passed, and not a single soldier called to the colours under the Military Service Act.

And it will be more months before a single conscripted soldier will be in uniform. The Borden-Union government is prostituting the Military Service Act—ignoring the need for instant help of the "tired-out heroes"—to the miserable expedient of using it to gain votes.

The farmers showed hostility to conscription and to placate them the delaying dodge of trying to get wholesale exemptions for them is tried. In its first zeal to get soldiers at once to the front, the government set Dec. 10th as the day of calling conscripts to the colours then the time was advanced to Dec. 24th, and again postponed till the next year.

Why this trifling? Just to win votes to help send back the Borden government to power.

The "Union" government feels that a strict enforcement of conscription—prompt action—will lose them votes. They let the "tired-out heroes" wait for reinforcements, so that a batch of boodling politicians, may, under the disguise of union government, under the discredited plea and plan of sending immediate reinforcements forward, get back to office.

The most violent asseveration; the most specious pleading, will not shake the belief of people who reason, in the fact that the new "Union" government is only the Borden government under a new label—a flagrant abuse of the "union label", to put the badge of honest labour upon an opportunist outfit like the so-called union government.

Sir George Foster is trying to make himself and the people believe that the "Union" government is not the old government. Sir George is the gentleman who sent a telegram of congratulation to the first Bourassa Nationalist elected to "kill Laurier."

"UNION" INTEREST IN LABOUR.

If the "Union" government is sincere and honest in its profession to make winning the war the first consideration, it would consult the interests of the interest that is most vitally concerned, most effective, in winning the war.

Whether in the munitions shop, in the wide field of toil, or in the fighting ranks, labour has been the backbone of the contest. Seven-eighths of the Canadian soldiers in the fighting lines, who have done their work so well, are from the ranks of labour.

The war-winning help they have given, the work they have done, are worthy of "a fair day's wage for a fair day's work"—for no one pretends that $1.10 a day is enough.

The larger reward, the adequate and deserved pay—recognition of the importance and the rights of labour, and of its importance in the national economy, is due to Labour.

But do we find the Borden government, even under the spurious title of the "Union" government, doing anything in this direction?

Labour has been hoodwinked and betrayed by the Borden government—fed with unredeemed promises; its interests neglected by departmental inefficiency and perfunctory administration.

Now the Borden government, posing as a "Union" government, is playing the same role.

In forming his "Union" government, Sir Robert Borden considered every interest but that of Labour. Grit politicians were recognized, and made members of his cabinet. He of course kept the trustees of the "big interests"—Sir Thomas White and Sir Edwin Kemp. He even had the Bourassa Nationalists represented in the person of Hon. Albert Sevegney, the gentleman who "stole the spoons" at the time of the Parliament Buildings fire.

But never a real representative of Labour—that was done by promises, and Sir Robert is feeding Labour on promises yet. If Labour will be good and help Borden back to power, he says that he will, after the election, put a strong repersentative of Labour in the government.

Any promises to "jolly" the Labour vote along till after the elections. This promise is a companion pledge to the absurd promises to exempt farmers' sons, something which, if it could be done, can't be done till after the elections—till after the farmers' vote is secured.

By the way, this delicate consideration of the farmer is in itself a "slap" at Labour. If the "Union" government gets 100,000 men by conscription—if it exempts all men in the country districts, it must draw more heavily with its conscription drag upon the Labour elements of our villages, towns and cities.

That's the way it works out—exemption for the farmer, which, if carried out, would throw the burden of filling the ranks by conscription on the shoulders of Labour.

That is not all. The Borden government's interest in labour, and its bogus promises, are shown by the fact that the Borden government under the name of "Union" government, while professing to have the soldier and the working man as its first interest, did not permit a single soldier or Labour candidate, nominated as such, to try to secure a seat in Parliament, without bitter opposition. The moneyed interests, the big interests, are permitted to hog the whole thing.

This is proof of the fact that is growing more evident every day—the central aim of the "Union" government is not to get 100,000 soldiers speedily, nor to protect the interess of labour, but to win an election, so that Bordenism, Bourassaism, graft, plundering of the public treasury, and profiteering, may be condoned, and the Borden government helped to another lease of the power it has so outrageously abused and prostituted to the scheme of making the rich richer.

If the "Union" government is trifling with the conscription issue upon which it is appealing before election, what will be its attitude when it has helped the Borden government back to power?

SIR WILFRID'S WESTERN TOUR PROVES TRIUMPHAL SUCCESS

straight Liberal candidates was a sufficient answer to any such charge, if answer were needed. In the Province of Ontario, one of the candidates endorsed by Sir Wilfrid Laurier was Captain Lovelace of Lincoln, who had been at the front and was still there. Mr. Dewart gave a list of Liberal candidates endorsed by Sir Wilfrid and who had accepted his endorsation. Sergeant Dudley, candidate in Northumberland County, was a returned soldier from the front, with a son still in the trenches. Mr. A. J. Young, candidate in North Toronto, had three sons at the front. Mr. J. G. Ramsden in Centre Toronto, had his only son of military age at the front. He went as a private and was now a major. Mr. Gregory, candidate at Halton, had one son overseas. Mr. Thomas, candidate in Muskoka, had one son on the way. Major Honeywell, candidate in Carleton, was a returned soldier. In the Province of Quebec, Hon. R. Lemieux had his only son at the front. Hon. Dr. Beland had been for three years a prisoner in Germany. Mr. Gauvreau, of Temiscouata, had two sons in the navy, one of whom was second in command of a warship in the North Sea. Mr. J. E. Marcil, in Bagot, had two sons at the front. Mr. F. McRae, candidate in Sherbrooke, had one son at the front. Mr. William Power, ex-M.P. for Quebec South, had sent three sons to the front, one of whom had returned with the Military Cross, and was now Liberal candidate in the same constituency. In Nova Scotia, Mr. W. F. Carroll, candidate for Cape Breton, was in the trenches as a private. Are these men to called traitors? asked Mr. Dewart. He defied the Bordenites, who were so free in making use of the words traitor and disloyalty, to produce any such list among the candidates endorsed by Sir Robert Borden. "Take the case of Captain Lovelace, still at the war," he said. "Who has Sir Robert endorsed in the County of Lincoln? He has endorsed Mr. Chapin, a millionaire munition manufacturer, who was making profits at home while Captain Lovelace was fighting at the front."

Dr. Chown's statement.

Mr. Dewart referred to the recent statement of Rev. Dr. Chown, general superintendent of the Methodist church, which appeared amongst paid advertisements by the Unionist publicity committee, and to the Methodist encyclical which it appeared had been ordered by a committee of the Methodist church to be read from the pulpit in all the Methodist churches. The Christian Guardian, too, the organ of the Methodist church, was undertaking to dictate to the members of the Methodist denomination as to their duty to vote for the Unionist government. Mr. Dewart deprecated the conduct of those ministers in allowing themselves to be made the tools of the Unionist party. The responsible heads of the Methodist church had fallen considerably from the time his father, Rev. Dr. Dewart, was at the head of the Christian Guardian. "Render to Caesar the things that are Caesar's, to God the things that are God's" was still good Protestant doctrine, declared Mr. Dewart.

The Religious Element.

He regretted exceedingly that the religious element was being introduced into this contest when Sir Wilfrid Laurier had stemmed the tide of religious feeling and sentiment in the past, and could be relied upon to stand by the eternal principles of justice rather than to adopt the easier path of expediency. It was difficult to understand how this influence had been brought to bear upon the Methodist officials who were intruding into this campaign. He was aware that both Hon. Mr. Rowell and Sir Joseph Flavelle had great influence in the counsels of the Methodist church, but they should not be allowed to use it for their own purposes. Mr. Dewart drew an interesting parallel between Sir Robert Borden, who accepted Com. Paul Kruger as a model for franchise legislation and Sir Wilfrid Laurier who had been the exemplar for Louis Botha, the Premier of South Africa. Sir Wilfrid's strong imperialism had been a dominant factor in moulding the career of Botha, who had won a kingdom from the grasp of the Hun in South Africa. Sir Wilfrid Laurier was a good enough imperialist for Louis Botha, and Mr. Dewart preferred to stand for Laurier and Botha rather than for Borden and Kruger.

Hon. W. G. Mitchell.

CALGARY, Alta., Dec. 13.—Speaking here last night with Sir Wilfrid Laurier Hon. Walter G. Mitchell, provincial treasurer of Quebec, in a convincing speech which made him many friends, drew attention to the eleventh hour changes made in the conscription law by the government. He contended that the government, notwithstanding their claims that the all important consideraion was the raising of reinforcements for overseas were granting exemption to certain classes on the eve of the election in in order to better their chances to win the election. In the four prairie provinces Mr. Mitchell said the government were naming men to prepare a list of grain growers and farmers who had already been refused exemption by the tribunals, and in order to obtain their support in the election they were promising them that the decisions of the tribunals would be over-ruled and that they would be exempted.

Playing Football With Act.

"The matter of obtaining reinforcements for the front is too sacred to be played football with," declared Mr Mitchell. "The government are pretending in Ontario and the west that they are going to conscript the men of Quebec, and in Quebec they were making exemptions everywhere. Now a few days before polling day, men who had already been classed for overseas service by the tribunals, were told by the government that they times in order to get votes, and if Sir Robert Borden is determined to get his 100,000 men by conscription now that he is extending the exemption to so many classes of the population, will be shortly compelled to resort to the conscription of married men, first those without children and later those with children.

Without Favouritism.

"If we are to have conscription," continued Mr. Mitchell, "it should be conscription without favouritism to any class or any body, and the farmers throughout Canada should have been exempted under the law as a right and not as a favour on the eve of the election."

Mr. Mitchell considered that the best way to increase agricultural production was to adopt the policy mentioned in Sir Wilfrid Laurier's manifesto, namely to take the duties off agricultural implements, thus enabling the farmer to purchase more machinery at less cost. Sir Wilfrid promised to take off the 7 1-2 per cent. general duty and the 5 per cent. duty on goods imported into Canada from Great Britain was a means of materially assisting Great Britain at this critical period. Mr. Mitchell dealt with the war times elections act and scored the war profiteering and the C. N.R. deal. He also dealt at length with the attacks made upon the province of Quebec, and it was quite evident from the spontaneous applause that the true story of the Borden-Nationalist alliance was going home among the people of the west.

A Big Treat For Lovers of Musical Comedy

"So Long Letty," the musical comedy which comes to "The Grand" on Tuesday next, Dec. 18, is offered by Oliver Morosco, one of the most active theatrical producers in the country, which should be sufficient guarantee of the general excellence of the production. Mr. Morosco has given the stage some of its best plays of recent years, notably "The Bird of Paradise," "Peg O' My Heart," "The Cinderella Man," "The Unashamed Woman," Galsworthy's "The Fugitive," and many others. He has produced but three musical plays, "So Long Letty," which is to be shown here, and "Canary Cottage" and "What Next," both of which have been equally successful. The book for "So Long Letty," and there is considerable plot for a musical piece—is based on a farce, "His Neighbour's Wife," which was written by Elmer Harris, who collaborated with Mr. Morosco in making the musical version. The lyrics and music were provided by Earl Carroll. These are same men responsible for the other musical comedies. Mr. Morosco has assembled another of his typical Morosco casts," and the chorus was brought east from California especially for this production.

Tragedy Of A Boot Lace To End In Death Of Jap

In the dry-as-dust records of the Justice Department, it is already known as the "Tragedy of a Boot Lace"; and, in all the history of Canadian criminology, there perhaps never was a case with so many strange features or such a story of detective work. It opened with the advent of Rokuichi Yoshioka, a Jap, and his wife in the Yukon to start a fox farm near Dawson. It closed today with the confirmation of death sentence passed on the Jap for the murder of his wife.

Yoshioka was in partnership with an Indian named Percy James. One day in the summer it was announced that the Indian and the Jap's wife were missing. A little later the Jap came along with the story that he had found the body of his wife in the bush. She had been shot dead by a shotgun. The inference was, according to the story told by Yoshioka, that the Indian had killed the wife, and then made his escape.

Search was made high and low for the Indian. The Mounted Police searched the ground, but found nothing. The search was about to be given up when a retired officer of the Mounted Police, living in Dawson, determined to join in the chase on his own account. On his hands and knees he made a thorough search of the locality. At several points he found the moss pressed flat as though a weight had been dragged over it. He followed the slight trail and found that it led to a depression near the river. Moss was growing there and over it a tree was planted. Suspicious, the officer examined the ground closely. He thought the moss had been there but a short time. He was convinced that the tree had been but recently planted.

He notified his old colleagues in the force. Together they dug out the tree. Underneath they found the Indian's body. He had been shot with the same shotgun and the bodies of four of his dogs. Three of the dogs had been shot with a revolver. The fourth had been killed by a blow over the head.

SHOES WITHOUT LACES.

It was noted, too, that the Indian's Endicott shoes were without their laces; and it was from here that the first trail led back to the Jap. The vendor of the boots was found. He asserted that the boots were of a peculiar type, that the laces were supplied only with the boots, that only one pair had been sold within a recent date—the pair bought by the Indian. In the Jap's house were found a pair of laces corresponding. There also was found a cane in which a revolver was concealed. Three shots had been fired from the revolver. At the fourth, the revolver jammed. A post-mortem of the dogs showed that the three killed by revolver shots had died from the bullets corresponding with the empty cartridges.

PROTESTED INNOCENCE.

The Jap protested his innocence. In his trial, he insisted on giving evidence for his own defence. For a day and a half—a thing so far as is known here, unparalleled in Canadian criminal courts—he gave evidence, and spoke in his defence.

The sentence of the Court was carried out a few days ago.

The Saddest Place In Halifax

Former School Has Been Turned Into a Morgue

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

HALIFAX, N.S., Dec. 14.—Not many hundred yards from the Arena skating rink, where the victims of the Titanic were laid for identification before burial, stands Chebucto Public School, battered and broken, strewn with broken glass and splinters of wood. The cold winds whistling through it, and white snow carpeting its floors it is to-day the saddest place in Halifax, for it, too, has become a mortuary, a clearing house for the dead In the very basement where the children played only a week ago, these still forms lie, ranged row after row, ticketed and numbered in perfect order. On one side are the women, some with their babes beside them. Among them still unclaimed, lies one of dark brown hair and beautiful face, the peacefulest and most beautiful face among them all. On another side and down the middle of the room are the men, young and old, grey haired and fair haired, some with peaceful faces, too, and some with the marks of the last terrible agony still upon them. But in all that place of death is nothing comparable in its heart-wringing sadness with the view of the little children. Mostly by themselves they lie, round armed and chubby cheeked, their tresses cold and clotted on their foreheads, sweet, broken flowers of mortality culled from a wilderness of death. As long as there is compassion in the world, or love in the heart of man, this memory will remain, the memory of those faces, those childish faces—the faces of the children who have gone a little way ahead into the mystery world.

Court Lenient On Three Men Liable To Fine of $200 Each

The elasticity of the Temperance Act was exhibited in police court this morning when a charge against three young men of having liquor in their rooms at the American Hotel, a place other than their home, was amended to cover their purchase of liquor from a person in this province who was not licensed to sell it. Joseph and John Delouchry and Miles Burke, Newfoundlanders, employed as steamfitters at the Quaker Oats plant, were prevented by the weather from working on Wednesday. In the meantime Military Tribunal 276, composed of Mr. J. A. Aylmer and Mr. W. H. Moore, resumed its deliberations upon three adjourend cases. One of them was Miles Burke, whose application the Board had all but decided to disallow. Mayor Duffus suggested that a policeman be sent out to bring in Burke, and thus obviate the searching ing and investigations the headquarters officials would have to make.

Accordingly, P. C. Wigg was sent to the American Hotel and discovered the Delouchry brothers in bed. They were sober, the policeman stated, but there was a little whiskey in a bottle which he was invited to sample. Wigg declined, and he naively testified that there were no glasses there and apparently the men had drunk directly from the bottle. Incidentally Burke's exemption claim was disallowed.

Detective Newhall swore that Burke had told him he had bought two bottles of whiskey at $2.50 each from a stranger at the G.T.R. station. The trio regarded their room at the American hotel as their home while in Peterborough.

Mr. V. J. McElderry, solicitor for the defendants, urged Magistrate Dumble to exercise leniency in dealing with the men. They could not pay the fine of $200 each to which they were liable under the original charge, and if they were sent to jail for three months the Leonard Construction Co. would lose their services.

The Magistrate, Chief Thompson and Mr. McElderry delved into the Temperance Act, and finally brought forth the charge of purchasing liquor in the province from an unlicensed person. The men pleaded guilty and their aggregate fines will total an even hundred dollars.

DEATH.

GILBERT.—On Thursday, December 13th, 1917, at the residence of her brother-in-law, Sheriff Hall, 13 Fleming Place, Peterborough, Madeline Gilbert, daughter of the late Patrick Gilbert, of Georgetown, Demerara. Funeral private.

Gold dissolved in a woman's tears is said to make an excellent cement for mending a broken heart.

Telegraphic Communication Is Checked

Canadian Press Despatch:

MONTREAL, Dec. 14.—Telegraphic communication with Halifax has again been interrupted as the result of a heavy fall of snow. Only two wires are reported as workable to-day, one by each of two companies operating in the territory, and these only at rare intervals. The only news that has come out of Halifax to-day is, that owing to severity of the storm, the Boston relief steamer Galvin Austin, has postponed her sailing until to-morrow.

AN OVERCOAT SENSATION

The Globe Tailoring Co. Provides a Genuine Holiday Surprise For Men--A Ten Dollar Saving While They Last

"Why pay $10 extra for nothing?" is what this announcement of the Globe Tailoring Co. means. Hundreds of men in Peterborough are still without a new winter overcoat. They don't need to wait any longer. The winter days are here in good old Canadian fashion, and Christmas will be here in another ten days. You must either buy a new winter overcoat soon or shiver. We have had the weather man's first winter warning this week and the cold wave has left a good lesson to be well protected. A good overcoat does that, and the Globe Tailoring Coy's offer affords the opportunity to save $10, which may easily be saved for some other purpose.

The most important thing of all is the value that men will get for the price. There are two lots of these smart, ready-to-wear overcoats.

Lot No. 1 consists of Black Melton Chesterfield Overcoats, with silk velvet collars, the regular value being $25. These are offered at the substantial cut price of $18. Take your choice at this figure.

Lot No. 2 consists of Storm Coats, in tweed, chinchillas, in grey, brown, fawn and black, all sizes, and the regular values run up to $25. These have been cut in price to range from $12, $14, $16 and $18. No extra charge will be made for alterations that may be necessary. No trouble in finding your size and style. The overcoats are tailored with the care that insures profit and long wear. They have the snap and stamp of smartness, and the warmth, without weight. Of course the prices are really the "lowest in the city."

Mr. J. L. Wyatt and Mr. E. Paquett have taken over the Globe Tailoring Coy's business in this city, in order that Mr. Louis Greene may be able to devote his attention to his Toronto business.

WILL MEET ON TUESDAY NEXT

Warden M. Brown and Mr. R. Knox will meet again on Tuesday at nine o'clock in the morning to hear cases in connection with the Military Service Act.

The farmers' tribunal, as it is called in political circles, will not meet to-morrow or on Tuesday.

PROMOTED TO LIEUTENANT

Word has been received in the city that Sergt.-Major Harold Knapman, of Peterborough, who went overseas with the 33rd Battery, has been promoted to Lieutenant, and is now in England taking the necessary qualifying course. He went to France as a sergeant, and was made a sergeant-major a year ago.

LEWISOHN ESTATE GOES TO WIDOW, ONCE EDNA MAY.

NEW YORK, Dec. 14.—Oscar Lewisohn, banker and owner of thoroughbred racing horses, who died in Mount Sinai Hospital on December 3, following an operation, left to his widow, who was Miss Edna May, the actress, a life income of his estate, valued at $6,000,000, in his will, which has been filed for probate. The one-time musical comedy favourite, who won the plaudits of theatregoers in "The Belle of New York" and other productions before her marriage to Mr. Lewisohn, on June 4, 1907, also received a specific bequest of $125,000.

OBITUARY

HENRY TRUESDALE.

The funeral of the late Henry Truesdale, who died yesterday at his residence, 177 Edinburgh street, took place to-day from the family residence. Service was conducted at the house at 2 o'clock by Rev. Mr. Doner. Interment at the Little Lake cemetery.

MADELINE GILBERT.

Madeline, daughter of the late Patrick Gilbert, died this morning at the residence of her brother-in-law, Sheriff Hall, after an illness of some weeks' duration. She was born in Georgetown, Demerara, and had resided practically all her life in the city.

The funeral will take place to-morrow afternoon to the Little Lake cemetery from Sheriff Hall's residence, Flemming Place. (Private.)

ROBERT J. MENZIES.

Word reached town this morning of the death of Mr. R. J. ("Bob") Menzies, which occurred at Detroit, Mich., on Tuesday afternoon, after a short illness. It appears that the deceased had been in the hospital for a few days and underwent a critical operation.

Lindsay friends of the late Mr. Menzies—and they are legion—will deeply regret to hear the news of his demise. He was quite popular with all he knew him. For years he was identified with baseball clubs in Lindsay, especially during the years when the famous Lindsay Red Birds won the Midland League. He was also an enthusiastic follower of hockey in Lindsay, and a curler of no mean ability. His genial disposition at the curling rink gained for him a host of staunch friends. He was also for a time manager of the Lindsay Opera House, and for years was a member of the staff of Dundas & Flavelles, Limited. In religion he was a member of the Presbyterian Church.

The late Mr. Menzies is survived by three sons—Bert, of Sudbury; Perry, of Detroit; and Harry, in the service of the Empire, being stationed at present with the Militia at London, Ont. The eldest son, Norman, enlisted out west, and paid the supreme sacrifice on the field of Flanders over a year ago.

The funeral will be held here.

The deceased was a brother of Mr. William Menzies, of Peterborough.—Lindsay Warder.

NEW YORK TIMES IS OUT STRONG FOR UNION

"Curious Way to Help Win the War," It Says of Laurier

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—The New York Times to-day gives prominence to an editorial on the Canadian election in which it says: "The result of the Canadan elections will be awaited with anxious interest by the Allies, by none of them more anxiously than by the United States."

After explaining how Sir Wilfrid Laurier and "a rump of Liberal leaders" refused to extend the life of Parliament and refused to come into Union Government, the Times goes on: "Sir Wilfrid would not coalesc when unity and the winning of the war have brought together patriotic Canadians, not as Grits and Tories, but as freemen fighting for the freedom of Canada and the rest of the free world. Sir Wilfrid is, we hope, half-heartedly, dabbling in Provincial politics and seeking office.

"Certain classes of the Dominion were obviously shunning their part of that duty (enlisting). Americans who have become hearty believers in conscription, believe it is in Canada as well.

"Behind much of the clamor made by the Canadian anti-conscriptionists are the same forces that we know too well in the United States, alien propaganda, foreign influence, a campaign of sedition. In Canada, as here, there is the prattle about the conscription of wealth. Wealth is conscripted. The conscription of men must be universal, too. 'We all want to win the war,' Sir Wilfrid says. It is a curious way to help the winnig of it by opposing or delaying the reinforcement of the Allies."

After telling the kind of sophistry that is being given out in some quarters to the effect that now that the United States is in the war, Canada need not exert herself, the Times concludes:

"Canada has just had a Victory Loan. Monday every American and Canadian patriot hopes she will hold a victory election."—Women's Union Government League.

Old People Were Entertained At The Home

A very enjoyable social evening was held on Wednesday night at the Protestant Home, when the members of the Ladies' Adult Bible Class, (Mr. F. E. Kerr, B.A., teacher), of St. Andrew's Church, entertained the old folks. Mrs. McNeely, President of the Class, presided, and in a few words, spoke of the pleasure it gave the members to be present, and enjoy a social hour with them. From the many expressions of thanks it was quite evident that the old people thoroughly enjoyed the following programme:

Piano solo—Mr. H. C. Treneer.
Reading—Miss Stringer.
Vocal solo—Miss Jessie Stevens.
Reading—Mr. F. E. Kerr.
Vocal solo—Mr. H. C. Treneer.
Recitation—Miss Barrie.
Solo—Mr. H. C. Treneer.

Dainty refreshments were then served by the members of the social committee, after which all joined heartily in singing God Save the King.

Our stock of Sheet Music, both popular and standard, is most complete. A few copies are very acceptable as a Xmas gift. The J. M. Greene Music Co., Charlotte St.

CLUB ROOM FUNDS FOR THE WAR VETERANS

Subscriptions for the club room fund of the Great War Veterans' Association continue to come in although the committee will not commence its canvass until next week. $2,000 is the sum required to instal the Veterans in their new quarters and a ready response is expected from the public. The people of Peterborough know just what the Veterans have suffered overseas—they also realize the splendid work they are carrying on here at home. On the latter work alone they are entitled to the generous support of the public. Peterborough owes a deep debt of gratitude to her sons who enlisted and went overseas to fight in the cause of democracy. Nothing that we can do will be too good for the boys who offered themselves when the Empire called them. Other cities have provided magnificent quarters for their War Veterans. Surely Peterborough with her splendid enlistment record will not fail to support her soldier sons. $2,000 is a small sum to ask from a city of this size. Let us give the Veterans a suitable Christmas gift in the form of new headquarters.

The following subscriptions are gratefully acknowledged:

J. J. Turner	$25.00
O. A. Gillespie	25.00
Mrs. J. Sanderson	5.00
E. A. Peck	25.00
R. J. Devey	10.00

A Last Word To The Electors

It is unnecessary to appeal to the patriotism of Canadians. All loyal citizens of the British Empire are devoted to its preservation. "God Save the King" means much to all true Canadian hearts. The governments of all the allies have made mistakes. The criticism has been severe. But they are doing their best. Whether we vote for the Union Government or for Sir Wilfrid Laurier, for the Province that failed in men, in money and in the Red Cross and Patriotic work or for that part of Canada that has strained every energy to provide for the men at the Front, let us go to the polls, not with party prejudice and political party rivalry, or hope of patronage in our hearts but with the warm flow of the red life-blood of the nation. Let us vote as men and women and not as party slaves. We have had to endure much at home—but think of the lads at the Front. They are brave. Are we not brave too? Let us show ourselves worthy of them as I am sure we shall, and I will do my level best, if elected, to prove worthy to represent you and to justify your confidence. Believe me, ladies and gentlemen.

Yours sincerely,

J. H. BURNHAM.

Voice of The People

Correspondence under this heading containing or involving attacks on individuals, or violent or extreme statements, even to secure insertion, be signed with which view assumes the responsibility.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—I was glad to see "A Soldier's Wife" letter, as I do think we should have had our promised raise. Surely five dollars will be small enough compared to all other raised salaries. It will not cover the extra cost of living, as it is, and I am sure all soldiers' wives had counted on it for a little extra for their families. I know I did.

Well we all hope that after the 17th things will look brighter for us all, as up to now we do not seem the most favoured of the people. I am sure our boys are worth more than the pay they, or we, are getting for the terrible hardships they have to contend with.

Yours truly,
ONE MORE SOLDIER'S WIFE.

To the Editor, Examiner:

Dear Sir,—In the United States there is an organization known as the Scripture Gift Mission, which has distributed about 20,000,000 New Testaments and Gospel portions among the soldiers of the various armies in Europe. The Mission has just issued a preliminary edition of 27,000 for the American soldiers.

President Wilson consented to write a message, which is printed on the fly leaf of these Testaments. It runs as follows:

"The Bible is the word of life. I beg that you will read it and find this out for yourselves — read not little snatches here and there, but long passages that will really be the road to the heart of it.

"You will not only find it full of real men and women, but also of things you have wondered about and been troubled about all your life, as men have been always; and the more you read the more it will become plain to you what things are worth while and what are not.

"What things make men happy? Loyalty, right dealings, speaking the truth, readiness to give everything for what they think their duty, and, most of all, the wish that they may have the real approval of the Christ, Who gave everything for them, and the things that are guaranteed to make men unhappy, selfishness, cowardice, greed, and everything that is low and mean.

"When you have the Bible you will know that it is the Word of God, because you will have found it to be the key to your own heart, your own happiness and your own duty."

A short time ago my partner and I were stopping some time in a waiting-room in Lindsay, and we found a Bible with this in the front: This Holy Book whose words portray, Who is the Life, the Truth, the Way, Is placed here by the Gideons, The Christian Commercial Travellers' Association of Canada, 408 Confederation Life Building of Toronto, Canada. Telephone Adelaide 337, Judges 7.

A Bible in each bedroom of every hotel. The object of our association is to unite the travellers of the Dominion in Christian fellowship and service. To encourage one another in the Master's work. To improve every opportunity for the betterment of the lives of our fellow-travellers, business men and all with whom we come in contact.

Blessed truth, accept it. John 3, 16. For God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life.

Good news if in trouble, read Psalm 34. If trade is poor, read Psalm 37. If very prosperous, read 1st Corinthians, 10 to 12. If overcome and backsliding, read James 1 and Hosea 14, 14. If tired of sin, read Psalm 51 and Luke 18, 9 to 14. If you desire something new, read John 3 and Rev. 21, 22. If you desire peace, power and plenty, read John 14. If you are lonesome and restless, read Psalm 23, 27. If you are loosing confidence in men, read 1st Corinthians, 13. Where you can find the Lord's prayer, Matthew 6, 9, and John, 17. The final judgment, Revelations, 20. The Prodigal Son, Luke, 15. The Sermon on the Mount, Matthew, 5, 6, and 7. The promise of the resurrection, 1st Corinthians, 15, 35 to 58. The Ten Commandments, Exodus 20, 3 to 17. The three greatest masterpieces of oration, Deuteronomy 32, Isaiah 40, Acts 17, 22 to 31. A prayer, Jesus take this heart of mine, make it pure and wholly thine. Thou hast bled and died for me, I will henceforth live for thee; God help me for Thy Name's sake, Amen.

To read the Bible through in one year, read 3 chapters each week-day and five on Sundays. A blessed experience. Try it. Reader, if you or I take the left hand by and bye, we have to fight down good influences from both God and man.

J. H. Taylor.

To the Editof of the Examiner:

Dear Sir, — Mrs. Arthur Von Koughnet was chairman of a political meeting on Wednesday night in Toronto, which broke up in a riot, and was supporting the Conservative candidate, Foster, against the returned soldier, Major Cockburn, who is running against him. This shows how much interest this lady has in this campaign when she is trying to beat the soldier representative in the election who would protect the War Veterans against the Flavelles, Allisons, Ames-Holden Boot & Shoe Co. and the Ballantyne Paint Trust. This lady is to speak to-night in Peterborough, so it is well we should know who she is. Last night's Toronto Star says she called the police force to put a soldier out of the meeting, because he desired to ask some questions.

Mrs. G. S. S. Lindsay, who is to speak to-night, is the wife of a corporation lawyer, in Toronto, who tried to work the International Nickel Company, which has more German names among its shareholders than the Potsdam Directory has, for a commission if he could work through a sale of nickel to the Russian Government. The Mail and Empire some months ago published a letter this man, Lindsay, wrote to the International Nickel Company, at New York, to see if he could not get out a contract. It is reported to-day that Mr. Flavelle, of Lindsay, a brother of Sir Joseph Flavelle, the eighty per cent. profiteers, will speak for Mr. Burnham on Saturday. This must be where the money is coming from to run Mr. Burnham's election. If Mr. Burnham sticks close enough to the Flavelles he will probably land in the Senate.—Yours truly,

War Veteran Without a Job or Without a Pension.

The supplies will be stored here until required. Donations of money will be accepted.

ONE DAY WILL DO IT

People who have been suffering from backache, kidney trouble, rheumatic ailments, are sometimes under the impression that they will have to continue to suffer from these ailments and they will be unable to obtain relief. Headache, nervousness, soreness in the bones and limbs are frequently caused by poisonous gases being absorbed into the system and the kidneys are overtaxed in their effort to expel these gases. Dr. Banta's Kidney and Rheumatic Pills will prevent the formation of these poisonous gases, and a positive cure for kidney troubles, rheumatic ailments or any disease arising from a disordered condition of the kidneys. The manufacturers are so confident that these pills will do what we claim for them that your dealer is authorized to refund your money if they do not give you satisfaction. Will you try them and be convinced? They are sold by one reliable dealer in each county. Sold in Peterborough at Lynch's Drug Store. Price 50c. Mail orders attended to promptly.

THE PICTURE

A little olive skinned baby, just wakened up, its eyes still full of the dreams we have, alas, forgotten, the baby in its mother's arms, safe and willing to be put by for another dream; the mother so patiently proud, looking straight at us, certain of our love and honour, her lips just closed upon the warning "Hush."

For some of us it is the perfect picture. For many it is the Mother of Jesus and her Son. For all of us, it is the young mother and her first-born, the treasury of he- - and memories.

And when the people of Italy, who guard in their ancient cities so many treasures, cast in their lot with the allies against oppression, distinction, and intrigue, we, who know so little of Italy, knew this: that she had not cast at random in so hazardous a case. We said to ourselves. "For the sake of the little one and its mother has she cast in her lot with us." To some extent we were to blame, for not knowing more closely the people who were chief guardians of the treasury of motherhood—but not altogether so. For all the while we felt that we knew Italy of old, we others. "Italy," we used to say to the enquirer, "Italy is a land of generous-hearted folk, of men who realize the beautiful things of God and are quick to fight for them, watchful against injustice. It is a land of fond and spirited women with an age-long tradition of motherhood, passionate in its affection. It is a land—a sunny land—where there are many sound-limbed, warm-coloured children, children with dark curls about their heads, and in their eyes romance and rogery and a reckless hardihood. All the world knows them well, as all the world has known them, since first there were children and mothers playing at evening about slopes of the Swan Hills. In Italy was conceived the idea of a family—the Holy Family—and her great painters drew the ment. But the evil imaginings were forded."

So would we answer the enquirer in the old days before the war. And he would have in his mind, as we in ours, the picture of the little child and its mother, the treasury of hopes and memories.

But in these days we did not know—our Lady Italy did not herself know—how the emissaries of oppression, destruction and intrigue were establishing themselves within her borders, and were taking crafty advantage of her generous nature. Doubtless the very men who did those unspeakable things to the children of Belgium, who violated maidens before the eyes of their mothers gagged and bound, doubtless those or their like had patted the little curly heads of the children of the people with whom they lodged and whose liberty and national honour they were the while seeking to corrupt and destroy. Yet, may we believe that many a young mother drew her child — ay, poor soul, and withdrew herself—from the range of the soft, guttural speaker, recalling with her sure instinct of a woman, the old proverb "due vise sotto una beretta." So far a space her child suffered not defilement. But the evil imaginings were there, under the Hamburg hat, and when the hat had become a spiked helmet and had broken its way into Belgium and the fair north of France—then the mother knew that she had been right to avoid the presence of the men with their double-faces and their inhuman hearts. And full of wrath and indignation she sent her husband and her brothers to join the Allies in the great fight against the men that had foresworn their humanity, and had cast their filth upon the fair picture of our Mother and her Child.

And so it was that the fight was very bitter, for the enemy was not only upon the frontier but even within her very gates, cunningly disguised, spreading poisonous thoughts, seeking to corrupt and destroy secretly from within, while her men fought valiantly along her borders, striving with the enemy by land, by sea, by air, with all the genius that liberty and justice give to their upholders. From the seed sown by these agents of Germany an evil harvest has sprung and the men of Italy have been brought to face their country's hour of fate. But not alone, for their allies are with them, and with that birth piece of all civilization that the enemy think to uncivilize, and the women of Italy are their strong suport. The soldiers fighting there on the northern plains may well remember the dreaming eyes of wife and of child and may say, "Let the powers of justice are with us, and if so be we are to die, there will be a strong bulwark of defence for these weak ones."

And so they will turn again to battle and far away from his mother's arms the little child will stretch forth to them his little hands—unmutilated

BOWLING On Water St. Alleys

HIGH ROLLERS WIN TWO FROM PRINTERS

Last night a great battle took place at the Water Street Alleys, when the High Rollers and Printers met in a ten-pin league fixture. The High Rollers won two of the three games. FIRST U.S. SHOT AT AUSTRIA

Rep. Tinkham, of Boston, Pulls the String of Big Gun on the Lower Piave.

Italian Army Headquarters in Northern Italy, Dec. 14.—The first American shot against Austria was fired by Rep. Tinkham, of Boston, on the Lower Piave, when Mr. Tinkham pulled a string firing a large 149-millimeter gun, sending a shell hurtling across the Piave to the Austrian positions at [illegible]. A huge cloud of black smoke marked the place where the shell burst.

What The Germans Are Saying

It is well that the Allies should understand that when phrases like "Peace with reconciliation," and "Disarmament" are rife in Germany, they mean no more than that for the time being, the fortune of war is not smiling on Germany. So it was a few months ago, when on July 19th the German Reichstag, by a large majority, passed the now famous peace resolution. So is it now, when, thanks to the revolution in Russia and the German peace propaganda in Italy, the Germans have been successful in striking two great military blows. Stresemann, a leader of the National Liberals, speaking at Dresden on October 29th "rejoiced that a political situation appeared to have been reached where every obligation of the government to the Peace resolution of July 19th had ceased." The Kolnische Zeitung of October 27th devoted a leading article to German Colonial troops and came to the conclusion that triumphant Germany should extend her system of universal conscription and military training to the whole of Africa. "The experience of this war" said the article in question, "has shown that the East African native, if sufficiently trained and led by Europeans, makes an efficient soldier, while the South-West African is an even better soldier given similar circumstances. In future, to prevent her colonies from being overrun by other peoples, Germany must utilize to the full these sources of man-power. Such of these natives as have hitherto not been subject to Germany must come under her sway, while all foreign colonies which have made war against the German colonies must become German property."

The Fremdenblatt of Oct. 29th declared that "unless all the indications are false, Italy will share the fate of Roumania, Serbia and Russia. Italy must expiate the guilt of her unscrupulous, faithless and rapacious statesmen."

The Norddeusche Allgemeino Zeitung has been publishing a semi-official review of the operations on the West front, written in language that reminds one of the phase of madness in which the patient imagines himself to be Emperor of the world. One phrase may be selected from many. "He who is a good German knows that he is at one with the High Command and their great aim, which will, more over, be attained, victor- on all fronts, on land and sea, or, in the words of old Colonel Kottwitz "In the Brandenburg."

Even the Austrian papers have become infected, and it may be suspected that one of the chief reasons for the huge onslaught on Italy, was not so much to attack Italy as to encourage Austria. "To-day," wrote the Anstrian Fremdenblatt on Oct. 31," after more than three years of a terrible war, Roumania and Serbia are annihilated, Russia is shattered, and Italy is pierced to the heart. The tremendous importance of our alliance with Germany will now be obvious to the dullest mind, and everyone must now recognise that the main pillar of our policy must be the alliance with Germany." The Vienna Extrablatt of the same date maintained that the Central Powers will determine by the sword the course of events." It is their alliance which has reaped the victory, and it is they who will dictate the new order of things for the welfare of those who now resist them."

Count zu Reventhlow, as was to be expected, spreads himself and Germany still more widely as a result of the Italian successes.

Writing in the Deutsche Tageszeitunk of October 31, he said: "We confine ourselves to-day to a general statement of our aims--that, for the future, an active Adriatic policy on the part of Italy shall be made completely impossible and this not by paper guarantees"--(no one knows better than the Germans the value of paper guarantees) "but by real guarantees; that is to say by appropriate territorial changes on the coast of the Adriatic." Germany and Austria-Hungary are to work together as regards the development of their power "in the Mediterranean and the world." "The Mediterranean was the weak side of the old Triple Alliance. The new Quadruple Alliance can, after the overthrow of Italy, give a quite different appearance to the Mediterranean problem. This can be done by creating and securing two central points of power--the Adriatic and Constantinople, with the Straits. Such a political, maritime, and economic position would stand in the closest combination with the position of the German Empire in the North, and if this position remains dominant in the Baltic and on the coast of Flanders, Great Britain's sea tyrany will be set a difficult and probably an insoluble problem."

The Frankfurter Zeitung, usually a rather moderate journal, has also jined in the chorus. On Nov. 3rd it wrote: "The Entente will never be able to subdue fate, and the result of its present attitude and endeavour will be what it need not have been at the outset, namely, defeat." "If the Entente had only been willing to conclude betimes a peace based on understanding it would have been saved the complete overthrow of Roumania, the submarine war, the Russian revolution and now the victory in Italy, which has made the Central European Alliance so strong and close."

We need not multiply quotations. They would only confirm the impression that if Germany were to obtain victory, she would use it first to crush down those of her own people who wish for a peaceful world, and next, to impose a ruthless military domination on every part of the world. But, if she cannot get victory, she is all for peace--peace with reconciliation. Her alternative policies are to punish the whole world is she is successful, to avoid punishment if she is beaten. She is like her own soldiers, who, failing to kill, throw up their hands and cry "Kamerad."

HEARTENING GERMAN ARMY.

Papers Captured in France.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE.— new sort of German propaganda has been discovered through papers taken from a captive German Captain and turned over to American officers. It is being employed among soldiers, and is designed to instruct them in German claims as to the causes of the war and the perils of defeat in order to induce the men to continue enduring hardships.

The memorandum says another purpose is to induce soldiers to subscribe to loans.

The organization works down from General Headquarters through divisions to companies and even platoons. "Reliable" men are chosen from each organization to carry on the propaganda.

Under the heading "Private instructions," are the following:

"Estimate the state of mind of the individual so as to be able to combat it. Make evident that military interests stand first of all. Make the future submarine war stand out. Do not persuade; convince. Strengthen the desire to win and the willingness to bear everything."

Under the heading "Subjects for Lectures," are the following:

'England. Belgian mentality. Why does the war last so long? Reassuring men regarding the redemption market value of loans. Continuance of propaganda during recreative entertainments."

Mr. Gray of Toronto was the guest of Rev. and Mrs. Mackenzie at "The Grove" for the week end.

The Rev. A. W. Mackenzie received word on Friday morning that his son, Cadet Kenneth Mackenzie, had been severely wounded in the face in the Halifax explosion, and that there was great danger of losing his eyesight. He has since, however, had more favourable accounts in which every hope is entertained for a complete recovery.

To Stop a Persistent Hacking Cough

The best remedy is one you can easily make at home. Cheap, but very effective.

Thousands of people normally healthy in every other respect, are annoyed with a persistent hacking cough that hangs on year after year, disturbing their sleep and making life disagreeable. It's an needless—there's an old home-made remedy that will end such a cough easily and quickly.

Get from any druggist "2½ ounces of Pinex" (50 cents worth), pour it into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Begin taking it at once. Gradually but surely you will notice the phlegm thin out and then disappear altogether, thus ending a cough that you never thought would end. It also promptly loosens a dry or tight cough, stops the troublesome throat tickle, soothes the irritated membranes that line the throat and bronchial tubes, and relief comes almost immediately. A day's use will usually break up an ordinary throat or chest cold, and for bronchitis, croup, whooping cough and bronchial asthma there is nothing better. It tastes pleasant and keeps perfectly.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract and is used by millions of people every year for throat and chest colds with splendid results.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

STANFIELD'S

Unshrinkable UNDERWEAR

Made and Worn by Two Generations

Over a quarter of a century ago the late C. E. Stanfield, Pioneer underwear manufacturer of Truro, N.S., discovered a way to prevent woollen underwear from shrinking—by the radical but sensible plan of taking the shrink out of the wool before it went to the knitting machines.

His secret process at once overcame the one fault of woollen underwear, and started a keen and steadily growing demand for the Stanfield's product.

From the very first, the sterling quality of Stanfield's Underwear, as proved by wear and washing, has been its most prominent feature. It actually DOES NOT SHRINK, "full up" nor mat—and on the basis of length of service it is the best value offered in underwear.

Not content with superior quality, Stanfield's give wearers all the little niceties that make undergarments luxurious. Among the newer improvements are the wonderfully handy Adjustable Combinations and Adjustable Sleepers for growing children. Simply moving the buttons on the waist allows for two to three years' growth, and the detachable lower part is a great convenience.

THE WAR TIME CHRISTMAS DINNER

All Right to Eat Turkey or Chicken Says Food Controller For Those Articles Cannot Be Shipped Overseas---Fruit Candies Should Take Place of Sugar Confections.

The Food Controller's Office sends out the following:

There was never a time in the history of Canada when the people need to be so careful in their buying, and never a time when food was so precious. The relationship between food and money is abnormal. Food today seems more precious than money. But there is a choice even in food. To those who can afford to have turkey or chicken for their Christmas dinner, we say by all means have turkey or chicken! These cannot be shipped overseas, as every foot of cargo space is needed for foods which are of more vital importance.

In a Christmas dinner the experienced housewife knows that good cooking and wise choice can make an acceptable meal, even if the accustomed articles may not appear this year on our table. In the face of the need at the front, and of the world shortage of food which Canada must help to overcome, it would seem to be not only in bad taste but distinctly unpatriotic to load our tables with food, as has been the custom in other years.

Fruit candies should take the place of beet and cane sugar confections, as far as it is possible. Turkish delight, marshmellow and vegetable creams with mashed potato forming the basis of the candy, are wholesome and delicious.

Icing for cakes should be tabooed, or, if used at all, should consist merely of a thin plain white coat without almond paste or fancy border. Excellent substitutes might be provided, such as nut bread, Graham or bran gems with raisins, date cornmuffins or other home-made brown breads.

Following is an economical and wholesome dinner menu for Christmas, 1917, in Canada, and one the Food Controller would heartily approve:

Roast Chicken or Chicken Potpie.
Bread Crumb Dressing—Giblet Gravy
Mashed Potatoes Celery
Carrot Pudding Caramel Sauce
Bran Gems.
Candied Orange Peel. Mints

To make the gravy the giblets are covered with water and allowed to simmer for an hour. Then they are chopped fine. A gravy is made in the pan with four tablespoons each of fat and flour. When these are well blended the water in which the giblets simmered is added, and enough boiling water to make two cups. This should be stirred over the fire until well thickened, then seasoned with salt and pepper. Finally the giblets should be added.

The following are the ingredients required for carrot pudding:

1 cup each grated carrot, chopped apple.
1 cup each sugar, chopped suet, seeded raisins.
1 1-2 cups flour.
1 teaspoon each cinnamon, cloves, nutmeg.
1 teaspoon baking soda.
Juice of 1-2 lemon.

Sift together flour, salt, soda and spices and add to grated vegetable, sugar and suet. Add lemon juice last. Put into a well-greased mould and steam four hours.

BRAN GEMS.

1 cup bran.
1 cup white flour.
1 cup milk.
1-4 cup sugar.
1 teaspoon salt.
1 level teaspoon baking powder.
1 egg.
1 tablespoon melted dripping.

Mix and sift flour, baking powder, and salt. Add the bran, mix sugar milk, well-beaten egg and melted shortening and combine the two mixtures. Bake in greased gem pans in a hot oven.

CANDIED ORANGE PEEL.

Remove the peel from thin-skinned oranges and cut it in quarters. Then cover with cold water and bring to the boiling point. Cook slowly until it is soft. Drain, remove the white part and cut the yellow rind in thin strips with scissors. Make a thick syrup of one cup sugar and 1-2 cup water. Boil until it threads. Cook the orange strips in this syrup for five minutes. Drain and roll in granulated sugar.

MINTS

Make a fondant of—
1 cup sugar,
1-2 cup water,
1-8 teaspoon cream of tartar.

Dissolve 1 cup sugar in 1-2 cup of boiling water; add cream of tartar, bring to a boil and continue to boil until the mixture forms a soft ball, when it is dropped in cold water. Pour out on a slightly greased platter and leave until edge begins to harden. Beat with a wooden spoon until not too stiff. Then mould with fingers. Add 3 drops of peppermint when partly worked. Form into small balls.

OATMEAL MACAROONS.

1 egg.
1-2 cup sugar.
1 tablespoon melted butter.
1 cup rolled oats.
1-2 teaspoon salt.
4 tablespoons shredded cocoanut.

Beat egg until light, add other ingredient. Beat well and drop from spoon on to greased pan or greased paper and cook fifteen minutes in moderate oven.

Scald and blanch almonds. Put on to platter and sprinkle with salt. Leave over night to dry. In the morning roast to a light brown in the oven. Add no butter or oil. These are more digestible than if oil or butter is used.

Jet ornaments with fringed ends are frequently used instead of flowers on gowns.

HOME HEALTH CLUB

By DR. DAVID H. REEDER

Avoiding Summer Sickness: In the season of plentiful fruit and fresh vegetables, there is always more or less so-called summer complaint, diarrhoea, dysentery, flux, cholera morbus, etc., all of which is more or less distressing and dangerous, and all can be avoided very easily by adults and older children, but not so easily in the case of the active small boy and other small children and infants.

The trouble is caused not so much by the fresh fruits and vegetables, which in themselves are good and wholesome foods and of great value on account of their active cleansing powers, eliminating waste matter from the alimentary canal and supplying to the body valuable natural salts and ash, but they do taste so good and people have been denied them so long that they overeat, and not only of the fruits and vegetables that are full of life and vitamines, but in addition they eat the usual quantity of other foods, bread, butter, and potatoes.

In the case of the small boy also, there is the fact that he does not discriminate between ripe and green fruit; size, colour, and kind, combined with the difficulties he must overcome in order to get the fruit, are all factors in determining the quantity he will eat.

Even though an undue quantity of under-ripe fruit is eaten, there is not likely to be any serious after effects provided starchy foods were not already in the stomach or are not eaten with three to five hours afterwards. Nearly all of the early fresh fruits are very acid. Especially is this true of strawberries and early apples gooseberries, currants, plums, etc.

In my last article I told you why acids and starches make such a bad combination, and if you will bear in mind that acid fruits and nearly all vegetables are digested in the acid fluids of the stomach, while the starchy foods require an alkaline secretion, and that the two eaten together cause serious gastric disturbance, such as fermentation, gas, acidity, etc., you can avoid trouble.

When you are satisfied that your children have over-eaten of acid or unripe fruit, simply with old bread pie, cake, potatoes, puddings, macaroni, or any other starchy food, give them a generous dose of castor oil, or better still, liquid petrolatum. You will save your child from much suffering and danger, and yourself from work, worry, and a doctor's bill.

If you want to experiment and watch results so as to prove how easy it is to start up trouble, just try a combination for your next breakfast, that is frequently eaten by people that pay doctors' bills. It is simple, tastes good, and no doubt you have frequently eaten it before, and wondered where all the gas came from. Try this one:

Half a grape fruit or a large orange, large dish of oatmeal and cream and sugar, or any wheat cereal breakfast food with cream and sugar buttered toast or rolls and coffee plenty of cream and sugar in the coffee.

The chances are that you will begin to belch before you leave the table or you will notice a decided fullness within a few hours. The next time you want an orange or grape fruit, both of which are fine, finish the meal with other fruits, nuts, vegetables, salads (without potatoes, fish, fowl, chops or small steak). There will be no trouble of gas or other distress after this meal.

I have often told you to tell me what you eat, and I will tell you what you are and how your stomach is acting.

Dear Doctor: On seeing the garlic remedy for whooping cough, I telephoned a friend of mine who had a rather frail boy suffering with it at the time. His father made the remark after hearing it, "Oh, pants," but a young man visiting there said he would go to the Italian shop, get some, and try it, as it could do no hurt if it was no good. The child had not slept for several nights, and neither did the parents, but they procured the garlic and chopped some, applied it over one pair of stockings on the feet and pulled over a pair of other stockings, and the poor little fellow went to sleep soundly and until late morning. He arose very, very much better, and in a couple of days the cough was relieved, the whoop gone in a few hours. The father told me a few days ago that this remedy should be known by everyone. I never saw anything like it; it is wonderful. Thank you, doctor, for the kindness. —Mrs. J. L.

Answer: Not only "Oh, pants," but "Oh, piffle, nonsense, and tommy rot" have been the remarks of those who were told about this simple cure for whooping cough. Finely chopped garlic, bound to the soles of the feet in the form of a thick poultice, but it works in every case just as it did in this. Nature furnishes a remedy for every ailment. Find and apply it.

Dear Doctor: Seeing the good suggestions you have given from time to time in the Club Notes, I thought I would write you about my trouble. It is trifling, to be sure, but nevertheless annoying, for I find I cannot stop the habit of biting my finger nails. It may seem strange to say "I cannot," but it is the hardest habit to break that I have ever had. I am 17 years old, and clerking, so do not get much out of doors exercise. Have never been sick, except possibly a little nausea or headache occasionally. I have put bitter powders on my nails and tried everything hat I ever heard of. I did stop it for about two weeks, but the Answer: There have been quite a number who have written me about the habit of biting the finger nails. I know that they cannot help it, and through their own efforts alone will never be able to oevrcome it. In the majority of cases, it is due to a condition known as phimosis, which causes extreme nervousness, and by removing the cause the result will disappear. I would suggest that you have this condition gone into by a competent and reliable physician and surgeon.

The placing of bitter powders on the nails is not very satisfactory, for it will wear off. A good plan is to have the nails manicured twice a week for several months. The first-named treatment will be best, and it will help your general health as well.

Paraguay's "Spider Lace."

Missionaries in Paraguay more than 200 years ago taught the native Indians to make lace by hand. Since that day the art has greatly developed, and in certain of the towns lacemaking is the chief occupation. Almost all the women, many children and not a few men are engaged in this industry. A curious fact with reference to the Paraguayan laces is that the designs were borrowed from the strange webs woven by the semitropical spiders that abound in that country. Accordingly this lace is by the natives called nanduti, which means "spider web."

Two Men and a Problem.

When Lord Rayleigh, the British scientist, was a student at Cambridge the examiners set among other problems one which they based on an article in a German mathematical periodical supposed unlikely to have penetrated to Cambridge. Only two men solved it—Mr. Strutt (Lord Rayleigh) and another. The examiners asked the other man about this problem. "Oh," he said, "I take the —— (mentioning the name of the periodical), and I was very glad to find that, thanks to an article in the last number, that problem came out quite easily." When Mr. Strutt's turn came they expected a similar answer, but he astonished them by replying, "The fact is, gentlemen, that I sometimes contribute to ——, and I could not help feeling greatly flattered that you should have thought my little problem worthy of a place in this examination." He was awarded the prize.

The Scale on a Map.

Distance on a map is measured by its "scale." By laying a rule on a government map and ascertaining the number of inches between two points the number of miles between them can readily be calculated. Nearly all maps are drawn to a scale representing one, two, three or more miles to the inch, as the inch is the common unit of measurement in the United States by which the eye is accustomed to judge distances on paper.

A scale of 1:62,500, used in the well known United States geological survey topographical maps, denotes that one inch on the map represents 62,500 inches on the ground, which is the approximate number of inches in a mile. Therefore the scale is, almost exactly, one inch to one mile. A scale of 1:125,000 is approximately two miles to one inch, and a scale of 1:1,000,000 represents sixteen miles to one inch.

Pantheon and Parthenon.

The Parthenon, or what is left of it, stands upon the Acropolis of Athens. The most famous building on earth was erected under the administration of Pericles about B. C. 442. Its present ruinous condition was caused by the explosion of a bomb during the war between the Venetians and Turks in 1687.

The Pantheon at Rome was built by Agrippa in B. C. 27 and, unlike the more beautiful temple at Athens, is still in a fair state of preservation. The Pantheon is, of course, well worth seeing both for its own sake and on account of its historic interest, but it does not hold the fame belonging to the incomparable building on the Acropolis.

Camphor Laurels in Japan.

There is a stringent law in Japan that when one camphor laurel is cut down another must be planted in its place. The tree is hardy and long lived, attaining to an enormous size. It is covered with a small leaf of a vivid green color. The seed, or berries, grow in clusters, resembling the black currant in size and appearance. And the wood is employed for every purpose, from cabinetmaking to shipbuilding.

Sliced Hair.

Tommy, a bright little three-year-old, had just made his first visit to the barber's and was very dissatisfied upon his return.

"I don't like my hair curled in this way, all in little curls," he said.

"How do you wish it?" queried mamma.

"Why, I want it like Uncle Tom's. I want it in two slices."

Slow Work.

"How's your boy Josh doing in the army?"

"First rate," replied Farmer Corntossel. "Although his mother's a little disappointed. She speaks about the slowness of Josh's promotion every time she sees in the paper that the same old general is still holding his job."

Looks Like Discrimination.

"I don't see why Cupid should discriminate against any particular trade or profession."

"Didn't know that he did or was supposed to."

"Then why do they say that love laughs at locksmiths?"

DOES IT PAY

to carry Life Insurance? There is only one answer, either from a financial or peace of mind point of view. The ever-increasing amount of life insurance written, not only by our Company but other representative institutions, is an evidence of its merit.

If it is good business to carry Fire Insurance—and every sane business man believes it is—then it should be equally good business to carry Life Insurance. A Fire Policy may become a claim, while a Life Insurance Policy must, either by death or maturity.

Write us to-day, stating your age, whether married or single, and we shall be pleased to forward you particulars of a policy best suited to your needs.

THOS. MARK, General Agent

To the Electors of East Peterboro

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—

I believe no greater disaster could, at the present time, befall our country than the defeat of the Borden Union Administration at the polls on December 17th.

The Policy of this Administration is the speedy and continuous reinforcements of our Canadian troops on the battle-front; and the putting forth of all our National strength for the cause of civilization and freedom.

To carry out this Policy, a number of Canada's ablest Public men of vision—sinking for the present—all political differences now stand together—strong to battle for the right—united to WIN the WAR.

For over three years thousands of Loyal Canadians of many creeds and of different Nationalities, have stood shoulder to shoulder on the Battlefields of Europe, gallantly fighting a common foe, and sometimes standing; sometimes falling, have won for the name of Canada undying fame. Shall we, with all possible speed, send help to these, our heroic defenders now holding the battle-line or shall we, break faith with them as well as "with those who die"—delay—vote—while the enemy advances?

As a Union Candidate in this Riding, I am putting forth every effort to win East Peterborough to the support of the Borden Union Administration and if elected shall to the utmost of my ability support the same.

To this end I now earnestly solicit the co-operation and influence of every loyal, patriotic man and woman in East Peterborough.

I have the honor to be, faithfully yours,

GOT WET FEET — TOOK AWFUL COLD

COULD NOT SLEEP FOR COUGH

A bad cold accompanied by a distressing cough that keeps you awake at night is most aggravating, and unless it is attended to at once may develop into something very serious.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is the remedy you should take. It heals the mucous surfaces, relieves oppression and tightness of the chest, removes the accumulation of phlegm, quiets the most obstinate and distressing coughs, and secures rest and sleep at night, not only to the sufferer, but to others whose rest would be otherwise broken.

Mrs. Ezekiel Acker, Lake Pleasant, N.S., writes: "I got wet feet and took an awful cold; could not sleep at night, and would do nothing but cough. My husband got me a bottle of medicine, but it was not worth bringing home. I was going to call the doctor in when a friend asked me to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. I told her I had little faith in it, but she urged me to get a bottle. I did, and I must say that of all the medicine I ever took, it is the best, and relieved me the quickest of anything I ever saw."

"Dr. Wood's" is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25c and 50c; manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

LIFE ON A SUBMARINE.

Physical Evils That Come From Long Continuous Duty.

According to Assistant Surgeon Walter W. Cress of the navy, long, continuous duty on submarines is conducive to high blood pressure, with its attending evils.

"Whether that is due," he says, "to mental strain, loss of sleep, overeating with lack of exercise, excessive use of tobacco, coffee and tea or some toxic agent peculiar to submarines I am unable to say. It was noted that a slight fall occurred after a forty-eight hour surface run and a three hour dive. Undoubtedly that could be accounted for by fatigue or lack of physical exercise during the preceding forty-eight hours."

One effect, natural under the circumstances, he says, was that of loss of weight, and it is observed that there is probably no occupation, excepting that of a boilermaker, giving rise to as many cases of partial deafness as submarine duty. It is not uncommon he says, for men to report that they have increasing difficulty in hearing the commands. That is attributed to the constant vibratory movement of the submarine, the straining of ears to hear above the noise of the engines, the presence of cold drafts of air down the hatches while operating on the surface, the excessive heat while running submerged and the inhalation of gases given off by the batteries and fumes from oil tanks.

"It is becoming more and more apparent," concluded Dr. Cress, "that all men should undergo a thorough physical and mental examination before being assigned to submarine duty."

History of "Stepmother."

"Stepmother" is a word with a commonly unsuspected history. Probably most people if called upon to explain it would say that it meant a woman who had stepped into the place of the true mother. Dr. Johnson, at any rate, believed that this was the suggestion of the word to most minds. Really "step" is the Anglo-Saxon "steop," the original meaning of which appears to have been "orphaned." Stepchild, stepbairn, stepson and step daughter come first, and then by gradual fading of the etymological meaning of "step" stepfather and stepmother came into being.—London Opinion.

The Unexpected Happens.

Remember, don't you, what Bob Burdette, the humorist, said about that military fop he laughed at on one occasion?

Clean, well pressed uniform, gloved hands, flowing cravat, polished boots! This young cavalry officer was directing the unloading of a cargo of army supplies.

I heard Burdette say he thought it a crime to intrust his own life to the leadership of such a baudbox soldier. But a little later, when the Confederate horsemen appeared, this Union dandy electrified his own men as, mounted upon a fine steed and with dashing sword, he led the charge.

It was George A. Custer!

We have biblical authority for this: "Judge not according to the appearance."—Girard in Philadelphia Ledger.

To the Ladies.

Ladies, if you love a man marry him. If you marry him know him. If you know him study him. If you study him humor him. If you humor him flatter him. If you flatter him you will humor him. If you humor him you will study him. If you study him you will know him. If you know him you may divorce him.

Not Woman's Friend.

"Sunlight is a great thing."

"It's no friend to woman."

"Why not?"

"See what it does to her complexion, and, besides, they do say its chemical effect disintegrates the backing of mirrors in a comparatively short time."

Ten-year-old Lena had been taking osteopathic treatment, and her little friend, Mabel, was curious to know what the treatment was like.

"Well, I'll tell you, Mabel," Lena said seriously; "they just make bread of you."

RESULT OF A TRAGIC COMBAT

IN September and October during the rutting season, the hunter occasionally hears the sounds of terrific combat between those giants of the forest, the bull moose. With their formidable antlers these huge creatures can snap a young birch tree like a piece of matchwood, and although it is only rarely that the bull moose will attack a man, if he does do so the man has little chance unless he is quick with his high powered rifle. The other day on St. Ignace Island, twenty-one miles south of Roosport, on the C. P. R., a pair of locked moose horns was found as the tragic record of such a combat. They had evidently been fighting when the antlers became entangled and, unable to extricate each other the two animals died there of starvation, their remains being licked clean by the bears who prowl around the forests of Ontario.

When Time Hung Heavy.

Today, when there is such a premium on time, one finds it hard to realize the condition portrayed by William Wistar Comfort in the Bookman:

"In its day and for two or three centuries later 'The Romance of the Rose' was the most popular work composed in medieval Europe. It consists of about 23,000 eight-syllable verses in the old French original. That forms a very considerable poem. A poem in two volumes would be sufficient in our day to rebuff most readers. But think of copying out in longhand such a poem!

"Time was something to be killed by our ancestors, and hands were found to copy this endless poem almost 200 times. That is to say, we have nearly 200 French manuscripts of the 'Roman de la Rose,' and that does not account for all those that must have been lost in the course of 600 years. However, the figures give us some idea of what medieval literary popularity was."

TROUBLED WITH CONSTIPATION
From 16 to 20

Constipation is one of the commonest ills of mankind, and one too often allowed to go unlooked after until some serious complication sets in.

If the bowels are properly looked after there will be no constipation, jaundice, sick or bilious headaches, heartburn, coated tongue, sour stomach, floating specks before the eyes, etc.

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills will keep your bowels so regulated that in no time the constipation will disappear entirely.

Miss Emma E. Melanson, Halifax, N.S., writes: "I am now 20 years of age, and since I was 16 I have been greatly troubled with constipation, so much so that at times I would be in bed 3 or 4 days a month. I tried all the old-fashioned remedies, castor oil, cascara, etc., with only temporary relief, until my sister-in-law gave me some of Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills. From the first they seemed beneficial, and I gave them a fair trial. This was two years ago, and with an occasional dose I have kept entirely free from constipation for the period mentioned."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c a vial at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Our Friends the Birds.

Birds are the friends of mankind. Were it not for their kindly offices, so ill requited, men could not live upon the earth more than a year or two. Insect life would sweep over the earth in a devastating flood. Every green thing would disappear as insects great and small, dying, creeping, swimming, boring and omnivorous, swept over the land. The birds, and the birds alone, are our guardians and keepers, and yet we make senseless war upon them. Because a few birds that guard our peas and berries take tribute of the fruit they preserve we make senseless war upon them until by sad experience we are taught that it is a choice between plenty of birds and fewer cherries, and without the birds no cherries at all. The hawks and owls rid us of pestiferous vermin and now and then take a chicken for tribute. Therefore we make war upon hawks and owls, and by and by we have no clover, because the mice have eaten the eggs of the bumblebee, and so the clover is not fertilized.

About the Welsh.

Wales has plenty of coal, slate, scenery and consonants, but very few surnames. If a Welsh schoolmaster should say, "Jones, you may go home now for being a good boy," the whole school would quit.

People who are not called Joues are called Williams, or Evans, or Hughes, or Lloyd. They divide these names between them and make the best of it. They do not follow the English method of taking their surnames from towns and villages. They felt that to do so would cut them off from the rest of mankind. Nobody could possibly call on Mrs. Llanymynech. Dislocation of the jaw is a great drawback to social intercourse.

The Welshman has the Celtic imagination, says London Answers. He never calls a spade a spade. When he has done describing this implement of agriculture the stolid Englishman thinks he has been listening to a story from the "Arabian Nights;" hence the Englishman says the Welshman is an "untruthier." He isn't really. It's only a difference of method.

What De Morgan Might Have Done.

If I am ever privileged to meet Mr. De Morgan in some afterworld of shades where even a critic may look at a creator and find forgiveness for his own sins I shall want to say: "Dear and honored sir, there is one thing for which some of us are not going to forgive you. You were one of the very greatest and most delightful of our entertainers and in these latter days perhaps the most heartening of all, for while others chose to rant or fume or doubt or vilify you chose only to give us pleasure unmixed with pain. But why, with all your wit and all your wisdom, with all your command over the very founts of laughter and of tears—why, when you were the only man in the world who could justly have dreamed of such a labor of love, did you not finish what your great elder brothers had begun? Why did you not give us the missing chapters of 'Denis Duval' and 'The Mystery of Edwin Drood?'"—Wilson Follett, in Yale Review.

The Unhanged Luddites.

It was a curious slip that saved the old time machine wrecking Luddites. These men were indicted for threatening to demolish a certain plant at Nottingham, and conviction meant the scaffold—there was no alternative. Death for all the offenders seemed inevitably predestined. But old Father Antic, the law, came with benevolent guile to their aid. The threatened firm was described in the indictment as "proprietors of a silk and cotton manufactory." The acute mind of the future Lord Chief Justice Denman seized on a flaw. "The firm are in reality," he urged, "manufacturers of silk lace and of cotton lace." Note the fine distinction. "They ought to have been described as 'proprietors of a silk lace and of a cotton lace manufactory,'" he said. A merciful judge, more solicitous for lives than law, upheld the objection, and those Luddites died unhanged.—London Chronicle.

The Phantom Pool.

The Ozark mountains, which divide Arkansas from Missouri, are wonderfully picturesque, and one of their features, which has come to be known as "The Phantom Pool," is quite a curiosity. Adventurous visitors have been bringing back from time to time the story of the mysterious deception it practices upon the human vision, but there are always skeptics. Recently a party of Nebraskans set out for the place with the purpose of removing all doubt.

The rains had been very heavy and streams and ponds in the mountains were everywhere overflowing their banks. All conditions were favorable to upsetting the claim that the pool was always empty. The members of the group were overjoyed upon looking down from an eminence to find that the pool appeared to be full to the brim. Coming to its edge, however, they found it empty. And now they are encountering skepticism themselves.

MOVING A BIG ARMY

Transporting Troops In Time of War Is a Gigantic Task.

A WORK OF INFINITE DETAIL.

What It Would Mean In Railway Cars of Various Kinds and In Supplies and Equipment to Carry a Million and a Half Men Across the Country.

Before a body of troops is entrained the time and place of every move are mapped out, including the date and place of entraining, destination, time of arrival, route, assembly point, time of troops leaving assembly point, route of assembly point to train, time of arrival at station, time of boarding train, time of departure of train, rate of travel over each section of route, time, place and duration of stops; time and place of feeding troops and animals and a schedule showing the assignment of troops and equipage to each car. Aside from this are countless details connected with procuring supplies, the disposal of troops and their care.

All these preliminary arrangements must be made by an officer of the quartermaster corps. The first thing to be done is to procure lists with weight of all property to be shipped, obtain this material and make out the bill of lading. This, with the number of men and officers, constitutes a basis on which he estimates the number and kind of cars needed. He then engages the cars and provides loading facilities, such as material for blocking and lashing, and constructs necessary ramps, or runways, for entraining animals or wagons.

Next, on the arrival of the cars, he inspects them from a thousand major and minor angles. All cars must be clean. Passenger cars must be fully supplied with water and ice, sufficiently lighted and heated and all other appurtenances in proper condition. Stock cars come in for special attention.

Then the number of men or kind and quantity of supplies allotted to each car is marked on the side or steps, together with the name of the organization. In loading men three are assigned to each section in tourist sleepers or three to each two seats in a day coach.

Another important point is to keep the troops of each unit with all equipment together. This is important in case of sudden attack. Imagine the fate of a unit of troops suddenly detrained at the firing line without equipment!

A possible element of delay lies in the timing of the arrival of troops at the station. There must be no time lost by cars waiting for the troops. The facilities for loading animals and wagons at each station on each route should be part of the quartermaster corps' records. Quick and noiseless loading and unloading of animals without confusion are an art in themselves. Dispositions of individual animals must be studied. Gentle animals should be placed opposite doors and therefore loaded last.

The time of loading and unloading has been carefully tabulated and should not exceed the following: Infantry, one hour; cavalry and light artillery, one and one-half hours; heavy artillery and engineers with bridge train, two hours. All movements, loading, entraining, detraining, feeding and watering and exercising men and horses, are made in military fashion.

With each train kitchen cars are provided. Otherwise baggage cars are fitted up by troops or arrangements made for procuring meals, or at least liquid coffee, at stations en route. Feeding of men and animals is in itself no small matter.

Say the war department was called upon to transport twenty field armies of 82,000 men each, or 1,640,000 men. In moving such a military force the railroads must carry, besides the 1,640,000 men, 700,000 mounts and draft animals, 60,000 vehicles and 3,500 big guns.

To accomplish this the quartermaster corps must have available at the right points 42,300 passenger coaches, 7,700 baggage cars, 21,100 box cars, 37,980 stock cars and 15,500 flat cars, making a total of 124,580 cars, or 7,320 trains with as many engines.

Here is the government's minimum estimate of the gross weight of materials needed each month by this force of 1,640,000 men: Rations, 250,630,400 pounds; ammunition, 7,046,160 pounds; forage, 623,147,600 pounds; general quartermasters' supplies, 31,704,440 pounds; clothing and equipage, 22,080,840 pounds; ordinance supplies other than ammunition, 1,622,740 pounds; engineers' supplies, 12,208,320 pounds; signal supplies, 9,043,260 pounds; medical supplies, 597,160 pounds; candy and tobacco, 319,680 pounds, making a total of 961,080,100 or nearly 1,000,000,000 pounds. The transportation of this enormous weight would require fifty-five trains of thirty cars each day as long as the force was in the field.—Leslie's.

KIDNEY DISEASE OVERCOME.

Mr. James Proues, cattle dealer, Shelbo, Sask., writes: "For about ten years I suffered from kidney disease; at times I was bad with backache, and derangements of the digestive organs. During that time I was treated by four different doctors. One day I read in Dr. Chase's Almanac about the Kidney-Liver Pills and began to use them. Altogether I used six boxes and I need say to that I feel well now and attribute this condition to the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills."

"In my opinion, no other medicine in the world is so curative for Constipation and Indigestion as "Fruit-a-tives". I was a sufferer from these complaints for five years, and my sedentary occupation, Music, brought about a kind of Intestinal Paralysis—with nasty Headaches, belching gas, drowsiness after eating, and Pain in the Back. I tried pills and medicines of physicians, but nothing helped me. Then I was induced to try "Fruit-a-tives", and now for six months I have been entirely well.

I advise any one who suffers from that horrible trouble—Chronic Constipation with the resultant indigestion, to try "Fruit-a-tives", and you will be agreeably surprised at the great benefit you will receive". A. ROSENBURG.

Australia's War Record.

Hon. J. D. Connolly, the newly appointed Agent-General for Western Australia in London, Eng., has arrived in Canada en route to the Old Country. In Western Australia, he said, conscription carried by a majority of 63,000, and it was defeated in the most populous states like New South Wales and Victoria. To-day the Commonwealth was securing 7,000 recruits monthly. Western Australia, with a population of 340,000 had contributed eleven per cent. of that number to the colors, while the Commonwealth, with a population of 4,750,000, had supplied 300,00 troops, or about 8½ per cent. of the population.

GLASS OF SALTS CLEANS KIDNEYS

If Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers You, Drink Lots of Water.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts, which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Varicose Veins.

Operation is necessary in very severe cases. In simple early cases treatment consists of applying suitable bandages and paying attention to regularity of the bowels and general health. The bandage, which should be of flannel, about two inches wide and a yard or so long, is wrapped spirally round the limb affected, commencing well below the prominent veins and taken well above them. It should be adjusted firmly, but not too tightly, and each layer should slightly overlap the last. It should be put on while lying in bed in the morning and not taken off again till lying down in bed at night. Never massage or rub the parts.

Muskrat and nutria are excellent furs for the woman with a limited pocketbook to choose.

Brocade hats have become so popular that the smartest milliners have stopped making them.

THE FORWARD LOOK.

It Is Never Too Late to Make a Fresh Start In Life.

Now and then a man pauses to take account of stock and looks back ruefully over the course of his life to note the many places where he made the wrong turn or was shoved off the track by adverse circumstances. He says to himself, believing what he says, that if he could retrace his steps and take a fresh start, knowing what he knows now, he would not make such a mess of things again.

He can put his finger down on the very spot in the map of his life where he went wrong. There was a blurred place on the trail, where there was no trace of the footprint of any who passed that way and no mark of the woodman's ax upon a tree. It was for him alone to choose the way to take, and in his haste and fever to arrive he chose wrongly and has wandered ever since.

A man plays a game, or runs a race or conducts a business, or marries a wife, or chooses a friend, or elects a calling, or forms a habit, and by and by the conviction is borne in upon him, like a growth weighing on the brain, that he was in error. Now it is too late to retrieve. He must wear for the remainder of his days the millstone due to the wrong decision.

What is he to do? He strangled his chance newborn. He exchanged his birthright for pottage. It is of no avail to plead that he had bad advisers, that he was misled, that he was the tool of environment, that a base heredity rose up to claim him and a latent taint in the blood broke out and wrought an irreparable mischief.

The past is there, and its legend is deeply graven on his brow or seared by the brand of the iron that has entered into his soul. Can he go back? The years and the closed doors and the finished chapters tell him no.

But the forward look and the futurity provide him with a better way to take. When Mrs. Peterkin, in the story, had spoiled her cup of coffee by putting salt in it and was trying to redeem the error by the neutralizing action of all sorts of chemicals the lady from Philadelphia suggested that she make a fresh cup. Seeing that you can't go back, why not make a fresh start exactly where you are? Decision has a miraculous way of finding a standpoint of rock in the middle of a quicksand.

A Change of Base.

"And now, Bella," said little Mary to her doll, "you must lay down for a while and go to sleep."

"You should say 'lie down,' dear," put in little Mary's mother.

"Bella," said Mary impressively, "I'm going to lie you down, so don't you cry."

"'Lay you down,' dear," came the second gentle correction.

Mary was much puzzled. Whatever she said, it seemed to be wrong. She declined to cope longer with the intricacies of the English language. "Bella," she announced, "I think you better sit up!"

Kilometers and Miles.

Wireless telegraph transmission distances are often stated in kilometers, nautical miles or statute miles. To convert the number of kilometers to nautical miles, multiply by fifty-four and point off two decimal places. To convert from kilometers to statute miles multiply by sixty-two and point off two places. If the distance is given in statute, or land, miles and you want it expressed in kilometers, multiply the number of miles by 161 and point off two decimal places.

Wedding Music.

"Custom," says a writer in the Woman's Home Companion, "has decreed, to be sure, that the simplest and most conventional musical program for a wedding in church is, as some one has tersely expressed it, 'Lohengrin to go in on, Mendelssohn to go out on and something soft during the ceremony.' Something a bit different would be 'Tannhaeuser' to go in on and 'Swedish Wedding March' from 'Hochzeit zu Wulfsberg' to go out on."

Treeless City Streets.

The New York State College of Forestry says that within New York state there are 20,000 miles of street capable of sustaining a growth of 5,000,000 shade trees which can be made worth $100,000,000 in increased property value. Besides making our cities more beautiful, trees are of definite value to health, for by absorbing poisonous gases they purify the air.

Nursing Sickly Plants.

Sickly plants, like sickly people, cannot stand extremes. Sickly pot plants may often be more quickly brought back to health by watering with very warm water only. Low vitality will not be raised through the use of chilly water or less than 110 degrees of temperature.

An Ostrich's Nest.

After pairing, the ostrich begins to make his nest. It is the male alone that performs this duty. To do it, he squats upon the ground, and, balancing himself upon his breast-bone, scratches up the earth with his legs and throws it behind him. When he has dug out enough on one side to suit him he turns round and begins to dig on another side, and continues this operation until he has made a hole large enough for him to sit in comfortably. A few days after the nest is finished the female begins to lay one egg on every alternate day for eighteen or twenty days. She then rests for a while, which time varies from four to ten days, and then lays more. A pair of ostriches yield about forty eggs, though it is not unusual for a well-fed well-kept pair to yield fifty and even sixty eggs. The eggs are placed so as to leave no space between them. The male and the female brood alternately. At night the male is always on the nest, as it possesses greater warmth than the female.

These birds perform their duties with the greatest skill, without any noise or breakage of the eggs. The incubation lasts forty-five days on an average, sometimes fifty days, but never continues beyond that. When the chicklings hatch out they can be heard trying to break the shell of the egg. Sometimes they succeed in doing so, but usually the father breaks the egg under his breast-bone, tears the inside skin with his bill, and frees the chickling. Upon first reaching the air the chickling remains limp and weak. But the warmth of the parent soon revives it, and a few hours afterwards it begins to run about, exercising its long legs, toppling over at each step, and recommencing again its stumbling journey. Four days after their hatching the chicklings begin to eat. They run after insects and swallow small pebbles. The father and mother do not help their little ones to find food.

Can Wield Sledge Hammer.

A demonstration of the use of mechanical artificial arms and hands was given the other day at Balham by a number of discharged soldiers who have lost limbs and who are now in civil occupations.

In the course of a conversation Mr. Hollis, who organized the demonstration, said: "During the past three years we have fitted eight thousand men with limbs, and we have now seven thousand men waiting to be fitted. We make two types of arms, one for heavy work and the other for clerical work. With the former a man can wield a nine-pound sledge hammer and drive a fifteen-inch stake into the ground. With the latter a draughtsman who has lost an arm can return to his job and produce as good work as before." The art of "educating" a man to the artificial limb enables him to obtain perfect control over all his movements. Some of the artificial arms weigh only 2¼ pounds.

A Lucky Cat.

A resident in a country suburb, says the Manchester Guardian, makes a point of keeping open the doors and windows of his house. As he sat in one of his breezy rooms the other evening, waiting for dinner, his wife came in from the kitchen. "We've just had a visit from a black cat," she said. "Ah," he replied, "that's good. Black cats are lucky you know." "Yes," answered his wife, who dislikes cats, "this one was certainly lucky. It has run off with the cod steak I was just going to cook for you."

King George's Subjects.

It is not generally known that King George rules over more Mohammedans than the Sultan of Turkey, over more Jews than there are in Palestine, and over more negroes than any other sovereign who is not a native of Africa.

The Danger of Lying In Bed.

Lack of muscular exercise is the first result of lying in bed. As a result the appetite is weakened, the digestive action slows down and the muscles of the stomach and abdomen cease to act upon the intestinal mass. When the body is in a recumbent position the heart works with the least expenditure of effort and the least fatigue and the circulation and the functional activity are decreased. But unless the subject is exceptionally vigorous all the benefits are counterbalanced by dangers. In bed the subject is shut away from fresh air and sunlight. The result of that deprivation is a condition similar to anaemia. But the supreme menace to the weak or the aged confined to bed is the clogging of the pulmonary circulation, an action which frequently results in passive congestion of both sides of the lungs. For this reason the simple fracture of a bone may be the cause of death, because when the patient lies in bed there is no movement of the muscles to act as an incentive to deep breathing.

Writers and Artists Too.

George Du Maurier was an artist, who turned author after making a European fame with the pencil as a satirist of society. He suddenly startled the world with "Trilby" and set two continents comparing feet. With him novel writing seemed his true forte, but he had started too late. He enjoyed his new fame only a few years.

Even Thackeray tried art before he found his true vocation, and he illustrated several of his own books even then. That is a very piquant story, which tells of Thackeray calling on Charles Dickens to see if he could get the commission to illustrate one of his earlier novels. He had not written "Vanity Fair" then.

A very distinguished artist-author was Dante Gabriel Rossetti. He was supreme in both arts. He was one of the greatest poets and certainly one of the greatest artists of the last century.

OVERTURES TO HUNS NOW WOULD BE A BETRAYAL

"Victory Essential to Peace," Declares Lloyd George—Despite Some Untoward Events, We Are Progressing —Allusion to Lansdowne Letter

THE BRITISH PREMIER IS AS FIRM AS EVER

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.— Government officials suggested yesterday that Spaniards, pretending to have authority, had given peace feelers to both England and Germany last September. Officials believe, however, that these overtures were entirely without official sanction. Such feelers, it was said, have been floated many times in the hope that the parties starting them would gain credit thereby.

"Fateful Hour of Mankind."

LONDON, Dec. 15.—Full agreement with President Wilson in war aims was emphatically declared by Premier Lloyd George of England yesterday afternoon.

Speaking at the Lawyers' Club meeting at Gray's Inn, the Premier declared:

"The Government fully agrees with President Wilson's speech.

"We are now at the half-way house between victory and defeat.

"A league of nations, arbitration, et cetera, after victory would be all right, but without victory would be a farce.

"To end the war without reparation would be a farce in a tragical setting.

"We ought never to have started unless we meant with all hazards to complete our task.

"Victory's essential condition is world security.

"I am firmly convinced, despite some untoward events, that we are steadily progressing, and I believe peace overtures to Prussia now would be a betrayal of the peoples trust."

"In the face of Germany's official statement received yesterday claiming that England had put out a "peace feeler" last September and subsequently denied by Lord Cecil, the Premier made it as plain as did President Wilson that the only thought of the allies now is to fight to victory.

His reference to the league of nations was obviously in connection with the Lansdowne letter, but the Premier emphasized that such a league would not be considered by England until victory was first assured." The conditions of peace, as mentioned by Lansdowne, have no sympathy from the Government.

"Britain's will is like tempered steel," the Premier declared. "There is no sign of a break.

"Victory is a question of tonnage.

"Victory is an essential condition to world security.

"Germany is desperately endeavouring to force the issue before America is ready. She will not succeed."

"This is the fateful hour of mankind," Lloyd George continued. 'To redeem Britain and Europe and the world must be the purpose of every man and woman who places duty above ease.

"Democracy is at stake. England and America must strain every resource. Most must especially increase tonnage.

"The most momentous fact of the year, transposing the whole situation year, transposing the whole situation, was America's replacement of Russia in the struggle against autocracy."

MAKE BREAD FROM STRAW, HORSE HAIR AND FERMENTED FLOUR

News from Liege, Belgium, received through the Consul-General for Belgium in Ottawa, indicates that the food problem is about as serious as it can be. The ration of bread is regular, but it is often hardly fit to eat, being prepared from fermented flour, containing straw and horse hair, as well as all sorts of other debris. Bread from Holland could be used, but being of a heavy quality it becomes mouldy before it can be distributed in Liege. As one result from want of food a great number of workers must abstain from going to the mines and shops.

It is not difficult to imagine on what short rations are the poor children of Belgium living—the children of the heroes who checked the Hun in his first mad rush to conquer Paris. It becomes a duty as well as a privilege for us to do what we can for those who indeed have proved themselves our saviors. The spirit of Christmas should arouse us to do our utmost for the children of Belgium, who ask not fancy gifts but food.

CANNING CHICKEN TO CONSERVE MEAT

This year more poultry than usual is finding its way to market in a thin, unfinished condition. There is very little sale for this grade of chickens and their presence in so many shipments has a great deal to do with the comparatively low price returned, at times, to producers. Cull chickens, if held, frequently prove more of a liability than an asset to producers. The best place for them is in a can or a jar made ready for table use. Later in the season when good chickens are scarce and high in price, poultry thus prepared may be utilized and served in many appetizing ways.

The following methods of canning poultry are being advocated by Government institutions in the United States:

Method 1.—Dress the chicken, separating it into sections, or leaving it whole as preferred. Season and fry as for serving. When the meat is three-fourths done remove from the fire and pack the pieces into a clean, hot glass jar. If the chicken is whole break the neck and legs, roll the chicken up into a small roll, tie with string or fasten with toothpicks. A quart jar should hold two or more small chickens. Pour over the chicken the hot liquid from the frying pan, if necessary, adding hot water to fill the jar completely. Adjust the rubbers and tops, leaving the latter slightly loose. Place in a waterbath canner and sterilize from 90 to 120 minutes, depending upon the size of the chicken. Remove and tighten the covers immediately.

Method 2.—Dress the chicken, and leave whole or cut into pieces as preferred. Cover with boiling water, and simmer until the meat can be separated from the bones. Return the bones to the liquid, and boil it down one-half. Pack the meat closely in hot glass jars, add one level teaspoonful salt to each quart, and fill the jar with the hot liquid. Adjust the rubber and top, leaving the latter slightly loose. Sterilize three to three and one-half hours in a waterbath canner. Remove and tighten the tops immediately. The liquid remaining may be placed in a jar, sterilized 90 minutes and kept for soup or gravy. Two pounds of dressed fowl should make one pint of solid meat, and a pint of thick stock.

Method 3.—Cut the dressed, raw chicken into convenient sections. Pack into glass jars, add one teaspoonful salt to a quart, fill the jar with boiling water, adjust the rubbers and tops as above, and sterilize in a waterbath canner three and one-half to four hours.

Method 1, given above, is for small, frying sized chickens. Methods 2 and 3 may be used for chickens of any size.

PASSING OF MRS. WM. KERR ON FRIDAY LAST

Was 84 Years of Age and Widow of Late Senator Kerr

(Cobourg Sentinel-Star.)

On Friday evening, December 7th, one of our oldest and most esteemed residents, Mrs. William Kerr, widow of the late Honourable William Kerr, K.C., passed quietly away after an illness of five days' duration. Mrs. Kerr was born at Wellington, Somersetshire, England, on the 19th day of November, 1833, and was a daughter of the late John Field who founded the well known business of Field & Bros., and came to Canada with her father and mother and the other members of the family in 1834. She received her education at various well known ladies' schools carried on in Cobourg during her girlhood, it being an educational centre and one of the then largest towns in the Province. Her married life was a very long and happy one, broken by the death of her husband, the late Senator Kerr on the 22nd of November, 1906. Seven children were born of the marriage, all of whom survive:—Mr. William F. Kerr, of Cobourg; Mr. Charles W. Kerr and Mr. John M. Kerr, of Toronto; Mr. F. D. Kerr, of Peterborough; Miss Helena Kerr, Mrs. Donald Macdonald, of Edmonton, and Miss Mabel Kerr. Mrs. Kerr was described by Dr. Reynar at the funeral service as a good daughter and sister, a faithful wife and a tender loving mother"; and by Doctor Shorey as "Loving and beloved." To the very end she retained a gracious cordiality of manner, a kindly and unselfish interest in others, and a bright, clear-minded and attractive personality. It seemed at times strange, that being so fragile, she could endure the weight of her numerous years. In earlier life, notwithstanding the cares of a large family, she took an active part in charitable and philanthropic work, and everywhere cast the weight of her influence in favour of everything that she believed was for the good of the community. To know her was to love her. During many years she welcomed to her home the students of Victoria University until its removal to Toronto, and to the end of her life was always glad to hold out a friendly, sympathetic hand to old and young. Her constant faith and hope and the deep love of her children accompanied her to the last. She leaves behind her the remembrance of a beautiful life. Her sister, Miss Sarah Field, who alone survives the numerouse sons and daughters of the late Mr. Field, and who was her sister's constant friend from childhood, and her seven children and grandchildren remain to cherish her memory.

The funeral took place on Monday, the 10th instant. The service at the house was conducted by Rev. H. B. Kenny, assisted by Revs. Drs. Reynar, Daley and Shorey, and by Rev. F. J. Sawers, and at the grave by the Rev. Mr. Kenny and the Rev. Mr. Sawers. Mrs. Kerr's four sons and two of her grandsons were the pall bearers.

WELCOMING SOLDIER HOME.

CARDIFF, Wales. — An appropriate way of welcoming the men who return on leave from the front has been adopted by South Wales towns and villages. The news that a soldier from that neighbourhood is on his way home is a signal for the whole town, from the main streets to the most dingy street in the district of coal-mining villages, to blossom into a gorgeous display of flags and bunting. Lamp posts are transformed into Venetian masts, the flags of all the Allies flutter from cottage windows, and a great banner inscribed "Welcome Home" spans the street opposite the homecoming hero's home.

NO CHANCE FOR THE GERMS

Disease germs cannot live in rich, red blood. It is people in low vitality that fall victims to germ diseases. By using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food you enrich the blood, increase vitality and prevent disease germs from finding lodgment in your body. There's wisdom in prevention. It's easier to keep well than to get well.

Military Voters' Act, 1917

To the Editor, Examiner.

Sir,—As I have had so many inquiries as to the soldier's vote, will you please allow me, through your columns, to state for the benefi of all inquirers what the law is on this subject. It is as follows:

The returned and discharged soldiers and nurses, as well as all persons, male or female, that have enlisted on enrolled or are called out for and placed on active service in the C.E.F., the Canadian Navy, Militia, Volunteer Reserves, Air Service and Motor Boat Patrol, whether of age or not, including Indians, are all entitled to vote.

Soldiers and Nurses in uniform vote, under the Military regulations, wherever they may be.

Discharged Soldiers can vote any place on producing their discharge papers and making oath that they are the persons named therein.

The above need not be on the Voters' List; they may vote whether on or not, wherever they happen to be on Polling Day.

Yours truly,

Jas. G. Guise-Bagley.

PHILADELPHIA FRAUD CRY.

Independents Ask Recount, Charging Stolen City Election.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., Dec. 15. —Alleging gross frauds, ballot box stuffing, impersonation of voters, and false returns, the Town Meeting Party filed three petitions in court to contest the city election held on Nov. 6. The Republican organization has thirty days in which to file an answer.

The Town Meeting Party contends that its candidates for City Treasurer, Receiver of Taxes, and Register of Wills were elected by pluralities ranging from 40,000 to 52,000. The Republican organization candidates, on the face of the returns, have pluralities ranging from 2,900 to 9,700.

The petitions urge the court to open all the ballot boxes in thirty-one of the forty-eight wards and in numerous election divisions of the other wards.

"The election was so tinted with fraud," the petitions aver, "that the entire return of votes should be rejected by the court, as it is impossible to separate the legal from the illegal ballots."

HALIFAX VOTING DEFERRED.

Because of Disaster, Polling Will Not Take Place Monday.

HALIFAX, Dec. 14.—The Halifax election is postponed under authority of the War Measures Act. January 28, polling day in the Yukon, is indicated as a likely date. The nominations will stand.

The buildings in which it was intended that the polling stations should be located have been either destroyed or so much damaged that the necessary repairs could not be made before polling day. There were sixty-one polling stations. Of these ten were in the section of the city swept by the explosion. Of the ten stations, only one is in existence. In many cases throughout the city polling booths are entirely destroyed. In others owners of damaged buildings will not rebuild. Buildings which might otherwise have been obtained for polling booths have been taken over by relief workers.

Under the clasification "married women" in the Yukon, the wife of a soldier is entitled to vote.

AND TAKE FURTHER NOTICE, that on the 31st day of December, 1917, at the hour of eleven o'clock in the forenoon at the City Clerk's Office, in the said City of Peterborough, has been fixed for the appointment of persons to attend at the polling places and at the final summing up of the votes of the electors, and on the 2nd day of January, 1918, at the hour of eleven o'clock in the forenoon, at the office of the City Clerk, the Clerk of the said Municipality will attend and sum up the votes given for and against the said proposed By-Law, and if the assent of the electors is obtained to the said proposed By-Law, it will be taken into consideration by the Municipal Council of the said Corporation at a meeting thereof to be held after the expiration of one month from the date of the first publication of this notice, and that such publication was made on the 8th day of December, 1917.

A Last Word To The Electors

It is unnecessary to appeal to the patriotism of Canadians. All loyal citizens of the British Empire are devoted to its preservation. "God Save the King" means much to all true Canadian hearts. The governments of all the allies have made mistakes. The criticism has been severe. But they are doing their best. Whether we vote for the Union Government or for Sir Wilfrid Laurier, for the Province that failed in men, in money and in the Red Cross and Patriotic work or for that part of Canada that has strained every energy to provide for the men at the Front, let us go to the polls, not with party prejudice and political party rivalry, or hope of patronage in our hearts but with the warm flow of the red life-blood of the nation. Let us vote as men and women and not as party slaves. We have had to endure much at home—but think of the lads at the Front. They are brave. Are we not brave too? Let us show ourselves worthy of them as I am sure we shall, and I will do my level best, if elected, to prove worthy to represent you and to justify your confidence. Believe me, ladies and gentlemen.

Yours sincerely,

J. H. BURNHAM

Would not be Without Zutoo Tablets At Any Cost

Such is the statement of Mr. A. O. Norton, of Boston, the largest Jack Manufacturer in the world. His voluntary testimonial regarding ZUTOO follows:

286 Congress St., Boston, Mass.

"I have been a sufferer from Headache since childhood and have used all, or nearly all, the so-called 'cures' on the market. Some months since my attention was called to Zutoo Tablets and I have been using them ever since with the most gratifying results. I find they cure a 'sick' or 'nervous' headache in a few minutes and leave no bad effects. My family use them whenever needed with equally good results. I have frequently given them to friends who were suffering from Headache and they never failed to give quick relief. I always carry Zutoo Tablets in my grip on the road and WOULD NOT BE WITHOUT THEM AT ANY COST."

"THE FILM OF FEAR"

By ARNOLD FREDERICKS

After a time she saw Mrs. Bradley had gone toward the elevators as Grace left the lobby, come out, signal for a taxicab, and drive quickly off. Leary was obliged to draw up with his machine in order to leave a clear space before the door.

A few seconds later Grace saw the woman she had been following spring from a cab, come rapidly along the sidewalk, and once more enter the lobby. Grace again followed her, just in time to see that instead of applying at the desk, as before, she went directly to one of the elevators, entered, and was whisked out of sight.

Grace's heart almost stood still with fear. She had not appreciated the meaning of the woman's actions before. Now they were only too clear. She had evidently gotten Mrs. Morton, whom Grace suddenly remembered had been registered under an assumed name, out of the way on some pretext or other, and had gone to Ruth's room, with the intention, no doubt, of carrying out her previous threats. The situation was frightful. It would admit of no delay. Grace dashed to the desk and began to speak rapidly, in a frightened voice, to the clerk.

"That woman"—she exclaimed—"the one who just went up in the elevator—she is going to Miss Ruth Morton's room—you must stop her—there is no telling what she may not do—send up, quick—quick! Miss Morton is in the greatest danger."

The clerk looked at her, his mouth half open with surprise.

"I—What do you mean, Miss? I don't understand you. We have no Miss Morton here." He regarded Grace apprehensively and out of the corner of his eye looked toward the cashier, as though he contemplated calling on him for assistance in case this apparently mad woman became violent.

Grace gave a groan of despair.

"The daughter of the elderly woman, about whom I asked you before. Her name is Morton. Her daughter, Ruth, is staying here under an assumed name—Bradley, you say it is? Oh—please be quick. I know what I am talking about. That woman who came here a while ago is a dangerous character. She gave Mrs. Morton some message or other to get her out of the way and as soon as she had gone came back into the hotel, and went upstairs in the elevator. Didn't you see her?"

"Yes, Miss, I saw her. She was a friend of Mrs. Bradley's she said, and I supposed Mrs. Bradley had told her to go upstairs."

"I tell you that woman who just went upstairs means harm—terrible harm to Miss Bradley—Miss Morton. Oh—don't stand there wasting time. Come up with me at once and you will see that I am right——"

"But—who are you, Miss? What have you to do with the matter?"

"What difference does that make, if what I say is true? If you must know, I am a detective employed by Mrs. Morton——"

"Employed by Mrs. Morton! And yet you did not know her when you saw her! My dear woman, your story does not hang together——"

"It is my husband, Mr. Duvall, who is employed by her. He was registered here under the name of Bradley, too. I am trying to help him."

"Oh!" The clerk seemed somewhat more inclined to accord her serious attention. "Very well. I will go to the room with you, and see if everything is all right."

"And hurry, please—hurry." Grace started toward the elevators.

Then a sudden thought came to her. Suppose the woman was to make her escape, coming down in one of the elevators, while she and the clerk were going up in another. There had been ample time she knew for her to have murdered Ruth, were that her plan, and have already left the room.

"Wait just a moment," she cried to the clerk, who had said a few words to one of his assistants, and was leaving the desk to join her. "I must speak to my cabman but I'll be back in a moment." She dashed through the entrance doors and hurried to the point where Leary sat at his steering wheel.

"Wait here," she whispered to him, "until I come back, unless the woman we have been following comes out. If she does come out and drives away, follow her, and find out where she goes. Then telephone me here. I will leave my name at the desk, and wait until I hear from you."

"Instruct your telephone operators," she said to him, "to let me know, in case anyone calls up Mrs. Duvall."

The clerk gave the necessary instructions, and the two then entered one of the elevators and quickly made their way to the seventh floor, upon which Mrs. Morton's apartment was located.

There was no one in the corridor when they left the elevator, and the clerk, who knew the location of the suite, hastened to it at once.

They reached the door. Grace was conscious of a feeling of apprehension, a sense of impending disaster. Her heart pounded violently as she waited for the answer to the clerk's knocks. She waited in vain. Only silence, grim, terrible, rewarded his efforts.

"Something has happened," Grace whispered as the clerk again rapped upon the door, this time more loudly than before.

Again there was no reply no evidence of the presence of anyone in the girl's rooms.

"Open the door!" Grace cried. "Something terrible must have occurred!"

The clerk took the pass key with which he had provided himself and inserted it in the lock. A moment later the door swung open and the two of them entered the room.

It was in total darkness. Grace clutched at her heart, fearing what she believed the switching on of the lights would reveal. The clerk without loss of time pressed the push button near the door. The room was at once flooded with light.

Grace glanced about, then gave a momentary sigh of relief. The room, the small parlour of the suite, was quite vacant. At its further end the door to Ruth Morton's bedroom stood ajar.

With the clerk beside her, Grace hurriedly crossed the room. With a prayer in her heart she pushed open the bedroom door. Her companion at the same moment felt along the door jamb for the electric switch. In an instant the bedroom lights were turned on.

Then Grace saw that her fears had been fully justified. On the floor, halfway between the door and the bed, lay Ruth Morton, apparently lifeless. Her face was the color of chalk, her eyes were closed. With a cry Grace fell on her knees besides the unconscious girl and with trembling fingers felt her heart. The clerk, a weak faced young man, stood gazing at the scene before him in amazed horror.

"She isn't dead!" Grace exclaimed, turning an excited face to him. "Her heart is still beating. Send for a doctor quick!" Then taking the unconscious girl in her arms, she lifted her to the bed.

CHAPTER XV.

Richard Duvall, realizing that the woman he sought had once more eluded him, was for the moment unable to decide what to do next. He was oppressed by a sense of failure. Apparently this enemy of Ruth Morton's was far more resourceful than he had supposed. She had gotten clear away, and there appeared no means by which he could trace her. That the second cab, the one he had halted, contained Grace, did not of course occur to him. The trail appeared to be hopelessly lost.

Still, his investigations in Miss Ford's room had not been entirely fruitless, although they had also added a startlingly new element to the mystery of the case. Who was the person who had attacked him from the closet? Was it the woman who had just left? He did not think so. Nor was it Miss Ford herself. There had been something uncanny about the whole experience; he was by no means certain that his assailant had been a human being at all. And yet, its cries—its fingers, tearing at his throat. He was unable to account for the experience at all, and determined, as soon as possible, to repeat his visit, and sift the matter to the bottom.

He remembered that he had seen two persons in the Ford girl's room, after his hasty retreat. Two women, he thought, outlined against the lighted square of the window. One of these had already left the house. The other, Miss Ford herself, was still there. He determined to interview her at once.

Of course, he told himself, to do so would put her on her guard, but his visit to her room had already done that, and doubtless accounted for her companion's hasty flight. And there was something to be gained, by letting her realize that she was under suspicion. She would at once try to communicate with, to warn, her confederate, and it was in just such ways as this, Duvall's experience told him, that criminals so often betrayed themselves. If, by frightening Miss Ford, he could cause her to flee—to join her companion—the tracing of the latter would become comparatively simple. He went up to the door of No. 162 and rang the bell.

The same woman answered his summons as had answered before. She seemed somewhat uneasy—disturbed.

"I want to see Miss Marcia Ford," Duvall told her.

"Very well, sir. Come in. I will tell Miss Ford. What name, please?"

"Say that Mr. Bradley is calling."

The girl ushered him into a dark parlour, lighted by a single lowered gas jet, and suggestive of the gloom of ages, in its walnut furniture, its dismal pictures and ornaments. He took a seat, and waited for the appearance of Miss Ford.

She arrived in a few moments, a slender ordinary-looking girl, in white shirtwaist and black skirt.

"You are Mr. Bradley?" she asked regarding the detective with a look of inquiry.

"Yes. I came to see you about a matter of importance."

"What is it?"

AT 60 ENJOYING PERFECT HEALTH

By the time a man or woman is 60, the kidneys and bladder need a little help to keep them in good working order.

Rheumatism and backache so often accompany the later years of life, most people have an idea health and vigor cannot be expected much after the fiftieth year.

As a matter of fact there is no basis for these fears, we could show a number of letters proving our contention that if GIN PILLS are taken to keep the urine normal, prevent colds settling on the kidneys or bladder, and ward off Rheumatic attacks, almost everyone can enjoy perfect health at this late period.

To quote from a letter received from a prominent Consulting Engineer of New York City—"Your remedy I find, at 60 years of age, to give perfect relief from the Kidney and Bladder troubles incident to one of my age."

Perhaps you know a man or woman whose life is made a torment by Rheumatism, Backache, Sciatica, or Swollen Joints. Don't let it continue, for Gin Pills will surely bring that longed-for relief. You don't have to buy Gin Pills to try them. Write for a free sample. CUTTING THE ROSES.

How to Remove the Flowers Without Injuring the Plants.

There is a right as well as a wrong way to cut roses. If not cut correctly the blossom producing properties of the plants may be seriously injured. This applies particularly, of course, to rose plants chosen and grown especially to supply cut flowers. Such roses will be largely of the perpetual blooming sorts.

When a rose is cut from such a plant only two or three eyes of the current season's growth of that branch should be left on the plant. This should give the roses very long stems. Succeeding blossoms should be cut to the ground. It will seem like destroying the bush to take so much off, but if the object is the production of roses the cutting away of the surplus wood will simply further the desired end.

If the spring pruning has not been sufficiently severe the plant is likely to have long, naked stalks and short stems to the flowers. In such a case only one or two strong leaf buds should be left on the branch when the flower is cut, so as to stimulate as much growth as possible from the base of the plant.

The temptation is great to leave wood where there are two or more buds on one branch, some being small when the terminal one is open. This bad practice can be avoided by pinching off all side shoots after a bud has formed on the end of a branch, thus leaving the stem perfectly clean and willowy.

Corn Bread.

In making corn bread be sure to get the proper kind of meal; otherwise it needs flour to keep it together. Ask for the old southern milled cornmeal. It is very fine, white and needs no flour. A good recipe for corn bread is as follows: One and one-half cupfuls of cornmeal, one-half cupful of milk, a pinch of salt, a piece of butter the size of an egg, one-half teaspoonful of baking powder and one egg. It must not be too stiff. Put in a pan that will make the batter about one and one-half inches thick and bake till brown. It is impossible to make the southern corn bread with the coarsely milled meal, says a southerner.

Animal Criminals.

As a species of hardened criminal among placid herbivorous animals none is worse than the bison, or American buffalo. Toward man and beast and even among themselves these vicious, vindictive and agile brutes, whose half brothers on the other continents do not fear even the terrific onslaughts of lions and tigers, are in a state of almost continual warfare. They are among the wickedest rogues ever seen in a zoo.

Pride a Strange Thing.

Pride is a strange thing. For instance, a man would much rather be seen by the younger and prettier set of neighbor women filling up the gasoline tank than emptying the garbage, though the latter act is really much more commendable in that he just does it to help his poor, hardworking wife that much.

THE food value of cocoa has been proven by centuries of use, and dietitians and physicians the world over are enthusiastic in their endorsements of it. Voice of The People

"JUDGE NOT."

Editor of the Examiner.

Sir, — Occasionally a clergyman commits a serious mistake in referring to Christian Science in a condemnatory manner. The third attack during the year from the same pulpit was made recently, and again illustrates the fact that people who try to convince others that Christian Science is bad, continually find themselves relying on hearsay and misrepresentations.

The statement was made by this clergyman that Chrisian Science was of "Satanic origin." There is nothing in this statement which has any application to Christian Science whatsoever, and it serves no useful purpose. Clergymen who understand Christian Science and its redeeming virtues speak quite differently of it. This clergyman's remark about Christian Science standing as "Satan's masterpiece" is, to say the least, irresistibly funny, when read side by side with what many others of his own cloth have said; and a minister's words are surely most worthy of acceptance when they are sent forth in charity and justice both of which are Christian virtues of far greater value to Christendom than the denunciation and misrepresentation of other religions.

Through Christian Science the sick are being healed, the drunkard is reformed, the atheist and infidel are being led to God. Hundreds of thousands of people gladly testify that Christian Science has increased their faith in the true and living God; it has aroused an interest in and love for the Bible, and awakened a greater desire to follow in the footsteps of Christ Jesus. A teaching that is accomplishing so much good in he world cannot be of Satanic origin. Such accusations are akin to those brought against the Master when He was accused of doing His works through Beelzebub. Christ Jesus said, "A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit, neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit. . . . Wherefore by heir fruits ye shall know them." Christ Jesus, the greatest teacher the world has ever known, expounded this Science and left it to us as a rich legacy to be used and proven. Speaking of His works He prophetically said, "He that believeth on me, the works that Ido shall he do also; and greater works tha nthese shall he do," showin gthus that His scientific teachings were to endure. According to Gibbon in his "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire," and to other historians, the followers of Jesus continued to use this scientific knowledge for three hundred years. Then through the political ambitions of Constantine th etrue understandings became darkened, and it thus remained for hundreds of years, until Mary Baker Eddy as a result of her study and search in the Scriptures discovered anew this Christ Science, and with it healed herself and others and proved the truth of Christ Jesus' teachings, the Red Cross Society in the United States, in an interview printed in the New York American, said: "While I have not studied deeply enough the great religion founded by Mrs. Eddy to consider myself a Christian Scientist, I can say that I look upon Christian Science, as I understand it, as the most ideally beautiful yet the mos practical and comforting of beliefs. It is doing more in the world to-day, and will continue to as more people become cognisant of the beauty of its teachings, than any other one influence for good. Mrs. Eddy should have the respect, admiration, and love of the whole Nation, for she is its greatest woman." It is interesting to know that Miss Barton later became more and more interested in Christian Science, so that this founder of the Red Cross Society found herself growing into a full agreement with the teaching and practice of Christian Science.

Until the enemies of Christian Science test its efficiency, according to the rules which disclose its merits or demerits, it would be just to observe the scriptural precepts, "Judge not," and "Lean not on thine own understanding."

It is suggested that before this clergyman gets through with his sermons on "Letters to the Churches," that he would serve the cause of Christ better if he took the following for his next Sunday text. If he does this, and lets himself out the way he did during he visit of Dr. Workman to Peterborough, he may be assured of a full house, with no empty pews in the front row or in the gallery: To the Church in Peterborough write—I know thy ways, I know thy works, and where thou dwellest; nevertheless, I have somewhat against thee.

Peterborough, Dec. 3, 1917.

Latest Decree From Paris

The "Little Dress" For Morning or Afternoon

Materials—Style and Value

NEW YORK, Dec. 15.—Somehow the picture of Paris, wartime Paris, is just as fascinating as it was in times of peace. The spirit of the French people is as great as ever: gaiety, and the determination to be gay, is in the very air. They are still designing wonderful things "over there" and we are getting the benefit of them as of old.

The latest news contains much talk of "the little dress." The term is quite descriptive, too, of this type of frock. Simplicity, drummed into our ears for so long that we are fairly sick of the word, lurks in every fold. Cunningly designed these frocks are, for they make a little material and trimming go a long way. Some are one-piece, others simulate the one-piece dress; and still others belong to the tunic family, ever growing in popularity. A simple collar-and-cuff set, a touch of embroidery in the same or a contrasting shade, buttons or a bit of fur, any of these may act as trimming. It is impossible to say where the line is to be drawn, saying, "this is for morning, and this for afternoon."

The Panel Dress.

One hears a great deal about the panel dress; it is particularly good for combinations of materials and colors; though made of one material, it is very smart indeed. The dress has a panel front and back, with straight pleated side sections, and the natural waistline may be defined by a belt, two belts or a girdle. The one illustrated here is of brown wool-mixture, with a novel collar of chamois and a yellow kid belt. An odd conceit of a well-known designer is to leave the pleats unpressed, thus giving a soft appearance than would otherwise be possible.

Material Values.

There is an unusual fact about materials that very few women realize or take into account when planning a new costume, and this is that the style changes in regard to dress goods. It is absolutely impossible to make a stiff perky bustle out of soft crepe de Chine or Georgette crepe (unless some stiffening be used) and the straight-silhouette dresses must be made of soft material; and full skirts stand out, puffed sleeves, bustles, and so forth, require taffeta, tulle or some other material with "body" to it. Styles do change materials. The first value of a material is its wearing quality; for, after all, the material that wears well is always handsomer and makes up better than any other. Serge is ever a stand-by, gabardine, broadcloth and wool mixtures rarely go "out of style." The silk goods styles change more quickly, and one year everything must be made of taffeta, and the next of charmeuse or soft satin. Study the silhouette of the mode with intelligence, and you cannot go far wrong as to the material to be used.

SUSPECTED SPY IS ARRESTED IN HALIFAX.

In His Pockets Were Found Maps of the City.

HALIFAX, Dec. 14.—A suspected spy was arrested on board the relief steamer Northland, which arrived yesterday from Boston.

He gave the name of Henry French, but the police ascertained that his name is Louis Vosburg. He claims to have been born at Concord, N.H. In his possession was found a large sum of money a first-class railway ticket from Boston to Halifax, maps of this city, and some important papers. He could give no satisfactory explanation for his presence on the steamer.

To Have Smooth, White, Soft Skin All Winter

Does your skin chap or roughen easily in this weather, or become unduly red or blotchy? Here is a quick, easy way to overcome the trouble and keep your complexion beautifully white, smooth and soft the winter long. Just get an ounce of ordinary mercolized wax at the nearest drugstore and use a little before retiring, as you would cold cream. Upon arising, remove the coating with sudsy water. The wax, through some peculiar attribute, flecks off the rough, discolored or blemished skin. The worn-out cuticle comes off just like dandruff, only in almost invisible particles. Mercolized wax simply hastens Nature's work. Used as required, it keeps the face constantly free from devitalized scarf skin, and only the healthy, young-looking skin is in evidence. It's the best treatment known for weatherbeaten aged, muddy, freckled, pimpled and all unbeautiful complexions.

Some skins wrinkle easily in winter. There's an excellent remedy in a harmless wash lotion made by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint witch hazel. This will quickly eradicate every line.

HAPLESS HALIFAX.

But yesterday, Atlantic's flood beside Stood Halifax, of Canada the pride.
Fair rose her stately towers and shining dome,
Secure and safe her peaceful, happy homes;
Whereon at morn the sun auspicious shone—
Ere noon, by dire disaster overthrown.
Their daily tasks the people, calm, pursue,
Nor thought of dark, impending danger knew.

But suddenly the cruel hand of Fate
On her has fallen, with a crushing weight;
And the proud city is a ghastly heap
Of ruins, and her stricken people weep,
Homeless and hungry, amid horrors dread,
In naemless graves stark lie unnumbered dead;
Alike is sunk, in desolation, all—
The humble cottage and the princely hall.

The fearful tidings stoutest hearts appal,
As o'er the wires flash for aid the call
To us in plenty's lap, who sumptuous fare,
Our portion with those needy ones to share;
As kind and free and generous as heaven
To us (no worthier than they) has given
Our goods and gold, ungrudgingly bestow
To held and cheer them in their want and woe.

Remembered long will be the fatal day
That reft from many a home the joy away,
Left them a lonely, wrecked, deserted place,
Enwrapped in gloom no sun can ever chase.
Mournfully now old Ocean's sighing surge
Seems ever murmuring a funeral dirge
For those who perished by untimely doom—
A sacrifice and offering to the tomb.

There oft may ponder the chance passer by
On all the works and wealth that wasted lie,
Till fancy hears those smouldering ruins say:
"Thus sink earth's fairest structures in decay,
And only eternal and unfailing stands
The mansions builded not by mortal hands."

Home Health Club

Politics and Health: A queer combination, but in these days we find strange bedfellows. At the beginning of the war there was no strong or political machine outside of the two dominant parties than the American Medical Association. Not only was it a tremendous political power, but on account of the insidious nature of its work and its methods, that power was not only a menace to mankind, but to the medical profession itself. Why this is so is too long a story, and would be of no value now.

The war has changed conditions. From being self-seekers, the members of the noblest profession of men have so changed their attitude that the percentage of servers in the form of enlistment for serving his fellowman, is the highest of all professions, and the political activities of the so-called medical trust will be, for the time at least, held in abeyance.

Medical students have been called to the colours in such numbers that when added to the number of enlisted men from active practice, those remaining will have all and more than they can attend to for a number of years without seeking to compel the people to follow a certain brand of medical practice.

Another factor that is now appearing on the horizon, and which I predict is going to dominate the political field for many years, is a party that is building its foundation upon its desire to get at the real needs of the people, the great mass of producers and consumers, regardless of the protests of the so-called parasites, the exploiters, the middlemen. Through what is called "The Non-Partisan League," the farmers of North Dakota have stepped into control in that state, and the league has now joined forces with The American Society of Equity and various labour organisations, and as rapidly as this combination can expand through a system of practical education of the voters they will carry this republic, state by state, regardless of north and south, east and west, and the people will then really govern themselves. Upon the cool, calm judgment of these men will rest the responsibility as to whether their plans—simple, practical and good as they are—can be fully worked out.

So far as I have been able to learn the present leaders of this movement are intensely loyal and patriotic, and thy thoroughly realise the menace to democracy that now confronts our nation. By putting into operation the system of co-operation between the producer and consumer they hope to stop the worse than outright traitorism in the form of profiteering and thus enable the people to render to the Government the direct benefit of their labour.

One of the first and soundest acts of the state officers elected by the league in North Dakota was to put the public school system on a practically useful basis and in such a manner that there was left no chance for exploitation by politicians or book publishers. And one of the other big things thatthey are going to do is to make at least as good provision for preventing disease among the people especially the children, as has heretofore been furnished by the Agricultural Department for a sick hog or a calf.

It is perfectly all right for the department to send exports to various parts of the country to find out the cause of the hog sickness and then have that expert go back and make an exhaustive report, which is printed and distributed as a Farmers' Bulletin and then for anothre expert to go and experiment with various remedies to see if he can cure the hog. He also makes voluminous reports, but sometimes these reports fail to tell just how to make the remedy that cured the hog. Later on however, the remedy is exploited at a big price by private individuals or a big corporation.

To cure this form of profiteering a system of paying the doctors of men and of animals for keeping them well, and with no pay for services while they are sick, would soon make available for all mankind, as well as animalkind, every secret formula and every sanitary device of value that is known to the profession.

QUESTIONS FOR PARENTS.

Why is your boy or girl studying music?

Is it to acquire an "accomplishment?"

Is it to dazzle the eyes and ears of friends of the family?

Is it to make Mrs. Jones envious?

Is it because some other child is studying?

Is it because you have a piano and require a musician as an extra attachment?

Is it to make money on the side?

Is it because you were unduly persuaded by a music teacher?

Or

Is it because you regard music as a means of civilization?

Is it because you desire to train the child to admire beautiful things?

Is it because you think the human ear should be trained as well as the hands?

Is it because you desire to give the child an understanding of the necessity of accuracy?

Is it because you believe in training the emotions as well as the intellect?

Is it to widen the child's understanding?

Is it to broaden and render keener his or her appreciation of the finer things of life?

It is no easy task but by patience and endurance can be accomplished.

You may win a cash prize by doing so. Many have done this as will be shown in the papers and address which we will send you. If you find the faces mark each one with an X, cut out the picture and send it to us, together with a slip of paper on which you have written the words "I have found all the faces and marked them." Write these plainly and neatly, as in case of ties, both writing and neatness are considered factors in this contest.

This may take up a little of your time but as TWO HUNDRED DOLLARS in cash and many merchandise prizes are given away, it is worth your time to take a little trouble over this matter. Remember all you have to do is to mark the faces, cut out the picture and write on a separate piece of paper the words, "I have found all the faces and marked them."

EVERYBODY WANTS HIS

All Sorts of Work Costs Dear in These Troublous Days.

It is a long way from the European battlefield to an Oregon huckleberry patch. A prominent magazine several weeks ago ingenuously illustrated that fact in an anecdote. It concerned an Indian who had year after year peddled huckleberries in Oregon at a fixed price a bucket. This year, so the story ran, the price was up.

"Are huckleberries scarcer this year than last? Does it require any more work to pick them? Do you have to go further for them?" and similar questions wereasked of the Indian by an interested housewife.

"No."

"Then why do you charge more?" she inquired.

"Huh! Damn big war in Europe," was the Indian's reply.

We all laughed over the story. But why did we laugh?

The carpenter can saw a board in two just as quick as he ever could. It requires no more labour to drive a nail tan it ever did. The shipyard employee can rivet a steel plate with out more than the accustomed exertion, and the motorman finds it no more difficult to grind the controller or throw on the air than in the status quo ante.

The grocer, the butcher, the milkman, the shoe merchant and the clothier have all rendered their monthly accounts. It is a touchy subject. It grows touchier every month. It is only a short while ago that we were rejoicing that the farmer was geting such high prices for his wheat and cattle and sheep. It was all right until the increase was handed down to the ultimate consumer. The ultimate consumer was not working any harder than he had before — huckleberries were just as plentiful. But he had to have more money with which to buy flour and meat, and shoe leather, and milk for the babies.

It spreads into every branch of industry. Even the farm labourer now is getting more, although he handles the plow and the binder with he same facility as of yore. The circle has got back to the farm in the shape of high wages and higher cost of everything the farmer uses. There is no longer much money in $2 wheat.

To what heights of living cost we would rise were it not for food control nobody can say. Probably huckleberries would sell by the dozen and every man would require the company of a bank messenger when he visited the merchant.

Few persons would work for money if it were not for the things they need or want that money will buy We not consistently measure the wage rate on the old standards It is not a question of what a man once did for a dollar, but one of the purchasing power of the dollar When that is upset the economic system is upset. Let us fondly hope that the new basis has now been reached and that each employment will soon get its just dues without recourse to disorder There is work to be done There are armies to maintain and munition The nation is spending billions for war, and meanwhile it must keep itself in productive trim. We cannot do that on starvation wages There is a "damn big war in Europe."—Oregonian.

The very deep collar is almost extinct and the high collar is growing more and more popular.

Ladies' Cigars

"Does your wife pick your clothes?
No—only the pockets."

When the time-worn gag, about the wife who picked the neckties and bought the cigars, finally died, this old joke came to life.

To-day, she can give away cigars and be certain that brother, husband, sweetheart will enjoy them.

For, such is the fame of ARABELA Cigars that she can get them at any tobacconists round any corner, in boxes of 10, 25 or 50 cigars.

As they contain only the finest blend of Havana tobaccos, they will please any discriminating smoker. They are mild, mellow and of delicate aroma.

For forty long years they have been a boon and a blessing to men, and, as Charlie says "ARABELA to-day is not merely the good old ARABELA, but a better cigar than ever."

Americans Tell Of Hun Atrocities

DESCRIBE WANTON CRUELTY.

NEW YORK.—Members of the 11th United States Engineers Regiment, who enlisted in this city and who have taken a prominent part in the recent action at Cambrai, have found the atrocities perpetrated by the Germans in retreat to be far worse than reported in the newspaper despatches. Letters received from them since they have been at the Front were read yesterday at a meeting of their parents, relatives, and friends at the Engineers' Society, 29 West Thirty-ninth Street. In almost every case the writer was a man who had not been inclined to place any faith in the reports of atrocities received in this country before he left for France.

On tarriving on the scene of action however, they found a state of affairs which, according to their letters, inspired them with the deepest resentment against the Hun, and made them regret that their country had waited so long before taking a hand in the war against Germany. Whole villages laid waste; thousands of women and children rendered desolate inmates of convents subjected to outrageous violence, graves pilfered homes dynamited which had not been touched by shell fire, were some of the acts disclosed to their eyes. Without reason or sense, for no military purpose whatever, the Germans according to the letters of the American engineers, make a systematic practice of devastating every bit of French soil that they leave in the course of a retreat. One of the officers of the regiment, in a letter to Robert Ridgeway, of the Public Service Commission, wrote:

"The devastated country and villages destroyed by shell fire, I suppose, must be expected. But the thing that makes one boil is the absolutely unnecessary and wanton destruction wrought by the retiring Hun. His usual wonderful and systematic methods have been applied to this destruction. Whole towns that have hardly been touched by shell fire have been completely destroyed by dynamite. We find nitches cut in the few standing walls and marked with the size of the charge to be used. Evidently every building had been systematically prepared in that way, long in advance, for blowing up upon retirement.

Graves Despoiled for Jewellery.

"So homes, beautiful chateaus, garden walls, little summer houses are all blown up. Shade trees, flowering shrubs are cut down so the trees will die. Cemeteries have been ransacked; graves and vaults opened; bones thrown about or in heaps on the ground. I have seen the cemeteries that are awful sights; one body dragged half-way out of the casket, coffin broken open, and the bones from several dumped into one. Evidently the boche was looking for jewellery—was simply malicious, or both.

"Those things could not be done without the knowledge and permission of the officers, and the thing is so complete that it looks as though it was all a part of an official programme. I never did believe the stories we got in America of the outrages. I have to believe them now, and they are many times worse than the stories that I heard at home. Certain Canadian and Scottish battalions take no prisoners. They give and ask no quarter. The reason is that the boche has several times crucified the Canadian and Scottish prisoners and held them above the trenches in view of their battalions. In one such case a Canadian battalion went right over the top after the trenches without orders. Very few of them have come back. A British chaplain told me that he knows personally of a Belgian convent where they found that fifty seven out of eighty-two nuns had been violated when the boche fell back.

"I cannot understand what the mental operations or processes of the Hun can be. I cannot understand what his object can be. It must be the wrathful spite of a disappointed and degenerate mind. In fairness to our many very fine acquaintances of German birth in America, I will say that the German prisoners I have seen appear to be largely a different type from the German in America. They look not of a particularly high type. Major —— does not agree with me in this. He says he can see among them the counterpart of every German he ever knew.

"The prisoners will not believe that we are American troops. They say: 'No, it is impossible. Our submarines have stopped all traffic between America and Europe.' That is the way with the German soldier, and I suppose every one in Germany is kept in ignorance of the true situation."

Terrible Tales by Refugees.

In conclusion, the writer states:

"It is too bad that America did not come in sooner. Now that we are in, I trust that the country will continue united in a strong determination to properly deal with the Hun not only for the grievances we have against him, but for the terrible campaign of frightfulness that he has waged against the millions of non-combatants. Only a few days I was talking to a French clergyman who had just got back from Germany through Switzerland. He had been driven with the whole civilian population ahead of the boche when they fell back some months ago. If all of America could hear the horrible tales that these refugees tell and see the country about us here, there would be five million American soldiers training for war and war loans would be over-subscribed by billions.

"We frequently see or hear evidence among the soldiers and officers of the British and French of the wonder and disappointment that they experienced as America stayed out month after month for these years. There is a story going around here of an American soldier who objected to a glass of beer, claiming that it was very flat. The reply of the barmaid was, 'Why shouldn't it be? It has been waiting three years for you.'"

Another letter from an enlisted man in the company, Donald McIsaac, read in part as follows:

"I have seen work of these Dutchmen and am seeing it every day. My old feelings of giving them a sporting scrap have been changed to one of hatred, and nothing would please me more than to get in with a pioneer engineer outfit where I could get a chance at them, and they wouldn't get a sporting fight either. In spite of the fact that the papers have been hammering it in for three years, you don't realise the rottenness of these reptiles unless you see their work first hand.

"The Kaiser seems to be an extremely stupid and stubborn man, but I think old Hindenburg is infinitely more stubborn. As near as I can figure from German political events, the Kaiser seems to have lost all control of Hindenburg in the last six months. Also the prisoners I have seen who were recently taken all seem to be in good shape, and this somewhat discredits the newspaper reports of the German lack of men."

The meeting of friends and relatives at the Engineers' Society was held under the auspices of the auxiliary of the 11th Regiment of Engineers, the purpose being to exchange views on ways and means of keeping in touch with the needs of the men. Frederick Cranford presided, and the letters were read by Robert Ridgeway. Aside from these depicting the atrocities of the Germans, other letters were read which clearly indicated the healthy, cheerful spirit with which the engineers were facing the business of modern warfare. Not one had a word of regret or grievance, unless it was a complaint that the engineers were not permitted to see more action.

One letter from a boy in the regiment, William Stephens, told in detail of the effect that France, French women, and French cooking were having upon him. He could speak French a little, and therefore was in a position, he wrote, to have much more fun than many of his comrades not similarly equipped.

TRADING IN STOCKS.

Things a Man Must Know to Be a Successful Speculator.

"All those who are trading in the stock market might well ask themselves whether they are speculators or gamblers," says John K. Barnes in the World's Work. "Any one can gamble in stocks, but it is not profitable. It takes a high degree of specialized knowledge and training to speculate. Here are some of the complex requirements of technical knowledge that are indispensable to the successful speculator:

"He should know how to read the business barometers. Among these are the bank clearings throughout the country, which show the rapidity with which money is changing hands through the banks, and thus gives the best measure we have of the business doing; the unfilled orders on the books of the United States Steel corporation, our largest industrial company, which are reported ten days after the close of each month; railroad gross earnings, which are now reported weekly by some roads and monthly by all, and railroad net earnings, which show the prosperity in that important field; the production figures for coal, iron, copper, etc.; the export and import figures, which control our international credit position and have been of great importance since the war began; money rates and the elements that affect them—gold imports, foreign loans, etc., and probably, above all, he should watch carefully the crop prospects throughout the country.

"Unless a man understands the meanings of these things and has a very special and unusual temperament besides he can never succeed as a speculator."

In other words, the average man has no chance in the speculative markets.

MANSARD'S ROOF.

By It the Architect Won His Son's Life From Louis XIV.

The great hall of the Hotel de Ville of Arles, designed by Mansard, is the wonder and admiration of every one who has seen it on account of the groined roof.

In regard to this a neighboring cafetier tells a somewhat grim story. King Louis XIV. happened to be passing through the city just at the time Mansard was superintending the completion of his creation. The roof was supported by a powerful pillar. The monarch admired the work and congratulated the architect on his design. At that moment the architect was passing through great domestic tribulation. He had a son under sentence of death, so he thought it would be a good opportunity to intercede on behalf of the lad.

Mansard threw himself at the feet of the king and said: "Your majesty sees in the center that massive column? If you will spare the life of my son I will remove the unsightly pillar, and the roof shall stand without support."

"Mansard," replied the king, "if you accomplish that miracle I will pardon your son, but if you fail I will hang you with him."

The architect removed the pillar without great difficulty and with the result desired. The cafetier is a philosopher, and he concludes his story with the reflection that had not Mansard's son been a scamp the hall at Arles would be just like any other hall.

Thoughtful.

"Does the new clerk observe due precaution against fire?"

"He always throws his cigarettes into some one else's wastebasket."

Economy is half the battle of life. It is not so hard to earn money as to spend it well.

VIRTUE OF THRIFT.

Cultivate It Earnestly, but Do Not Carry It to Excess.

Thrift is a composite quality. It embraces within itself nearly all of the great virtues. It involves industry, prudence, forethought, self denial.

It certainly has no relation to niggardliness or meanness.

Some men would let their grandmothers starve for the sake of a few dollars. Such action cannot be called thrifty. A virtue carried to excess becomes a vice and is no longer a virtue.

Thrift that does not take into partnership honesty of character develops into covetousness and avarice.

Thrift is the opposite of thriftlessness, prodigality, improvidence and waste.

Thrift means better homes and better food, more comfort and enjoyment, less waste and less anxiety.

It is possible that a large proportion of people have earnings so small that saving seems impossible. But this is no reason for their being unthrifty. On the contrary, it is reason for making the best and the most of the little they have for their health, comfort and true happiness.

A few dollars in a home or a savings bank, or any safe investment, is as good seed as ever was sown.

Out of it grow confidence, quickened energies, firmer courage, more stalwart thought and hope, more orderly citizenship, education for the children and the independence and self respect that lift aimless, hopeless drudges up to the true manhood that aspires and achieves. —Christian Herald.

QUEER WEDDING CUSTOMS.

In India the Native Guests Literally Paint the Town Red.

They have some curious wedding customs in India. At a native wedding in Bombay the wedding guests literally "paint the town red" by throwing on one another a kind of red powder until they are crimson from head to foot. Their disordered white draperies, the stains and splashes on their faces and hair give them the appearance of victims of a massacre. In India halls which may be secured for a small rental are provided for these ceremonies. But weddings are also celebrated in the Hindu temples, with priests in attendance. In a Hindu temple a bride of twelve must seat herself on a stone and be drenched with water by her bridesmaids. Behind her, her mother is subjected to a similar deluge, and at a short distance behind the bride's mother the grandmother undergoes the same treatment, while in front of the dripping trio two priests sit beside a briskly burning wood fire mumbling the prescribed words for the ceremony. One casts a few grains of rice into the fire and the other, with a ladle, throws into it a few drops of oil.

During these performances the bridegroom, seated in a carriage outside the temple, receives the congratulations of his friends. In the far east the bridegroom would seem to be the member of the party most to be envied.

Good Reasons.

"I see Maud is crossing the street to the shady side, which shows her retiring, modest disposition."

"What has that to do with it?"

"Don't you see how she shrinks from a place in the sun?"

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Wedding Tour

It Was In an Improvised Conveyance

By JOHN TURNLEE

Billy Mudge at thirteen went to work in the freight house of the R. F. and L. railroad. Billy was a good boy, did his work well—when the circus was not in town—and was advanced from time to time till at the age of seventeen he was quite valuable to the agent in charge of the station. He was often commissioned to attend to the loading and unloading of freight and frequently gave orders as to the disposition of cars.

About this time—when Billy was seventeen—he and Molly Burnes fell in love with each other. Whether Billy first fell in love with Molly or Molly first fell in love with Billy doesn't matter, and there was probably no first about it on either side, but a natural mating, just like a pair of doves. However, since Molly was but fifteen she knew, as Billy knew, that any suggestion of marriage would result in her removal to a distant boarding school, where she would see her youthful lover only at vacation time, and then only clandestinely. So she said never a word to any one about her "affair" and captioned Billy not to do so either.

These two youngsters had all the freedom they could have wished for, since no one dreamed that, not having quite emerged from childhood, they would plot marriage. Yet that is exactly what they did.

"Let's get married," said Billy one day.

"What'll we live on?" asked the prudent Molly.

"I have $40 a month."

"Do you have all of that?"

"Yes, I do, and next year I'll get another raise."

"But when people get married the bride must have a trousseau, and they go on a wedding tour, and all that."

"I can't do anything about a trousseau, but I think I can get passes on the road for the tour."

"But to ask for passes would give us away, wouldn't it?"

"I don't know but it would," Billy admitted doubtfully.—Then an idea came into his head. It wasn't much of an idea when he conceived it, but it developed with mushroom growth, especially when he communicated it to Molly.

"What are you thinking about?" she asked.

"Why, I was thinking that there are idle freight cars in the railroad yard, and we might contrive to get a wedding journey in one of them."

"How in the world could we do that?"

"While the car is standing in the yard we might fit it up, and then I could get it coupled on to a train"—

"What kind of a train?"

"A freight train, of course. We couldn't aspire to going on a passenger train."

"Oh!"

"We could settle before starting where we would go, and I could make out the ticket for the car and put it"—

"We'll go to Wharton, Lucy Carter is there. We can see her. Maybe she'll show us some attention—give us a tea party or something like that."

"What will we need for the journey in the way of furniture? There's nothing at all in the car, you know."

"Shall we have to get our meals in it?"

"Certainly. We can't leave it till we get to the end of the route. We'd be discovered."

"So we would. Well, we'll need a cook stove. There's one in the wood house mother discarded when we got the new range."

"All right. I can take it away at night."

"And the serving table with folding legs would be handy. Old crockery will do, won't it? There's plenty in the kitchen pantry."

"We'll need something to sleep on."

"There are old bedsteads in the garret."

"I expect we'll have to be content with something easier carried than a bedstead."

"How would a hammock do? One with a"—

"A cot would be better. There's one at the station—unclaimed freight. I'll only have to carry it to the car."

"Since it's summer time we will need very little covering. How about provisions? I suppose I must provide them."

"Bring what you can. I'll buy some meat and things that can't be kept long. There's one important thing in the way that I'm afraid will block us. Who's going to marry us?"

"Oh, goody gracious! I never thought of that."

"We'll have to go to some parson who doesn't know us. I'll fool him with a false beard, and you wear a dress reaching to the floor. You look old for your age."

"Maybe I can pass for eighteen."

After this preliminary dialogue both set to work slyly to make the necessary preparations. Billy's mind being on his matrimonial scheme, his employer found it hard to get much work out of him, and, as for Molly, she appeared so innocent, was so quiet and so sweet to every one that it seemed butter wouldn't melt in her mouth. Yet all this time the minx was gathering stores for her wedding journey.

The car Billy selected was an old caboose that had been converted into an ordinary box car. It had since been discarded. Billy remembered that he must seal it up and couldn't do this from the inside, so he made a trapdoor in the floor. They put the bridal outfit in the car at night when the yard was deserted. Billy took Molly out one evening, ostensibly to the circus, but really to the car. He had provided candles, and Molly, who, as her mother's assistant, had learned housekeeping, put everything in order. Then they sat down on a couple of stools, and it is questionable if any couple about to be married looking over the sumptuous dwelling they were to occupy together took more pleasure in it than these two youngsters in what was before them.

"We won't need curtains, will we?" remarked Molly. "How about light in the daytime?"

"The car's an old one. There are plenty of cracks."

"No need for a garbage can. The trapdoor will do for that—that is, unless we stop too long in one place."

"We'll be moving most of the time."

"I couldn't bring my piano, could I?"

"No; you couldn't."

"Seems to me we should have at least one window. We can't see out as it is."

"I'll tell you what I can do. I can cut a square place in the side and put hinges on it."

"Oh, do! It will be so much nicer to be able to look out and see the scenery!"

It was agreed that they would be married and return to their homes, watching their opportunity to board their car and get it coupled to an outgoing train. So one Saturday afternoon when Billy was not engaged at his work he borrowed his father's horse and buggy, and he and Molly, provided with articles necessary to make them look like a man and a woman, sallied forth and drove to a person ten miles distant. But they failed to fool him, and he told them to go home. Molly was a bit discouraged, but Billy said:

"We'll try another parson."

They tried several, the last being old and half blind. He married them, and they returned to their separate homes. If Molly had been older she would have been in a flutter; as it was she was simply more docile than usual.

A freight train was scheduled to start at 11 o'clock at night. Shortly after the wedding, when the family were in bed, Molly stole out of her window on to the shed, dropped to the ground and made for the car. Billy was there and, after putting her in, shut the door, sealed it and ordered it attached to the train. When this was done he entered it through the trap, and he and Molly waited breathlessly till they felt themselves moving.

The next morning there was a hubbub in the Burnes family. Molly's disappearance being coincident with Billy's not turning up at the freight office was a pointer, and during the day the freight agent noticed that the place where the old car had been standing so long was vacant. Nevertheless he could not get it through his head that the disappearance of the car could have anything to do with the absence of either Billy or Molly.

However, during the afternoon succeeding the flight while consulting with Mr. Burnes over the incident he mentioned the fact of the missing car. Mr. Burnes went home and while talking over the flight with his wife mentioned the matter to her. There are some things a woman can see through a millstone better than a man.

"I wonder"—said Mrs. Burnes, then stopped.

"Wonder what?"

"Do you know that old stove in the wood house?"

"Yes."

"It's gone. I missed it this morning when I went for some kindling."

"What stupidity! How can the old cook stove have anything to do with Molly's disappearance?"

"I do believe those two children have gone off in that car."

Her husband stood looking at her in a mild sort of manner for a time, then turned and hurried back to the freight house. It was not long before a passenger train started in the direction the 11 p. m. freight had gone, and Mr. Burnes went on it. He brought up at Wharton, where he made inquiries of the agent. A yard hand who heard him said:

"I know where those children are."

"Where?"

"I won't tell unless you promise to forgive them."

Mr. Burnes objected, but finally promised.

"They're in a car in the yard. I saw a light shining through a crack and investigated.

Taking up a lantern, he led the way to the car, threw aside the door, and there were the bride and groom eating supper by candlelight on Mrs. Burnes' sewing table. The sight was too much for the father's wrath. He burst into a laugh.

"Oh, papa," pleaded Molly, "don't take us home!"

But that was the end of the wedding tour. The couple were taken home, and after many suggestions as to what was to be done a home was provided for them. Billy's salary was advanced, and they set up housekeeping in something better than a discarded freight car.

Mr. and Mrs. Mudge have a daughter fifteen years old. Her name is Molly, and her mother says she wouldn't trust her any more than she would have trusted herself at that age. She watches Molly like a cat. When Mr. Mudge asks his wife if she didn't choose wisely she replies:

"Suppose I did. I shouldn't have gone on a wedding trip in a freight car."

Oh, to Be Free!

"Just think, Bobby," said his mother, "those poor little children are orphans and have no papa or mamma to care for them! You wouldn't like to be a lone orphan, would you?"

"I feel like it sometimes, ma," was Bobby's reply.

DEATH TO THE MOSQUITO.

Attack the Pest by Warring Upon Its Breeding Places.

By doing away with breeding places such as tin cans, broken crockery and various receptacles that hold water, by the drainage of bodies of water likely to contain immature mosquitoes, by application of oil to bodies of water that cannot be drained or the introduction of fish into pools that cannot either be drained or oiled millions of mosquitoes may be destroyed.

Water is necessary for the life of the mosquito. The eggs which are laid on the surface of the water by the adult mosquito hatch in from twenty-four hours to several days, depending on the temperature. The larvae issue from the lower ends of the eggs and wriggle about in the water.

The larvae of the house mosquito rest with the tips of the abdomen at the surface of the water and the heads hanging downward. The larvae of the malaria fever mosquito lie parallel with the surface of the water to obtain air. In from one week to ten days they change to another form, the pupae, which have two respiratory tubes on the thorax. These pupae float in the water and transform to adults in from five to six days. The adults winter in the dormant condition.

The germ causing malaria fever has been carefully and repeatedly traced through its life history, and it has with certainty been found to pass a part of its existence in man and part in the body of the mosquito. By the bite of the mosquito the malarial fever organism is transmitted to man. No practical methods have been devised to destroy adult mosquitoes. All successful methods so far have been to check their numbers by either doing away with hiding places or by destroying the young mosquitoes.

Kerosene oil applied to the water surface at the rate of one-half teacupful to one barrel of water or one ounce of kerosene to fifteen square feet of water is sufficient to destroy any young mosquitoes that might be present in the water. An application of the kerosene should be made every fifteen days.

RHODES DIED UNSATISFIED.

His Last Words Were, "So Little Done, So Much to Do."

"So little done, so much to do."

This was the sigh of Cecil Rhodes, one of the greatest men the world ever knew. John Hays Hammond, who knew him well, tells about Rhodes in the American Magazine. He says:

"The achievements of Rhodes are almost unthinkable. Long before American trusts were attempted he formed what was then the greatest business combination in history and became absolute autocrat of the diamond business of the whole world. He organized a huge consolidation of gold companies. He was the first financier courageous enough to institute deep-level mining on the Rand, the method on which now depends the future of the greatest of all gold fields.

"No Roman emperor ever won more territory than Rhodes brought under his native British flag. Through the chartered company, incorporated in 1889, he added to the British colonial dominions territory equal to the combined areas of the British Isles, France, Prussia, Austria and Spain. He made possible the federation of all South African states and planned to link Cape Colony and Cairo by rail, a project that he carried halfway to fruition before he was cut off by death when he was only forty-nine years old.

"Yet with this record of empire building behind him his last words as he lay dying were these:

"'So little done, so much to do.'"

Health Examinations.

"Periodic health examinations are the best safeguard against degenerative diseases," says a leading physician. "It is as foolish for a man to neglect his health and not consult a physician until he suffers acute pain as it would be for a business man to go without having his books balanced until after he had gone into bankruptcy. Every man should be compelled to take a physical examination and learn just how he can improve his health. To know what you lack is the first step toward getting it."

this year will be a practical one, not because he loves his family less, but rather because he loves them more. He knows that a Monthly Income Policy in The Manufacturers Life will provide for future festive seasons should the family circle be broken, and thus his memory will be kept green by those he loves, long after he has passed away.

Time will prove the wisdom of making such a practical gift. The possession of a Monthly Income Policy brings a sense of security unattainable in any other way, and the significance of the day is reflected in the protection such a gift affords. A Postcard will bring you full particulars.

Sunday Sermon For Those Who Do Not Go To Church

(By JAS. SUTHERLAND)

Acts 16th chap., ver. 6-15: Paul's Vision Come over into Macedonia, and help us.

Paul and Silas his colleague went throughout Phrygia and the region of Galatia, and it appears by the epistle to the latter church that the Judaizing teachers did a great deal of mischief and prejudiced them against Paul, and had drawn them from the Gospel of Christ, for which he there severely reproves them. They were forbidden at this time to preach the gospel in Proconsular Asia. The removes of ministers and the dispensing of the means of grace by them, are in a particular manner under divine conduct and direction. They would have gone to Bithynia, but the Spirit suffered them not; having then extraordinary ways of knowing the mind of God, they were overruled by them. We must now follow Providence, and what we seek to do, if that suffer us not, we ought to acquiesce, and believe it is for the best. That which is here done with respect to a whole people is likewise done to particular persons. God does not choose by fancy but by reasons supremely wise, though the reasons of his preference is a secret known only to the Spirit who makes it.

They passed by Mysia and came to the city of Troy. It would seem that at Troas Luke joined Paul from thence forward for the most part. When he speaks of Paul's journeys he writes "we went," etc.

Christ would have Paul directed to Macedonia. There was presented, either to his eyes or to his mind, a man of Macedonia, saying, Come over into Macedonia and help us, that is, Come and preach the gospel to us; let us have the benefit of thy labors.

People greatly need help for soul and body, and it is their duty to look out for it and invite those among them who can help them, and ministers may go on with great cheerfulness and courage in their work, when they perceive Christ calling them — not only to preach the gospel but to preach it at this time, in this place, to this people.

Paul followed the divine direction more cheerfully and with more satisfaction than he would have followed any inclination of his own; now that he knows the mind of God, he is determined, for this was all that he wanted. God's calls must be complied with readily, must not be disputed, put off or deferred.

They landed at Philipi, the chief city of that part of Macedonia. It was a colony. The inhabitants of the city were Romans. It was a good while before any notice was taken of Paul. When they had an opportunity of preaching it was in an obscure place and to a small and poor company. But it was a place where prayer was wont to be made. They that worship the true God, and would not worship idols met there to pray together, and though they were but few, and it appears that only women attended, yet a solemn assembly the worshippers of God must have if by any means it is possible or the Sabbath day. If we have not synagoges we must be thankful for more private places, and resort to them; not forsaking the assembly of ourselves together, according as our opportunities are. Thither Paul and Silas and Luke went, and sat down to instruct the little company. They spake unto the women who resorted thiher and led them to the knowledge of Christ.

Among the hearers of Paul was a woman named Lydia, a native of Thyatira, but who lived in Phillipi, where she dealt in purple, probably purple cloths. She had an honest calling which the historian notices to her praise. Though she had a calling to attend to she did not neglect spiritual things. The business of our particular callings may be made to harmonize with our religious life. Therefore it will not excuse us from attending to our religious duties. We have a trade to mind. Have we not also a God to serve, and our own souls to look after? Religion does not call us from our business in the world but directs us in it.

The Lord was pleased to open Lydia's heart to attend to and believe the apostles' doctrine. This implies that sin shuts out the truths of God, till his grace makes way for their admission into the understanding and affections, and the Lord alone can open the heart for the reception and belief of his word. It is not enough to be worshippers of God but we must be believers in Jesus Christ, for we cannot come to God as the Father, but by the Son as the Mediator.

She was led to profess the gospel, and was baptized and her household. After this she brought the apostle and his company to lodge in her house.

True faith and a real profession of the gospel are always connected with love to Christ's servants. She was extremely pressing in her invitation. Paul was unwilling to go, as he did not wish to be burdensome and would study to make the gospel free of charge. I Cor. 9:13; Acts 20:34.

There was at Phillipi a female slave who was influenced by an evil spirit to utter doubtful predictions or divinations. Thus she had great fame as a fortune teller and brought her owners much gain. Being instigated by the evil spirit who desired to discredit the ministry and the doctrines of the apostles, she followed them crying aloud that they were the servants of the Most High God, who came to show men the way of salvation. Satan, though the father of lies, will declare the truth when he can thereby serve his purposes.

God has in the gospel of his Son plainly showed us the way of salvation; has told us how we may be delivered wrom misery to which we have exposed ourselves by sin. But those most likely to receive the apostles' doctrine were prejudiced against those spirits of divination, therefore would by this testimony be prejudiced against the gospel.

Much mischief is done by professing teachers or preachers who by plausible speech and actions lead many astray and confound them with the real servants of Christ.

Paul at length cast out the evil spirit by the power of Christ, and every one soon perceived that the woman could utter no more divination. This shows that it was really the operations of Satan; had it been a more human juggler the command of the apostle could not have prevented it. Her owners being exasperated by the loss of their great gains, seized Paul and Silas and accused them as disturbers of the peace and teachers of unlawful customs. The multitude displeased at the loss of their prophetess, joined them. The magistrates gave way to the popular fury. Paul and Silas were severely scourged and cast into prison, where the jailer treated them with severity.

Those who do good by drawing men from sin may expect to be reviled as troublers of the city, while they teach men to fear God, to believe in Christ, to forsake sin, and to live godly lives. They will suffer for righteouness' sake. What hard usage and torment and sufferings have God's people had to endure in the days that are gone, but the consolations of God to his suffering people are neither few nor small. He gives them in answer to their prayers songs in the darkest night of tribulation and in the most dreary situations.

Thus Paul and Silas having poured out their hearts in prayer, were filled with divine consolations and joyfully sang praises to God so loudly that the other prisoners heard them. How much happier are true Christians than their enemies, as in the dark; so out of the deaths we may cry unto God. No place, no time is amiss for prayer, if the heart be lifted up to God: no trouble, how grievous soever should hinder us from prayer.

Yours sincerely,
James Sutherland.

My Limbs Would Twitch

And Awaken Me—Unable to Rest or Sleep, I Walked the Floor in Nervous State—When Specialists Failed I Found a Cure.

WINDSOR, Ont., Dec. 15.—This is the kind of cure that has set Windsor people thinking and talking about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. The action of this food cure is so radically different to the usual treatments for the nerves that everybody wants to try it. Gradually and certainly it nourished the starved nerves back to health and vigour and the benefits obtained are both thorough and lasting.

Mrs. M. Smithson, 27 Arthur street Windsor, Ont., writes: "I was suffering from nervous breakdown, which was caused by a shock when fire broke out in the adjoining house. My nerves were in such a state that, after going to bed I could not get my nerves quieted down sufficiently to go to sleep. I used to get up and walk around the room, or go downstairs. But when I would be dropping off to sleep my limbs would twitch and waken me. I used to have cold, nervous, night sweats, sometimes would become unconscious and lie that way for quite a little while. I was always cold and it seemed impossible for me to get warm or keep warm. When on the street I would see two or three objects at once, and did not want any person to speak to me or bother me. Any little noise irritated and annoyed me very much. I had consulted specialists and tried many remedies during this time, but could not gain relief. At last I tried Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and before long could see that this treatment was proving of benefit. I am now feeling so much better that I can go out on the street without any difficulty, can go across the river and go about the same as usual. I sleep well at night, and am feeling more like myself every day. I am pleased to be able to write you to tell you how much good the Nerve Food has done me. It has strengthened and built up my whole system. I am recommending it to everybody I find suffering from nervousness of any kind."

Dr. Chase's nerve Food, 50 cents a box, a full treatment of 6 boxes for $2.75, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bate & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

2,500 AIR MACHINES NOW GERMANY'S TOTAL

Increase in the Last Year Through Hoeppner's Efforts—27 Out of 45 Zeppelins Lost.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES.—By efforts made in the last year, General von Hoppner has brought the strength of the German aviation services up to rather more than 300 squadrillas, representing a total of about 2,500 machines. They are divided as follows:

Bombarding squadrillas, 23; chasers, 40; protection squadrillas, 30; patrol squadrillas, 80; artillery squadrillas, 100. Total, 273.

To these groups must be added the airplanes and hydro-aeroplanes of the navy, a dozen or more garrison squadrillas, and about a dozen training groups.

I have before me a detailed account of the fate of forty-five Zeppelins, which explains why these prodigious aircraft no longer frighten the world and, so far as land operations are concerned, can no longer be seriously counted in the air service. Apart from two destroyed before the war, the list may be summarised as follows:

Destroyed in Germany, 5; destroyed in neutral countries near the Front, 5; destroyed in England by the British or on their way home from England, 15; others destroyed at sea, 2; out of use, 5; in use as training schools, 4; in use chiefly in the North Sea, 9. Total, 45.

Considering the millions spent and the unlimited hopes built upon these monsters, we may regard the result as one of the most conspicuous fiascos in the history of industrial and military science.

The Krupps have purchased several houses and a large area of ground at Lucerne. Sixty-four expert employs have arrived there and 300 others are expected shortly.

Recent Discovery of Ether Compound That Dries Up Corns So They Lift Out

Good news spreads rapidly and druggists here are kept busy dispensing freezone, the recent discovery of a Cincinnati man, which is said to loosen any corn so it lifts out with the fingers.

A quarter of an ounce costs very little at any pharmacy, but is said to be sufficient to rid one's feet on every hard or soft corn or callus.

You apply just a few drops on the tender, aching corn and instantly the soreness is relieved, and soon the corn is so shriveled that it lifts out without pain. It is a sticky substance which dries when applied and never inflames or even irritates the adjoining tissue.

This discovery will prevent thousands of deaths annually from lockjaw and infection heretofore resulting from the suicidal habit of cutting corns.

A ROUSING RALLY MEETING

CRISIS IS AT HAND ON THE WESTERN FRONT

Lloyd George's Speech in England Yesterday ---Military Experts Predict That Only the Greatest Efforts Will Prevent Germany From Breaking Through the Allied Line---Half a Million Fresh and Picked German Soldiers Ready For New Assault.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(By Ed. L. Keen.)

(Special to The Toronto Star and the Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, December 15. — There is no use trying to camouflage the gravity of the situation on the West front—the only war theatre which in the last analysis really counts.

The set back to the British arms at Cambrai has not only practically nullified Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig's splendidly conceived and General Byng's splendidly executed advance, but it is generaly admitted the reverse marked the end of the British offensive for some time to come. The initiative has now passed to Hindenburg. The most competent expetts predict that only the greatest efforts will prevent Germany from fulfilling their boast to break through the Allied line before American participation can equalize the reinforcement to the German line from the Russian front. This reinforcement of the enemy made possible by the cessation of fighting on the East front, means a half million picked men to throw into the assault against the Allied line before America can get in.

Besides restoring to Hindenburg his long lost initiative, General Byng's reserve graphically demonstrates the untruth of various widely prevalent stories regarding the enemy. It demonstrates the utter absurdity of the story that the morale of the Germans is waning. It gives the lie to the confidently circulated stories of Germany's collapse. Regardless of who is personally responsible for the Cambrai reverse, the fundamental reason doubtless lies in the fact that the whole army has been permeated with such a spirit of cocksurness—if not over-confidence—that it had grown careless. Perhaps it was only the natural result of an uninterrupted series of recent British successes combined with the fact that the present army has never been compelled by hard necessity to learn defense tactics like the Mons heroes who are now among a handful in the great war machine.

Coincidentally there has been the general development of a tendency of a under-estimate of the enemy's capacity for an offensive.

The fact remains that the crisis is at hand, and the public is being awakened to a realization of it.

Practically every London newspaper to-day classed Premier Lloyd George's speech as a well-timed stimulant.

"Lloyd George reached a true authentic note of British statesmanship," said the Post. "We are confident of his appeal to the spirit of the nation."

"The speech—for which we are all most grateful—is an appeal to reason to honour, to our honour and self-denial," declared the Telegraph.

"The speech was more than brilliant," summarized the Chronicle. "It has a dispassionate firmness appropriate with the present crisis. He has demonstrated the impossibility of an unsatisfactory peace now."

"The speech had courage and faith," said the Mail. "It flung a challenge in the face of all doubters and waverers. He showed a direct insight into the supreme issues of war."

"The chief merit of the address," the Times asserted, "lies in the clearness and directness with which the Premier keeps the things that really matter before the people."

The News was the only London newspaper which did not entirely approve of the speech. "Unfortunately he did not hint when victory would be considered as won," the editorial declared. "Among all his emphatic utterances there was not a word enlightening us on one point that really mattered. The world to-day will regret his failure to state the policy of the Allies with the gravity and the definiteness which the occasion demands."

(By the Associated Press.)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Friday—A story of how German officers are surrendering is told by an American officer just returned from the British front, where he had been undergoing instructions. One night recently a German officer crawled across No Man's Land to the British wire, raised his hands and cried: "Kamerad." The British soldiers covered him with rifles whereupon the German said: "Excuse me if I lower my hands, I've got a package here." The surprised Britishers granted the request and the German dropped into the trench. In his hands he had a package of laundry. He said he had decided to surrender the week before, but had waited until his laundry came back.

NO QUESTION OF QUITTING SAYS LAURIER

Liberal Leader Says He Will Form a National Government of the Strongest Men in Canada For the Winning of the War

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

NORTH BEND, B.C., December 15.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier's last words to the people of Canada in this memorable campaign were:—If it is my good fortune to form a government I will form a national government of the strongest men in Canada for the winning of the war, and if I am defeated as leader of His Majesty's loyal opposition, I will support a win-the- war policy of any government that is formed as I have done heretofore. There is no question of quitting. In a word I am in this war to a finish because the cause of the Allies is just."

ARTILLERY BOYS DID FINE WORK AFTER EXPLOSION

Gunner W. H. Bennett, Peterboro' Member of the 74th Battery, Says Soldiers Had to Give First Aid to the Halifax Victims

SOME TERRIBLE SIGHTS

The following letter from a Peterborough boy with the 74th Battery gives some new light on the Halifax disaster:

Halifax, N.S., Dec. 11, 1917.

Just a few lines to let you know I am well at present, and hoping, when these few lines reach you, it will find you the same.

I suppose by this time that you have heard all the news about the big explosion which took place at Halifax. Well, you can read all you like, but, believe me, you can realize about it the way we do, as we were here from the time of the explosion, and we are still here, and we are certainly seeing an awful lot of wounded and dead. I will try and tell you a little of the experience that we went through from the time of the explosion and after.

Well, we were awake at 8 a.m., and we were going on with our daily work. About 9.15 a.m. we heard the first explosion, but there was no damage done. About 9.20 a.m. the second one came, and in about five minutes after the second one the people were all rushing to the barrack, where we were stationed, with arms off, heads and all; parts of their bodies blown litterly to pieces; so you can just imagine the sights we saw. That wasn't the worst of it. One would grab a person to dress their wounds, and they would die right in your arms, and some yelling for the doctor. As it happened, none of the doctors were at the barrack when the explosion took place, and that made it all the worse. That left all the dressing for a while upon the Artillery boys, and, believe me, they made some good first-aid jobs. About 9.30 the worst of the patients came in, and by that time most of the doctors in the city of Halifax were at the barracks. Some of them didn't know which way to turn in order to give first-aid to the worst of the patients, as some of them only had small cuts about their faces. Most of the military doctors were at the hospitals at the time, and they were all cuts, and running around trying to fix up the others before they thought of themselves. About 9.40 automobiles and every vehicle that was available was into use as ambulances, and conveying the wounded to the hospitals as fast as they could go. The hospitals were all filled up in about three-quarters of an hour after the explosion, and still more wounded coming in every minute of the day, and up to this time they are still coming. From 9.40 a.m. till now we have being doing all we can to relieve the suffering, and we are still digging out dead from beneath the ruins. The boys are still working day and night, and I believe they are working hard, but they don't seem to mind it, as they know they are doing some good for both Halifax and the war.

Well, you can put this letter in the paper and tell them all the Peterborough boys are well. About two days before the explosion I fell down some stairs in a pitch dark hall and received some bad cuts about the wrist of my left arm. The doctor was afraid he would have to take my arm off, but it is feeling a lot better than it has been. Outside of myself they are all well and feeling fine.

Well I think I will close for this time, hoping to hear from you by return mail.—I remain, sincerely yours,

W. Bennett.

RETURNS OF THE ELECTION

Examiner Will Give Details Out to the Public at Victoria Hall and Will Have a Direct Wire Installed There

HEAR THEM IN COMFORT

The Examiner has made arrangements for a complete telegraphic service in connection with the Dominion elections on Monday.

On this occasion, with winter weather prevailing, the Examiner has decided to do away with giving the information out to the public on the street by means of a stereoptican lantern. Instead, the Victoria Hall has been rented for the occasion, and the Examiner invites the public to assemble there and hear the returns in comfort. A direct wire will be installed on the platform, and the returns from all over Canada will be given out as they come in. Mr. Jos. Wearing has kindly consented to announce the messages as they come in.

The Examiner office will not be open to the public on Monday night, but any information in regard to the election will be given over the telephone. The public is asked to note that the Examiner service will be at Victoria Hall, not at this office. There will, of course, be no admission charge.

Scrutineers are asked to co-operate with the Examiner by telephoning in the returns from their respective polling sub-divisions as soon as possible after 5 o'clock on Monday evening.

A Voice From The Trenches

What a Young Soldier Who Went Overseas With the First Contingent Thinks of the Situation

The following is a copy of a letter just received by a local man, whose son, the writer, has been overseas since the first contingent went, and who has, altogether, three boys at the front.

The gentleman who received the letter was a member of the "Unionist" committee, but is going to do what his brave boy asks of him.

At the present time the original of the following letter is at The Examiner Office, and will be either there or in the father's hands, available as proof of its genuineness:

Dear Mother and Father,—

Just few lines in answer to your letter. I received the 25 francs all right, but I have not sent for the five pounds to England yet. I have not seen my brothers for some time now, but I know one is all right and safe, as he is not in the trenches with me now.

We saw it in the paper and also were told we were getting a pass to Canada, but it has all been cancelled. The reason is because Borden does not rule the Canadians. I would not voe for him I can tell you. I think Laurier is a far better man and most of us soldiers think the same, for he would think of us who have been in France so long. There has been most of the Australians not out so long gone back home for a furlough but there will never be a chance for us as long as Borden rules you.

If they cannot get us a pass, they could have us withdrawn from the line on a job behind the lines, instead of giving them to men who are just coming out here. There are not many of us left and it would be an easy matter, so vote for Laurier and you will do the soldiers a good turn. I don't care who you show this to for it is the opinion of most of us. I don't say but what conscription would be a good thing with a better man than Borden at the head of it, for we expect him to have a little say in the handling of the men he wants to conscript.

I expect to go on pass soon again if all goes well, and I am pleased to say I was at Ypres, on Paschendaele Ridge, and am out safe.

I must close for now, hoping you are all well and happy, as it leaves me at present, even under the conditions we know we are fighting under, as it is the only way to be. I am,

Your loving son,

GORDON.

ARE SOLDIERS' VOTES AT KINGSTON BEING SWITCHED?

The Danger Of Actual Famine Is Terribly Real

Dominion Food Controller Appeals to the Clergymen of the Dominion to Make Known to Their Congregations the Desperate World Shortage of Food—A Tremendous Responsibility Rests Upon Us in Canada to Feed Our Soldiers Overseas.

STATEMENT FROM HON. MR. HANNA

OFFICE OF THE FOOD CONTROLLER.

Dear Sir:—

OTTAWA, December 12, 1917.

I appeal to you, as I am appealing to other clergymen throughout the Dominion, to make known to your congregation the desperate world shortage of food and the tremendous responsibility resting upon us in Canada to feed our soldiers overseas and to support the Allied cause with our food resources. Authoritative information has just reached my office which shows that the danger of actual famine through the world is terribly real and that only the sternest resolve on the part of the producers of this continent and equally stern economies on the part of all of us as consumers can possibly save the situation.

These are the facts derived from official information and stated without exaggeration:

1. France this year had a crop which was only between one-third and one-half that of a normal year. The women and children and the aged of France did their utmost to support the men who were fighting. Women hitched themselves to the ploughs and did the work of draught animals in a determined effort to make the impoverished soil of France produce every possible ounce of food. THEY NOW LOOK TO US TO MAKE UP THEIR DEFICIENCY OF ESSENTIAL SUPPLIES.

2. The harvest in Italy was far below normal and to-day hundreds of thousands of people are in peril of starvation. Great Britain, and even dauntless France, have been sending food to Italy and from this continent large supplies have been shipped with the greatest possible despatch. Italy will require much larger supplies to save her people until the next harvest.

3. Until, and unless, new shipping becomes available, it is impossible for the Allies to spare many cargo carriers to transport foodstuff from more distant countries such as India, Australia, New Zealand and even the Argentine Republic. This means that the Allied nations are practically dependent upon North America to supply them with the food which must be forthcoming, if terrible suffering is to be avoided and the fighting efficiency of the Armies maintained.

4. There is a great shortage of food in nearly all the neutral nations and much suffering, perhaps actual starvation in many cases, is certain during the coming winter.

5. The United States has not a single bushel of wheat for export, after allowance is made for domestic requirements on the basis of normal consumption. The United States Food Administration is endeavouring to bring about a reduction of 20 per cent. in home consumption of wheat and flour. This would release 100,000,000 bushels for export, but the Allies will require nearly five times that amount before the 1918 harvest.

6. CANADA TO-DAY is the only country in the world, practically accessible to the Allies under present conditions of shipping shortage, which has an actual exportable surplus of wheat after allowance for normal home requirements. The surplus to-day is not more than 110,000,000 bushels.

7. The day may not be far distant when the Canadian soldiers overseas may be dependent upon the food actually sent from CANADIAN PORTS. The United States will require all its available resources to maintain its own army overseas.

8. The outlook for production of foodstuff in Europe next year is distinctly unfavourable. France has been dependent upon intensive cultivation of land, which in turn has required an abundant use of fertilizers, but since the beginning of the war the available supply of fertilizers in Europe has dwindled and the land of France has deteriorated until to-day it is incapable of large production. In Great Britain, much new land has been brought under cultivation by the aid of tractors, which have also been used to some extent in France, but there is little prospect of much improvement in production in Europe while the shipping shortage prevents the transportation from overseas of nitrates, phosphates and other fertilizing supplies. Indeed, the Allies must be prepared for even poorer crops in 1918 than those of the current year.

Such is the situation—grave beyond anything that we thought possible a few months ago. Unless our people are aroused to a realization of what the world shortage means to us, to our soldiers and to our Allies and of the terrible possibilities which it entails, disaster is inevitable.

Canada is fortunate above nearly all the countries of the world in having an apparent abundance of food. But that apparent abundance involves a tremendous obligation to our Allies. Upon our stewardship with Canada's food resources may depend in no small measure the ability of our Armies to win a decisive victory. The supreme food needs overseas are for wheat and wheat flour, meat, sugar and fats and the people of Canada must restrict their use of these commodities to an increasing extent. Fortunately, we have a large supply of wholesome substitutes, and these should be used more freely, in order that the vitally needed foodstuffs may be released for export. Poultry and fish should be used as far as possible instead of beef, bacon or ham. War cereals should be substituted in part for wheat flour. The use of cane sugar should be curtailed in candies, etc., because the failure of the sugar beet crop in France and the shortage of shipping to move the new sugar crops of other countries have made heavy drains upon the available supply on this continent. Fats in any form should not be wasted.

Production, too, must be increased to the greatest possible extent in this country. Present war conditions demand extraordinary efforts and every man, woman, boy or girl who can produce food has a national duty to do so. Pigs might be kept and fed on household garbage by many people who live in the suburban districts of our cities. People in the rural sections have made splendid efforts to increase production of food. Those efforts must not be relaxed. Rather they must be added to in every possible way.

I am confident that when the people of this country realize that the food situation is of utmost gravity, they will willingly adjust themselves to the necessities of the case make whatever sacrifices may be demanded of them. The call which is made upon them is in the name of the Canadian soldiers at the front, the Allied armies, and the civilian populations of the Allied nations who have already made food sacrifices, the extent of which is little realized by the people of this country.

As Food Controller for Canada, I earnestly commend these facts to your consideration and ask you to use your influence to impress them upon our people.

Sincerely,

W. J. HANNA, Food Controller.

LONDON, December 15.—With reference to the German Government's statement that it had received through a neutral government last September an inquiry in regard to its war aims under circumstances indicating that the inquiry was made with the sanction of the British Government the Daily Chronicle prints a statement from Lord Robt. Cecil, Minister of Blockade, branding the whole thing as untrue.

Military Voters, It Is Stated, Are Being Instructed to Mark Their Ballots For the Government and Not For Any Particular Candidate

DR. EVANS ACTIVE

Special to The Examiner:

KINGSTON, Dec. 15.—It is understood that a few days ago a letter from headquarters asked Lieut.-Col. Geo. S. Gillespie, military returning officer for No. 3 military district, for a recommendation as to the number of localities which would need military votes to swing the constituencies to the Unionist side. Another letter following his recommendation decided on North and South Perth, Leeds, North Wellington and North Waterloo. To secure the largest possible percentage of votes which could be switched, the deputy returning officers were ordered to give particular instructions to every soldier as he came to vote. The instructions were to the effect that the vote was not under any circumstances to fill in the top blank of the ballot, the one reading "I vote for—."

All are Canadians with residence here, but no regard will be paid to this in the switching process.

It is also stated that Capt. Dodds, acting under instructions, paraded the soldiers at the Mowat sanitorium, Kingston and ordered each man to vote Unionist with his ballot.

One man, returned from France, answered: "I never would stand being dragooned as a civilian, and I will be damned if I will now."

There is the greatest feeling here against the appointment of Col. Gillespie as deputy returning officer. He is an Army Service Corps lieutenant, and a political appointee for Dr. Edwards, Conservative member for Frontenac, raised to his present rank in charge of Cadet Corps. The recommendation by several that a returned soldier be appointed, was not acted on.

Dr. Evans, who was exposed by the London papers, when he tried to lecture there on "Palestine" last summer, is acting under orders from Union headquarters here and selecting the soldiers who will be clerks, etc., at the election.

THE OFFICIAL DECISION IS THAT NO MAN HAS RIGHT TO EXEMPT FARMERS' SONS

In reference to the "blind" of appointing Warden Brown, with the intimation that he has the power to exempt farmers' sons, the Deputy-Minister of Justice says:

"Disposal of appeals is entirely in the hands of appeal tribunals, subject to appeal, by leave, to the central appellate judge."

Neither Warden Brown nor J. H. Burnham have the shadow of right or power to exempt farmers' sons, or power to exempt farmers' sons, to win votes.

Poll Clerks Are Wounded

(Canadian Press Despatch).

TORONTO, Dec. 15.—W. A. Willison, correspondent for the Canadian Press in Flanders, cabling last night, said that 87 per cent. of the overseas soldiers' vote in the Dominion elections had been polled. Returning officers took their ballot boxes right into the front line trenches and dressing stations, and secured the votes of wounded and dying Canadians. In taking the vote one poll clerk was seriously wounded, and a deputy returning officer slightly wounded, while one gunner voting beside his gun was hit by shrapnel.

I have made provision for the solution of your troubles in choosing appropriate gifts by stocking up in the best gifts for men. A wise choice is easy when you see our display. "Come to me."

Dominion Express Foreign Cheques are accepted by Field Cashiers and Paymasters in France for their full face value. There is no better way send money to the boys in the trenches.

LOSING MEN TO GET VOTES.

One thing surely the Borden-Union government is sincere in—its desire to get votes; and this evident sincerity is only proof of its insincerity in another direction—its insincerity in making the enlistment of men its main object.

It wants to get votes, though it lose men, as shown by its absurd bidding for the farmers' votes—by wholesale exemptions. And in this way it shows that it does not care a rap for conscription, and the indispensable results the occasion demands—reinforcements for the soldiers at the front.

Between getting votes and getting men, the Borden-Union government chooses votes. In the Review of last night there is a report of rural conscription tribunals, dealing almost exclusively with farmers and farmers' sons. Out of the forty "put through the mill," thirty-two are exempted, leaving only eight out of forty, or twenty out of a hundred, to be called to the colours.

At this rate, to get together a battalion of 2,000, it will require 10,000 men under conscription as practiced under the instructions of the Borden government—8,000 to be exempted, and 2,000 to serve.

At this rate of exemption, in order to get the first draft of 25,000 men the Minister of Militia proposes to send overseas—after the elections—it will require to overhaul 330,000 men, the approximate total of the men of military age in Canada.

Where, then, shall we get the remainder of the 100,000? Not amongst the farmers—according to present plans of trifling with conscription. They must, therefore, come from the eligible men in towns and cities.

Of course this is not the exact state of affairs. It is only a feature of election trickery, a vulgar expedient to get the votes of the farming element of the electorate, who can only be exempted according the military service act. But it serves to show the falseness, the hollowness of the "Union"-Borden government's claim that it was created with the sole object of enforcing to the letter the Military Service Act; in order to furnish sorely needed re-inforcements for the war-worn and war-weary Canadian soldiers at the front.

With this noble object cravenly subordinated and diverted to the getting of votes, with the involved defeat of the object of getting men, the whole fabric of false pretence upon which the Borden government, under the label of "Union" government, based its claim to popular support, falls to the ground.

Shouldn't organized Labour take steps to discipline the Borden government for falsely placing the "union" label on itself?

THE ONT THING NEEDFUL.

To get a gripping idea of what is the "one thing needful," and, for Canada, "the better part," the reader is invited to careful perusal of the appeal and facts presented by our Food Controller, as conspicuously presented upon the first page of this issue.

So important is his well informed opinoin that he requests ministers to read it to their flocks in their churches on Sunday.

Food, for our soldiers and our allies is, according to Hon. Mr. Hanna, the one great need, and, in the final analysis, one whose seriousness demands first consideration from the government and the people.

Yet the Borden government, which is appealing for a new warrant to manage, or mis-manage, our affairs, has totally neglected "the one thing needful." The government anxious for itself, put first importance upon the need of men—upon a win-the-war cry, that they felt might be used as a win-the-election cry.

The Borden government believed in this alone, thought of this alone. It planned it as the one great coup. It passed an iniquitous franchise act that would give it a gambler's advantage—loaded dice. They gave the franchise to wives and female relatives of soldiers, who, it was thought, could be easily guided to vote for the government, and denied it to hundreds of thousands of hard war-working other women.

The government had only a mind to their own advantage, in giving exclusive attention to providing more men—a most vital thing—but only consistently so in relation to another and greater need, the food for their support.

The government has not taken one organized step to control, improve and help the food production situation—till the last moment, when the subject was forced upon them and the public attention. The result is the fairly frantic and desperate appeal of the Food Controller.

Mr. R. R. Hall, the Liberal candidate, has from the beginning of the campaign, shown the true foresight by insisting upon the supreme importance of Canada increasing her food supply.

In spite of jeers and sneers he has stuck to his guns, and now has the satisfaction of seeing the government which neglected and ignored his appeals, coming to his opinion, and instructing its Food Controller to present the one great need to the people.

So strong is the push of the government's tardy repentance of neglected duty, that the appeal for greater food production is to be exploited through press and pulit.

The government thoughtful for itself first—for its re-election—placed the only emphasis upon the win-the-war cry of conscription. Nothing else matters if that could be used to return the Borden government to power.

The government resembled Antony, when he regarded sensual dalliance in the arms of Cleopatra, the greatest good—when he exclaimed—

Let Rome or Tiber melt, and the wide arch
Of the rang'd empire fall.

Cleopatra and her charms were the "one thing needful" for Antony. For these he forgot the responsibility of empire, the burden of his great trust.

The Borden government thought the one thing needful was the charms of office; and win-the-war conscription with its emotional heroics and vote-winning powers absorbed all their attention. The votes obtained counted; the tremendous responsibility of leading Canada in a greater food production campaign, was forgotten. "Increased production," though a first consideration, had no vote-creating appeal.

And will the voter vote for a government that put the cart before the horse, and only thought of their duty at the last moment?

THE TRUE APPEAL.

The appeal of the Peterborough Ministerial Association, published in The Examiner, is entirely sane and seemly—becoming to the Association and the spiritual and ecclesiastical interests it represents.

It is an appeal to the soul and conscience of the people of its respective flocks, at the "most momentous hour in the history of Canada and the British Empire."

If the spirit of the printed appeal of the Association is followed out, the appeal of the respective members of the Association to their flocks will be a call to recognition of a Higher Power in the affairs of men and kingdoms.

In so doing they will avoid mixing the sacred quality of religion with the muddy, sordid and worldly "muck" of partisan politics, to which many ministers of the Gospel have committed themselves. They have been, whether or not they realize, recognise or admit it, trailing the white robe of religion through the slimy pool of politics.

They have gone out of the way to impose their own convictions or prejudices upon their flocks, demanding of them submission to clerical dictation, instead of enjoining them to follow the dictates of their individual consciences.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, when he found that some of his old-time followers had been led away by the ignis fatuus of a union government, in the disguise of a partisan government, did not seek to influence them. He left them free to follow—if they were so inclined—the voice of their conscience—to be true to their conscientious convictions.

In like manner it would have been becoming for ministers and clergymen if they so choose to join the ruck of politicians, while they sought to commend their flocks to follow the leading of conscience, enlightened with the lamp of prayer.

But in dictating, in specifying, the way they should vote—the party alliance they should form—they were undoubtedly transcending their functions.

It certainly was not worth while for ministers to become violent and unreasoning partizans, and impose their will upon their flocks, and urge support of political combiantion upon whose merits and claims to confidence, their flocks were competent to judge for themselves.

The Peterborough Ministerial Association was not wrong in saying that this was "a critical time in the history of Canada."

We have the Borden government, in order to escape the condemnation of their record of maladministration of the war, impudently posing as a "Union" government, with the catch-vote plea of uniting the people in winning the war, an object of which ninety-nine out of every hundred in Canada are honestly in favour.

By this they have roped in to their support thousands of emotional and prejudiced people, who have joined themselves to the most partizan combination ever brought together in Canada.

We have this same combination claiming to appeal to the highest spirit of patriotism of the people, resorting to violent, abusive, slanderous, shady election methods that a Tammany could not surpass.

There is a great awakening due the dupes that have lent themselves, their influence, their prejudices, and even their holy office, to helping a political organization achieve a hoped-for victory which would have been dismal defeat if they had appealed to the people under their true name, and on their own black record.

The confiding Liberals who followed their consciences—or their ambitions—to join a union govern" in which they become partners in the political game, will awake to find that their presence is not needed if, which heaven forefend, the Borden government is returned to power by their help. In that case, the ministers and thousands of others, will awake, and be unable to recall with pride or satisfaction, the instrumentality they have provided for the achievement of a partizan victory. They will come to realize that they have been neither "as wise as serpants or harmless as doves."

Some ministers advise their flocks to pray for Canada; other ministers advise their flocks to prey on Canada by voting for the government of the plunderers and profiteers.

THE "GRIT" IS SUPPRESSED

The Government Stops the Circulation of Liberal Campaign Paper To-day

Thousands who have been reading the campaign paper, "The Grit," will miss this bright sheet to-night, owing to the fact that the Government has ordered its circulation of to-day's issue stopped.

Just what has been the exact cause has not as yet reached the city, but not a few will wonder what "rules in the game" permits Bourassa's paper to run at large and at the same time ties up an opposition paper, the only one published in the large cities.

"MATTY" IS HARD HIT.

Rath and Kopf, of the Reds, Enlist in the Navy.

NEW YORK, Dec. 14.—Christy Mathewson received word yesterday that Shortstop Kopf and Third Baseman Rath had enlisted in the navy. The Reds' infield therefore became a wreck, perhaps temporarily. Kopf developed into a sterling infielder this year, while Rath, who was drafted from the Pacific Coast League, led that circuit in batting with a high average. "Matty" had planned to play Rath at third base, moving "Heinie" Groh to the middle bag. With Kopf at short and "Hal" Chase on first, "Bix Six" had reached the conclusion that he would have one of the strongest infields in the major leagues. But with Rath and Kopf in the navy, the Reds' manager now must fall back on "Bill" McKechnie to play in one of the vacancies and will have to look around for another capable infield substitute. The loss of Rath and Kopf shows what may happen to any of the big league teams overnight.

Thinks The War Will Soon Be Over

Mrs. W. E. Payton, 320 King Street, has received a letter from her nephew, Private E. V. Payton, who has been taking the signalling course at Seaford. He writes:

"I just missed going on draft by coming on this course. They have cleaned out the signal school at Bramshott except for a few casualties. I don't know what the Canadian army would do if conscription had not passed, for most of the reserve battalions are empty. As you were saying in your letter, the war drags on, but I don't think it will last much longer. I saw Sid Martin yesterday for the first time since last fall. The last letter I had from Herb, he was in this camp, and ever since I landed here I have been looking for him. Yesterday I found the camp he was staying at, but he had just left that morning."

"HOW SHALL I VOTE TO-MORROW?"

The above is the subject announced by Rev. J. R. Webb for discussion on Sunday evening at Murray street Baptist church. Those who heard Mr. Webb in his eloquent and powerful sermon last Sunday evening on the subject, "Some Things God Cannot Do," should not fail to be present this coming Sunday evening; particularly in view of the crisis which this country now faces. The public needs light, and leading, as perhaps never before and should not fail to be guided by the inspiration which comes from a reverent search for the truth. The Sunday evening sermons at Murray street church are always strongly evangelistic and when the duty of the citizen can be blended with the gospel of salvation the hour is necessarily a profitable one. Those who have enjoyed the work of the choir this fall will be glad to know that special music is being prepared for Sunday evening.

FALKLAND ISLANDS ARE ISOLATED BY THE WAR.

Naval Station in South Atlantic Out of Commercial Intercourse With Rest of World.

Port Stanley, Falkland Islands.—The war has completely isolated the Falkland Islands from the rest of the world as far as commercial intercourse is concerned, in spite of the fact that the islands are the naval base of the British fleet for the South Atlantic and South Pacific.

Since March 10th of this year not a single ship has stopped at the Falklands on its journey to England and correspondence for Buenos Ayres and Montevideo has been sent by way of Punta Arenas, while passengers for Buenos Ayres or Montevideo have had to go around to Valparaiso on the Pacific liners and then cross the Andees by train to get to their destinations.

The British government has bought ing the owners 55 per cent. above the ingt he owners 55 per cent. above the pre-war prices. Some of this wool sold as high as two shillings, six pence, a pound. Flour has risen to fifty shillings a sack and bread is selling at a shilling a loaf, weighing less than four pounds. Sugar is selling at eight pence a pound.

The islands have become so overrun with rats that the government has offered an English penny a head for all those killed.

Women's Mass Meeting In Victoria Hall

Mrs. Van Koughnet, Mrs. Henderson, Capt. J. H. Burnham and Hon. N. W. Rowell Address Gathering Under Auspices of the Women's Government League.

THE ISSUES DISCUSSED

Hon. Mr. Rowell, Mrs. Arthur Van Koughnet, Mrs. Henderson, and Capt. Burnham, the speakers at last night's meeting at Victoria Hall, were heartily received by the fair-sized audience who attended.

Mrs. Arthur Stevenson occupied the chair.

Mrs. Henderson.

Mrs. Henderson, president of the Lindsay Ladies' Liberal Union, who was the first speaker, said the issue before the election was clean cut, and meant the choice between right and wrong, union or disunion. The Union Government, which is new, is composed of the best of the two parties. Labour is well represented, one sect already being labour and two to be added. It is pledged to abolish the system of patronage. It has already abolished over profits and will enforce the Military Service Act. Mrs. Henderson quoted figures showing the vast need of reinforcements at the Front --- 38,000 casualties have been recorded in the Canadian Army and only 31,000 are available for reinforcements. There are three things to do on Monday---vote for, against, or not at all in the greatest issue Canada has ever faced.

Restricted Franchise.

Mrs. Van Koughnet, in her address, read Sir Wilfrid Laurier's answer to the president of the Hamilton Canadian Club when the president wrote for Laurier's endorsation of recruiting measures. Sir Wilfrid's answer was: "I cannot send an affirmative answer at present, but will keep it under advisement," and no other message of his approval ever came. Borden cabled that he strongly commended and supported the recruiting campaign. Rowell sent a similar message.

The question has been asked, Why have all women not been given the vote? The answer is that we are proud to wait while those who have given all use the most sacred right which could be given them. When the call came for help in Halifax, the Provincial Government did not put the question to a referendum and think about it for a year or so, but immediately sent relief. Will we do the same for the Boys? The issue of Monday is a sacred one. Not a controversy, but an election for fair play.

Mrs. Van Koughnet urged the women to vote the right way and send the reinforcements needed.

Mr. Burnham.

Mr. Burnham, candidate for West Peterborough, had to talk against time to hold the audience until the arrival of Hon. N. W. Rowell from a meeting at Lakefield. The candidate covered a wide field of subjects in his characteristic style, including a lecture on democracy and a promise that Quebec would have to do its duty. Incidentally Mr. Burnham played Sir Joseph Flavelle. "Monstrosity" was one of the titles used.

Mr. Rowell, in opening his brief speech, said he felt sure, judging by the splendid work of the women of Peterborough their hearts are in the right place for the election on Monday.

The Issue.

The issue of the election, he said, was whether the people of Canada will stand by their pledged word to their own flesh and blood across the seas or whether they will repudiate the obligation and deny them the reinforcements they need. Much as a local candidate here or there seeks to dodge this, it is the issue and the only issue, and never in the history of Canada has an election been run where the object was so cleanly cut Sir Wilfrid Laurier says his policy is to suspend the Military Service Act and put it to a referendum. The suspension means we will not reinforce and will ultimately drop out of the war. A most solemn responsibility has fallen upon the electors of the Dominion in the issue they will face on Monday.

Too Much Politics.

The world's situation as it is to-day shows Russia on the point of a national downfall, unable to hold the Eastern line because of too much politics. The Italians have suffered almost a death-blow because of too much politics in the second army. Is Canada to drop out on account of too much politics? Politics are all right in times of peace, but in war we must stand together. Politics have put Russia out of the war and almost the Italians. Let us see politics do not put Canada out of it, too. Britain and France have been compelled to draw upon their reserves to come to the assistance of Italy. Germany has concentrated legions on the Western front. What are we going to do to strengthen the thin Western line? If Germany breaks through, munitions, men and supplies could not be supplied, because of the fact that Germany would establish sub. bases on the coast. England would be starved into submission, and the war lost. Our peace and security depend upon the Western front; yet there are men who would quit and send no more reinforcements. Will our message be on Monday that we will see the war only through until the end of the forces overseas, or until the end? In the European struggle Belgium chose the path of honour; Germany lost her soul. Canada has a similar issue to face on Monday. If we fail, it will mean Canada has lost her ship and deserted the 32,000 who sleep their last sleep in the cause we failed to uphold.

An Interruption.

A slight interruption was caused during the meeting by two young men who had a letter to read. Just what it was was not divulged.

There are a number of voters in Peterborough whose names are on the voters' lists twice. This is not like a municipal election and voters are liable to be sworn at any of the polling booths.

MISSPENT MONEY IS ENEMY ALLY, ASSERTS BANKER

FRANK A. VANDERLIP AT CINCINNATI, ASSAILS PURCHASE OF UNNECESSARIES.

Cincinnati, Ohio. — A hoarded dollar is a slacker, and a dollar spent for an unnecessary thing is "an ally of the enemy," Frank A. Vanderlip, national director of the War Savings Campaign, said here to-night in one of the first addresses of a two weeks' speaking tour of the Middle West and South. He urged purchase of war savings stamps and certificates, for the double purpose of directly assisting the government to finance the war and economising on materials and energy devoted to producing non-essentials.

"To hoard a dollar is to make it an idle dollar, an unemployed dollar," said Mr. Vanderlip. "A dollar that is not at work is almost as truly a drain upon society as an idle man, and in the time of this crisis, when the world urgently needs every dollar, a hoarded dollar is a slacker.

"There is something worse than a slacker, though. A slacker is only a negative quantity. But a dollar spent for an unnecessary thing to-day becomes an ally of the enemy. It is a traitor dollar because the labor of men and women is employed needlessly to make useless things, when the government needs that labour to make things that are essential for our soldiers in winning the war—so we see that the dollar spent for unnecessary things is a menace to our country, a menace in this world fight for freedom.

"It is for every person to stop and consider, before spending each dollar, into which pan of the scale they throw it. Will they buy unnecessar things and by the weight cast on that side of the scale contribute to our defeat, or will they refrain from the unnecessary purchases and put the dollar into the hands of the government, enabling it to buy the things, the weight of which will be a real help toward victory? Let every one picture that scale in front of them when they spend money.

"American soldiers need a vast amount of equipment. It is impossible to produce all the equipment a great army needs, in the shortest possible time, unless the government is amply supplied with labor.

"When you hire a man to produce for you an unnecessary article you are competing with the government for that man's labor. By just so much you are helping to make ineffective, and more dangerous, the work the American soldier has to do. You are paying to make that dollar ineffective."

A NEW REALTY FIRM FORMED IN PETERBOROUGH

Peterborough is to have a new real estate firm, to be known as the Peterborough Realty Company, and to do business in the office formerly occupied by Moore, Ruth, Austin, at 124 Hunter Street, opposite Munro House.

The new firm is made up of some of Peterborough's best known real estate salesmen, composed of George Ruth, W. C. Austin and J. A. Gibbs. It is the intention of the firm to handle city and farm property, and undertake sales of all lines of going businesses. The firm intend giving special attention to Peterborough property and surrounding farms. As the members of this firm are well-known, reliable men, they will no doubt secure a very large amount of Peterborough property for sale, and, with their long experience, they should do a very large trade.

Persons wishing to dispose of their property should list them with this firm.

THE WEATHER

Decidedly cold weather is here again, with a strong wind. Last night's lowest was 11 below zero. It has risen but a few degrees all day, and even at noon was four degrees below. Probably much colder to-night. —W. P.

Halifax Inquiry Resumed

HALIFAX, N.S., Dec. 15.—When the inquiry into the Mont Blanc-Imo disaster was resumed before Mr. Justice Drysdale to-day, the cross-examination of First Officer Clokin, of the Mont Blanc, was continued.

He gave as his impression that the Mont Blanc had followed the rules of navigation throughout the whole happening. He said that he was surprised at the signals given by the Imo on the morning of the disaster, as he considered them contrary to the rules of navigation.

A MESSAGE FROM OVERSEAS

Mrs. Perks, 530 Gilmour Street, has received the following letter from her son, Lieut. Arthur Perks, of the 42nd Highlanders, in France:

"I'm afraid we'll soon have to have quite a lot of officers, and we need reinforcements very badly. If you have a vote in the election, be sure and vote for the Unionist candidate, and tell all your friends to do likewise if they think anything of the boys who are fighting for them over here."

Sir Geo. Foster Is Improving

Canadian Press Despatch:

TORONTO, Dec. 15. — Sir George Foster, Minister of Trade and Commerce, Unionist candidate in North Toronto, is reported improving this morning at the Toronto General Hospital.

N. F. Davidson, Norman Sommerville and other prominent men, will address a Unionist meeting at Kitchener, Ont., to-night, where Sir George Foster had been expected. It is confidently expected at Unionist headquarters here that the speakers will get a good hearing at Kitchener.

Sale Was A Great Success

The sale under the auspices of the Peterborough Progressive Club in aid of the Prisoners of War Fund, was quite a successful affair, realizing the sum of $97.00. The tea room brought in $10.10, the rummage $55.00 and the fancy table $31.00. Warm thanks are extended to Mr. P. J. Kenney, who offered the club his store and gave us light and heat. We thank Mr. Coleman very much for his kindness in lending chairs and table and also all those who in any way helped us.

APPEALS DEALT WITH BY THE APPEAL TRIBUNAL

A Number of Farmers Are Refused Exemption—Cases Disposed Of

Peter Cecil Spencer, whose home is near Lakefield, appeared before the Lakefield tribunal with a claim for exemption, which the tribunal disallowed. Spencer is one of nine brothers, two of whom are in military service, three are married, one is farming for himself and the remaining three live at home with the father.

"You are a whole baseball team," commented Judge Huycke yesterday when Peter Spencer asked to have the decision of the Lakefield tribunal reversed. The eldest of the three brothers who live at home is over age for military service and the second brother, Leo by name, put in a claim for exemption, but did not appear, and the Lakefield tribunal disallowed the claim by default.

"The irresponsible father," as Crown Attorney Hatton characterized Mr. Spencer, senior, was present in court. It required more than one warning to subdue his desire to volunteer evidence while his son was being examined by Mr. Hatton.

The Spencer family work three hundred acres of land, the greater portion of which is under cultivation. Judge Huycke was of the opinion that a third member of the family should be represented at the front, and Leo and Peter will appear before the appeal tribunal at a later date, when a final decision will be reached.

"VERY GOOD EDDIE" THE BIGGEST OF ALL MUSICAL COMEDIES

Peterborough One of Four Canadian Cities Outside of Montreal and Toronto to See This Wonderful Broadway Production.

THIS CITY FAVOURED

"Very Good Eddie," the biggest of all successes, fresh from a run of over a solid year in New York, six months in Chicago, and direct from its tremendous success in Toronto and Montreal, is announced for appearance here at "The Grand" next Saturday, Dec. 22, Matinee and Evening.

Only four Canadian cities, outside of Toronto and Montreal, are to see this production of "Very Good Eddie," for it is the real Broadway cast, chorus and Orchestra, and this is one of the fortunate quartette. Very few of the large American cities have yet seen this show, owing to the length of its metropolitan runs.

The engagement of "Very Good Eddie" marks the first visit here of one of the famous Princess Theatre (New York) musical successes, produced by Elizabeth Marbury and F. Ray Comstock. These two producers have evolved a new style of musical entertainment for New York, fashioned after the shows at the Gaiety Theatre, London, and these shows have become all the rage on Broadway. And other cities have found thi stype of entertainment just as irresistible in its appeal as has Broadway. The novelty of "Very Good Eddie" does not lie so much in its elemental ingredients—fun, songs, dances, pretty girls and beautiful scenery and costumes-but the manner in which these interesting units are combined and the "classy" way in which they are presented.

The cast of "Very Good Eddie" is a joy to contemplate, containing such musical comedy favourites as Denman Maley, Georgia Mack, Harry Myers, Helen Raymond, Florence Earle, Theodora Warfield, Lavinia Winn, Harry Linkey, Jean DeBriac, Elaine Ford, Ralph O'Brien and thirty others. And it would take a column to describe the youthful charm of the swagger fashion chorus.

MR. HALL'S LAST WORD TO THE ELECTORS

At last truth and want has forced Food Controller Hanna and Sir Robert Borden to allow the fact to be published that "to-day hundreds of thousands of people are in peril of starvation."

Sir Robert Borden and his followers in control of public news must be desperate when they have concealed from the Canadian Public the fact that Great Britain, France and Italy are in danger of losing this war through being starved into defeat by hunger and want.

Food Controller Hanna made it known only yesterday that "the call which is made upon us is in the name of the Canadian soldiers at the front, the allied armies and the civilian population of the allied nations who have already made food sacrifices; the extent of which is little realized by the people of this country."

The serious facts are now being brought to light that our Canadian boys at the front do need food. That the British people do need food. That the French people need food. That the Italian people need food. And that to-day "hundreds of thousands of them are in peril of starvation."

Even Sir Robert Borden's supporters are forced to admit that neither he nor his government are doing anything whatever to assist, our allies to escape from starvation during the coming year by preparing for the production of food on an extensive scale.

Let the women of this City whose hearts by party zeal have not been hardened into stone, see that on Monday next Sir Robert Borden and his "do nothing" candidate receive the condemnation they deserve for their criminal neglect to take steps to produce food to keep our Allies from starvation.

Even Mr. J. H. Burnham at last night's meeting in Victoria Hall refused to allow Food Controller Hanna's letter to be read which contained the unpleasant news that through the Canadian Government's neglect even our own Peterborough boys fighting in the trenches "have already made food sacrifices the extent of which is little realized by the people of this country."

Even the Hon. Mr. Rowell at last night's meeting refused to discuss Mr. Hanna's letter and made no reference whatever to the approaching world-wide famine which is liable to envelope our Allies in disaster and ruin.

Hon. Newton Wesley Rowell knows full well that there are over 115,000 Canadian soldiers in England who have not yet crossed over to France and if, as the Hon. Mr. Rowell says, our boys in the trenches have been calling out for months for help, then why in the name of humanity has Sir Robert Borden and Hon. Mr. Rowell been guilty of criminal neglect to send to their aid these 115,000 men who are already in England prepared to go to their rescue.

This is the time when our people should be guided by common sense.

I pledge myself to support a policy that will lend Government aid to assist in building ships on an extensive scale, to assist in carrying men and food to assist our allies.

I pledge myself to support a policy which will lend Government aid to the production of food stuffs of all kinds both here and in the Northwest Territories on an extensive scale.

This would be a double blessing. It would reduce the cost of living at home and would help supply Great Britain and her Allies with food to keep them from starving.

R. R. HALL.

Skating from seven until ten o'clock. It is a health-giving amusement. If you are going to skate this year—start early.

Don't forget there will be a big band of twelve pieces to-night. Admission 25c. No war tax.

No Figs And Dates On This Christmas

The Christmas festal fare will reflect the submarine menace and the shortage of ships in the absence of Persian dates, Smyrna figs, currants and raisins from Greece. Currants that used to sell at five cents a pound are now worth 40 cents, although they are selling in some cases slightly under that price. Filberts from Sicily, almond from Spain and French walnuts are there in quantities, but the supply is limited. In the meantime California has saved the dried fruit market from utter oblivion, while the war cloud hangs over Europe and Asia Minor. The Pacific slope figs are meeting with general favour, its raisins have the market principally as a monopoly and in other fruits and nuts, California has saved the dried fruit market from den state.

MITE BOXES REDUCING THE CHURCH DEBT

Knox Church Secures a Substantial Sum in This Manner

Churches nowadays never seem to progress unless the word "debt" stands against them. The more the expense annually, the more willingly do the people pay towards its reduction—and that with the usual little complaints: "Why does the church have to be in so much debt? Can't it be 'carried on' with much less expense?" Evidently not; so the good people just dig deeper into their treasury, and the deficit is gradually met.

One of our local Presbyterian bodies—Knox Church—is no exception to the rule. This congregation has now been in existence (in the new edifice, that is) for over six years. During that time the indebtedness on the building has come down rapidly, until to-day the sum against it is but $13,000—from $33,000 or so.

This has meant a good deal of sacrifice among the members and adherents; and with Rev. H. J. Keith and now Rev. James A. MacKenzie, who have both worked well and hard for the debt reduction, the good folks of Knox Church—who are not Flavelles altogether—have shouldered the burden and sought by various ways and means to attain their aim; and thus have reached their present standing. In addition to the reduction of the principal yearly, there is a tidy little interest to pay—somewhere around $700. So their path is not all roses, though the dawn of a brighter day is looming above the clouds of indebtedness.

One of the ways devised and put into operation last year was the mite box. Many families took kindly to the innovation; the odd copper was dropped into the box and never missed. This treasury soon became full of "sma' siller," and by the time it was counted, had reached a respectable sum. The interest fund last year was all but made up in this way, and nobody seemed to grudge the money. The managers were delighted; so were the people. The boxes were sent out on their mission for another year, with the hope and prayer that they would return "after many days," though not as they had gone—empty.

These hopes have been realised so far, as was shown last night at a congregational meeting in the basement of the church, when quite a nice gathering heard the result of the counting of the harvest of coppers. Sixty-odd boxes were returned, and when counted the sum of $264 was found to have been dropped therein. This is less than half the number of mite boxes given out; so that with another seventy or eighty boxes to come in, this sum should be considerably added to.

Rev. Mr. MacKenzie chairmanised the meeting, and made a few complimentary remarks anent the work of the congregation in regard to the mites, as did also several of the managers; and some suggestions were offered and accepted by them.

Refreshments and a short musical programme by Rev. Mr. MacKenzie and Mr. George C. Roy, and a vote of thanks to the lady caterers, made up the balance of the evening's enjoyment.

IT IS HARD TO GET COAL AND WOOD.

SERGT.-MAJOR W. F. CROWLEY.

The above well known old Peterborough boy and all-round sport will be well remembered as a prominent lacrosse, Rugby and hockey player when he resided here in the city. He is now in Flanders, endeavouring to do his share in the great world war. He enlisted something less than two years ago in the city of Calgary as a private, and has been promoted along up the line to Sergeant-Major. Looks as if he proved himself just as efficient on the battlefield as he was a sport and athlete.

Rev. J. W. Woodside [illegible] At Knox Church

Anniversary services to be held to-morrow.

To-morrow promises to be a day of unique interest and importance for Knox church. The seventh anniversary of the opening of the present building is to be observed by special services. The Session has secured Rev. J. W. Woodside, M.A., of Chalmers' church, Toronto, to conduct these services. Mr. Woodside is among the outstanding preachers of the Canadian Presbyterian church, and the Session feels confident that all who possibly can will avail themselves of this opportunity of hearing him.

The choir has arranged to render special music.

A special offering will be taken on behalf of the Building Fund of the church.

Those who were unable to bring their mite boxes to the social held last night, are asked to leave them with the ushers at the church to-morrow.

Horticultural Society Will Meet Dec. 20th

The meeting of the Horticultural Society last night was postponed until Thursday, December 20th. For various reasons the attendance was not large enough to justify proceeding with the annual routine, but it is hoped that there will be a crowd out next Thursday night.

With Empty Bins They Must Have Nut

Some of the citizens who appeal to the city in their shortage of coal present that peculiar twist of character that overrides every consideration but their demands. Hence if they ask for nut coal, and the scarcity of this size should lead the delivery official to send stove or egg, they forthwith refuse to accept the load, apparently preferring to break up a table or two for fire wood than receive even coal when they ordered nut. If they had only ordered it away back in the summer they could laugh at the vicissitudes of the coal business.

"SO LONG LETTY" A GREAT SHOW

Peterboro' to Get a Treat on Tuesday Night When Big Musical Comedy Will Visit Grand

One of the brightest, fastest, and most tuneful musical comedies which ever visited Peterborough will be presented at "The Grand" next Tuesday evening, Dec. 18. In addition to a company of over forty performers there is an orchestra of twelve pieces. In Sidney Grant and Walter Catlett, local theatre goers will find two of the best comedians ever before the local footlights. "So Long Letty" is a play of California, with a California beauty chorus and a typical "Morosco" cast, which means the very best obtainable. It is one of those productions that goes with a thump, a bang, something doing every minute. There are no less than eighteen song numbers, many of which will be whistled and hummed after next Tuesday evening. "So Long Letty" will give such extreme satisfaction to patrons of "The Grand" that Manager Turner does not hesitate to personally recommend it. The seat sale opened this morning.

Brigadier Morehen Here For Week-end

Brigadier and Mrs. Morehen, Divisional Officers for this district, will visit Peterborough on Saturday and Sunday, 15th and 16th December.

On Saturday evening they will conduct a special meeting at Byersville at 8 o'clock. All the bandsmen and songsters from No. 1 who can possibly attend will assist.

On Sunday, Brigadier and Mrs. Morehen will conduct special services at the Simcoe Street Temple at 11, 3 and 7.

At 3 o'clock there will be an enrollment of soldiers and dedication of some babies. Everybody welcome.

PARIS, December 15.—Real progress is being made against the German submarine campaign, George Leygues, Minister of Marine, declared in an interview in the Petit Parisienne to-day. He warns, however, against too optimistic conclusions being drawn from rear uring developments.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

ITALIAN HEADQUARTERS IN NORTHERN ITALY, December 15.—Heavy fighting is in progress to-day on the mountain front in the northeast of Brenta River. The enemy is attempting to advance his positions as he has those west of the river which would give him two lines of appr'ach to the Brenta Valley and open the plain. The chief Austro-German effort is centring about Monte Beretta. There the enemy succeeded in advancing only a short distance in the course of repeated attacks in which he suffered large losses.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

MONTREAL, December 15.—The Star publishes the following to-day from its Ottawa correspondent: "The belief is growing in Nova Scotia that the disaster at Halifax was not accidental. So many demands have come to Ottawa for the internment of persons of alien nationality that Sir Percy Sherwood, Commissioner of the Dominion Police, has despatched a special officer to make the necessary investigation, apart from that which is now proceeding as to the cause of the collision between the Monte Blanc and the Imo. The Government will exert every effort to elicit the facts and place the responsibility."

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, December 15.—Emperor William in his Christmas message promises to make a final peace offer to his enemy. "On whom, in case of rejection, will fall the responsibility for blood-shed in 1918."

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, December 15.—The British have regained part of the ground won by the Germans on the Ypres front yesterday, the War Office reports. The statement follows:

Local fighting was recommenced yesterday evening in the neighbourhood of Polderhoek Chateau, in which our troops regained a considerable part of the trench into which the enemy had penetrated during the morning.

The hostile artillery was active during the night east of Messines and northeast of Ypres.

Intern Aliens Is Cry In Nova Scotia

OTTAWA, Dec. 14.—Requests from all parts of Nova Scotia for the internment of all persons of enemy nationality are, it is understood, being received by the Government. Employees of the Eastern Car Company, New Glasgow, unofficial advices state, have gone out on strike until some fifty or sixty aliens, employed by the company, have been interned.

Sir Percy Sherwood has despatched a competent officer of the Dominion police to Nova Scotia for the purpose of making investigations.

MANY ARE STILL MISSING AT HALIFAX

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

HALIFAX, Dec. 15.— As it may be months before the city schools are in an inhabitable condition, following last week's catastrophe, the city authorities are retaining the services of all teachers will be so employed. Daughemploying them doing relief and distribution work. Over one thousand teachers will be so emjioyed. Daughters of the Empire have started a home on Spring Garden Road for unclaimed children, greatly to the relief of the hospitals. The Sacred Heart Orphanage is still seeking five of their children. Whole families are yet being sought. Mr. Henn, of H.M.C.S. Niobe is advertising for his baby, whom he describes as a big plump child, fifteen months, fair skinned, blue eyes. He has identified the bodies of the rest of his family, but is hoping his baby may be spared him. A Chronicle and Echo newsboy is amongst those being sought. When last seen he was on the drydock carrying papers for delivery. The body of ex-Controller Harris and his little son have been discovered Also that of J. B. Hillis, of Hillis' foundry. The city is just beginning to really know who is dying and who is dead.

Voice of the People

Editor, Examiner:

In your issue of last night, there was a letter signed "War Veteran Without a Job and Without a Pension." Frankly, our association do not believe that any veteran of the present war signed that letter, because any man that had courage enough to go to France would have courage to sign his name to any communication that he wanted published. However, if our assumption is incorrect, and there really is such a man, we wish to invite him to come down to the G.W.V.A. Headquarters, and we'll try to get him a job. — Yours sincerely,

Sidney Whatley,
Secretary Peterborough Branch G.W.V.A.

Sir,—I have received the following wire from Ottawa this afternoon:

"Ottawa, Ontario, December 15, /17.
To J. H. Burnham, Peterborough, Ont

Cheques for the December separation allowances had already been made out before increase was authorized.

When announcement of increase was made it was specifically stated that while December cheques would be for only twenty dollars, January cheques would be for thirty in order to adjust. January cheques will be sent out a little in advance of usual dates.

(Signed) Private Secretary to Minister of Militia."

J. H. BURNHAM.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Please allow space for the following:

We have a Sanitary Inspector and others in our city. Why can't we have a S.P.C.A. as well? It is much needed when one sees daily the horses that are driven round the city. That would be a nice job for one of our returned local men. Something should certainly be done to put a stop to those poor dumb animals being left for so many hours on the Grand Trunk siding. Their suffering in this zero weather must be intense, and the noise the poor brutes make is very annoying to those who live near, as I am one of the many I know. I hope some steps will be taken to remedy this. Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your space. — Yours truly,

Mrs. R. Bugg.

Financial Help Needed At Halifax

Mrs. Matthews Receives Letter From Dr. Piers in the Stricken City

Mrs. T. F. Matthews of the Peterborough branch of the Canadian Red Cross, has received the following letter from Dr. Piers of Halifax. Subscriptions received for the sufferers will be sent to Halifax by the Peterborough Red Cross:

Dear Mrs. Matthews,—Thanks so much for the wire. Financial help is badly needed, as there is plenty of clothing. Everything is simply terrible, and I am trying to help a McLennan family who are such good, hard-working people; they have four children, one killed, the others, including the mother and father, are injured. They have lost everything; their home goods, etc. There are oh so many cases like this, but as I know what brave, ambitious people they are, I am trying to do all I can for them.

Another family—the father and mother are injured, one child is blind, another most seriously injured, and these people we must help individually as we come across them.

We will be most thankful for any financial contributions as money is most urgently needed.

Sincerely,
(Dr.) Florence O'Donell Piers.

Jack And The Beanstalk A Great Picture

There have been fewer happier audiences at the Grand Opera House than at the children's matinee this morning, when the wonderful Fox picture, "Jack and the Beanstalk," was presented. This remarkable film story was shown at the Grand last night and will also be the attraction again this evening. It is a picture that appeals to adults as well as to children and should be seen by everybody. The Fox film version of the old fairy tale is a wonderful demonstration of what can be accomplished on the screen.

Voice of The People

Correspondence under this heading containing or involving attacks on individuals, or violent or extreme statements, must, to secure insertion, be signed with which thus assumes the responsibility.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—The Borden Government is to blame for the fuel shortage in Peterborough. They had a Coal Controller who was like the Food Controller, famous for his sayings, but for his practical services he is a controller in name only. The Coal Controller should allot to Peterborough enough coal to keep the people warm, and if there is not enough coal then to compel the Theatres and Churches to close until there is enough coal to re-open them.

Yours truly,
SOLDIER'S WIFE.

To the Editor, the Examiner:

Sir,—The following letter, which appeared in the Toronto Globe, contains such good sense that I would like to see is republished in your far-reaching paper.

KHAKI AT HOME.

The letter in question is as follows:

To the Editor of The Globe: The prospects for the success of Union Government must be decidedly gloomy, if one may judge by the desperate efforts which are being made to "line up" the people, especially the women, on this question. The following very reckless statement made last night by Mrs. L. A. Hamilton, in an address before a women's club in this city, is a sample of the line of action followed by many Tory henchmen and henchwomen. Mrs. Hamilton, who, by the way, is one of the famous four who were sent out by the Conservative Government a short time ago to "glean information as quietly as possible," is reported as saying that if conscription and Union Government is not supported, "Ten thousand men of the Great War Veterans' Association would don khaki, not to go overseas, but to make their influence felt at home." This sounds both interesting and serious—Anarchists are always interesting people, but they are very superfluous in a Democracy. And, after all, this remark may be only the outpouring of a Tory mind which looks at once to force for the carrying out of its own ideas. It is undoubtedly true, as the lady said, that the G.W.V.A. is "an organization of weight," and we look for their influence on the side of right and justice — that this "influence" should take the form of bayonets and rifles is a most unworthy suggestion. We are being, and we will be taxed more or less heavily for the benefit of the G.W.V.A., and none of us begrudges the money, but if there are, as Mrs. Hamilton suggests, such forces at work within that body, as are a menace to law and order, they had better be discovered quickly and as quickly investigated, because no matter what kind of a Government is returned, we are going to have sufficient unavoidable difficulties to adjust without adding to the number.

Harriet Dunlop Prenter.

Toronto.

Dear Sir,—Please insert this in your paper to-night:

To the Toilers of the City of Peterborough:

We are called upon on Monday to settle the most important issue ever brought before us and this country. In the exercise of our franchise do not let any toiler have the wool pulled over his eyes by the so-called "Union" Party, as they call themselves, and truly they are branded to the "Big Interests" which have to the "big interests which have grown fat at the expense of the working men; and if they should be returned to power on Monday next then we may expect the screws tightened, and, God knows, they are tight enough at the present time. They may talk about the war as they like, but I can tell them that every true Canadian and working man is more in earnest than they ever were.

Then they seem to have a deep interest in the returned soldier and also in the wives of those that are overseas, especially since they have a vote given to them. I would like to ask them how many of them ever visited them during the winter of 1916.

If there ever was a time when we want a change of Government, that time is to-day, for, believe me, fellow-toilers, the fight to-day is the classes against the people, and may the people be victorious, as I believe they will, on Monday, the 17th, when we shall have an honest Government chosen by the people, at whose head will be that veteran statesman, Sir Wilfred Laurier, a man that his opponents cannot truthfully point the finger of scorn at.

I am truly sorry to see that certain churches have arrayed themselves upon the side of the "Big Interests" against the people; and the only good they will do will be to have the common people against them. Such action on their part does not correspond with what the Great Head of the Church taught in His day.

Fellow-toilers, on Monday next, do your duty and drive the Government from office. Do not be misled by such men as sit in the present Cabinet, for they have placed themselves against the toilers. Do your level best on Monday to return, by a large majority, Mr. R. R. Hall, who will support the boys at the front and see that they get more than $1.10 per day, and then the new Government will also help them, both more men and also see that they get proper treatment.

Fellow-toilers, do your duty to the Empire and our beloved Canada on Monday — a fellow-toiler appeals to you—and send the "Big Interests" home to defeat. May they be deeply snowed under. I have no axe to grind; neither do I expect to have any favours shown me—I only want to help to get an honest Government placed over us.—Faithfully yours,

A Fellow-Toiler.

The Editor, Examiner:

Sir,—We are approaching the day of decision as to whether Canada is to stay with the Old Motherland and her Allies in the war or stop all active participation in it.

Mr. R. R. Hall would have us believe that the best we could serve is to stop all active participation in the war and confine ourselves to producing food for our own stomachs and for the rest of the Allies.

We read in the papers of yesterday evening that the Germans are transferring hundreds of thousands of men from the Eastern to the Western front to make a last desperate effort to break through, and that the supreme necessity of Great Britain at the present time is the gathering together of one million men at once, so that the Germans can be held for the next six months until the U. S. is able to get her full strength into the field.

This is a cable from the Old Country that has been given prominent publicity by every newspaper in Canada, no matter of what political leaning.

The Allies are awaiting our decision on Monday with feelings of anxiety, since hearing of the disloyal utterances of some of the Laurierites, especially those in Quebec.

Let us, on Monday, show them that their anxiety was unjustified. Are we going to follow the lead of the Bolshevikis in Russia? We will if we endorse Laurier's policy. Rally to the cause of our boys at the front and the Union Government.

As I once said before, "A long pull, a strong pull and all pull together."—Yours truly,

J. W. Worth.

To the Editor, Examiner:

Dear Sir,—If you can spare me a small space in your valuable paper, I would like to say a few words in regard to the letter of Mr. Burnham's, which Mr. Hall is sending round to us soldiers' wives in a printed circular. I, for one, resent it. I received some papers of Mr. Hall's yesterday, which I was prepared to read and digest, but as soon as I saw that letter, I committed the whole lot to the flames; and if I'd had any doubt before as to which way to cast my vote, it would have decided me in Mr. Burnham's favour. This dirt throwing may suit some people, perhaps, but all broad-minded persons will be disgusted with it.

I guess that at the time that letter was written Mr. Burnham was a very busy man, and I'm quite confident that he didn't intend to insult the woman, as to the abrupt way in which he mentions the lost leg. Perhaps there was something in the woman's letter to him which made him think it advisable to leave that part out when writing to Ottawa. We don't know; but we all make mistakes at times.

Then, again, Mr. Hall, stand corrected! If you have cashed any of our Government cheques, you must know that it is not 35 dollars a month we received from Ottawa, but 40. Perhaps in a few isolated cases, a woman only draws 35, but that is not the Government's fault; it is because the husband, for reasons best known to himself, has only assigned her 15 dollars a month instead of the usual 20. Don't make it worse than it is, Mr. Hall. I've done a bit of grumbling at times about my own pay, because with a large family, even with the patriotic money included, I have a job to manage from month to month, as the prices increase; and I certainly have had to go without many things which I have been used to, but I believe in fair play. It is not the fault of Mr. Burnham that our money has not been increased. Every soldier's wife knows in her own heart, that he has worked hard in our interests; and I for one don't like seeing dirt thrown at him. Personally, I don't know Mr. Burnham at all, but I know that he was well liked in our good old 93rd Battalion, of which my husband was a member, and would he have been so well liked by those boys, if [illegible] thing? He had a name among the boys of being one of the right sort. Good luck to you Mr. Burnham, and a merry Christmas and a prosperous New Year to you; and may the best man win next Monday; and I'm sure that the soldiers, their wives, mothers and sisters will all join me in saying, three cheers for all our heroes at the front and all their dependents, and all honour to those who will never come back, and now altogether girls, three cheers for the man who is going to get our pay increased, three cheers for the good old 93rd Battalion, and three cheers for its right honourable late paymaster, very much right, and very much honourable.

And now, hoping I haven't taken up too much space, and thanking you in anticipation, Mr. Editor.—I remain, yours truly,

A Soldiers' Wife.

Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—Would you mind publishing the following? I have received so many insults since Mr. F. Miller's letter of the 10th, that I would like to explain the charities he mentions.

The charities he refers to by saying that I am the most ungrateful woman he ever knew, were received years ago, when as was a well-known fact at the time, 12 years ago, I lost my leg through carelessness and neglect. Upon leaving the hospital I fully intended bringing an action for damages. I have known now for some years I could easily have proved it. But I was told at the time that it was useless to do so, me being a poor woman with no money, and the city having lots; it would be impossible for me to prove it. I was also told that the city would be very good to me and help me in every way. The city allowed me coal and wood for one fire, also four dollars a month, which with the Hall fund which I received paid my rent at that time. I understood that I was to have that as long as I lived. I was certainly very much surprised on my son joining the soldiers, at its being stopped; but as Mr. Miller said at the time, I had no papers to prove anything. Upon leaving the hospital 12 years ago I received many kindnesses from Mr. Burnham, also from lots of other people, for which I was always grateful. I cannot say that I have felt very grateful for what the city has done for me, for nothing could make up to me for the years of suffering and hardship I have had to endure. There is no one but God and myself knows what I have had to go through. Mr. Miller has certainly made things considerably harder for me. He seems to think that people who have to accept help which he is paid by the city to give have no feelings. There are one or two people who have been exceptionally kind. I would like to thank them publicly, but I do not think they would like me to mention their names. One gentleman in particular—I don't know what I would have done had it not been for his kindness. Years ago I had much sickness in the house, often having two of the children very ill at the same time. This gentleman always came to my assistance at such times, often sending me coal when Mr. Miller would keep me waiting, and I often had to send two or three times before it would come. There is also a lady who has been very kind to me. I would like to mention their names, but as I said before, I do not think they would wish it. Mr. Miller is wrong in saying that I am not grateful to anyone who has been kind to me in the past years. I certainly do not mind acknowledging any kindness received. Regarding the moneys which Mr. Miller says I had from Mr. Burnham and have not returned. Just after my son joined I sent down to Mr. Miller for some coal as I had done for years, but he said I could not have any more, that I would be getting separation allowance and must manage the same as other people. Now, I am not placed as other people and certainly felt that under the circumstances any help I have received from the city I was fully entitled to, and did not consider it right to stop it. I had no money just at that time to get coal; so my son borrowed four dollars from Mr. Burnham to get half a ton of coal. Also my son wanted to pay it back as soon as he had his money, but I would not let him do so, for in the meantime I had written to Mr. Burnham, who had gone to Kingston, and had received in reply the letter there has been so much talk about. I said I would never pay Mr. Burnham until I could see him and thank him for that letter. I know Mr. Burnham has been very kind indeed to lots of the soldiers' relatives and has done many kind actions; and as I said in my letter of the 10th, I was very sorry indeed that the letter was made public. I had no idea it was going to be. Personally, it is years since I have had anything to thank Mr. Burnham for. I think Mr. Miller's remarks about charity, as he calls it, which happened so long ago, very uncalled for. It is well for Mr. Miller that I am a helpless woman.

In closing, I would like to say I have been waiting for the gentleman who put that letter in your paper to contradict the reports that I received money for it. I shall not answer any more letters; but if anyone wishes to have anything explained, I am always home, and if they do not know my address, it can be had from the Examiner.—Yours truly,

Mrs. E. Webb.

WAS EXEMPTED UNTIL OCTOBER

At to-day's session of the appeal tribunal, John Stuart Gibson, whose two brothers were killed at the front, was exempted until October the first next. Gibson appeared before Tribunal No. 276 and his claim was disallowed. He appealed, with the above result.

Arthur Wood, an employee of the Robert Fair Company, had his exemption extended from February the first until March the first.

Donations Received

The Examiner acknowledges with pleasure the receipt of further donations for the Great War Veterans' Club Rooms—the subscription including a cheque from Mr. G. N. Gordon for the substantial sum of $50.00. Mr. Gordon had already contributed a similar sum to the Christmas treat for children to be held by the Veterans. His example, it is hoped, will be followed by many citizens who appreciate the duty we owe to the men who have fought for us overseas. The sum of $2,000 is required to furnish the new headquarters. The cause is a splendid one. Here is the list of subscriptions:

J. J. Turner	$25.00
G. A. Gillespie	25.00
Mrs. J. Sanderson	5.00

Oleo. Much Cheaper In Detroit Shops Than In Toronto

WINDSOR, Dec. 14.—Because the regulations sanctioned by the Canadian Food Controller to govern the importation of oleomargarine into Canada from the United States are so bound up with "red tape" as to make it almost impossible for the butter substitute to be imported in small quantities, Ald. Thos. Eansor will ask the Windsor City Council at Monday night's meeting to accept a resolution demanding a modification of the regulations.

The difference between Detroit and Toronto prices for oleomargarine is from 3 to 6 cents, Detroit dealers, for some reason, being able to sell it at a much lower figure than the Canadian manufacturers.

VOTE-CATCHING PLAN IS DIRECT SLAP AT EXEMPTION BOARDS

BLENHEIM, Dec. 14.—The telegrams which have arrived here to be distributed to the various men, notifying them that exemption was to be granted them came like a bolt from the blue, and none are more annoyed with the turn things have taken than some of the strongest suporters of the former Government. It is looked upon as a direct slap to the local tribunal, who were not consulted in the matter at all, and could not believe that such a thing would be done. On all sides the action is described as a vote catcher. Cases were set down to be heard here before the county judge on December 20, that would be after the election, and the quick move seems to tell the tale.

The board here refused exemption to 45 out of 235 men, and by the list of exemptions now given 27 of them are allowed, and besides this it is thought here that a number have been wired to the same effect whose telegraph office at Charing Cross which will further reduce the number left. The members of the board are of opinion that there are others who are just as much entitled to receive exemption as those who have been notified. The board held that they followed the instructions they received at the beginning, and are very much put out over the turn things has taken. They claim they could have saved themselves and a host of others much worry and concern had they been told at the beginning that farmers and farm help was to be exempted wholesale.

EXEMPTION HAS LEFT DRAFT SHY BY 35,000 MEN

Government Must Order Re-examination or Call Married Men.

OTTAWA, Dec. 15. — Those in charge of the operation of the first application of the military service act have reported to the militia council. Their report states that as a result of the exemptions granted and from other causes only 65,000 men are available out of the first draft.

The figures show that 115,000 men were found physically fit for military service. The problem that the Government is now trying to figure out is how to get the other 35,000. The deficiency will have to be supplied either by re-examining the unmarried men or by calling out the married men who are in Class B. It is thought here that both these methods will be resorted to.

Men in That Province Will Not Be Included in Call on 3rd January.

OTTAWA, Dec. 14.—It is announced by Sir Robert Borden and the Military Service Council has acquiesced in his suggestion that, in view of the Halifax disaster and the distress and confusion resulting therefrom, the calling up nder the Military Service Act of men from Nova Scotia should be temporarily postponed.

Men from that Province will, therefore, not be included when the first draft is ordered to report on the 3rd of January, 1918. The men thus relieved will be called up shortly thereafter, either independently, or as part of a second draft.

800 NAVY VESSELS BEING BUILT; WORK IS AHEAD OF TIME

REAR ADMIRAL TAYLOR IN ONE PAGE REPORT SAYS "MEASURES ARE PRODUCING RESULTS"

Washington, D. C. — In what is probably the briefest annual report ever made by a government bureau, Rear Admiral David W. Taylor, chief of the Bureau of Construction and Repair, and charged with carrying out the greatest naval programme ever contemplated by any nation, summarizes his gigantic task in these words:

"These measures are producing results."

In one brief single page of type, Rear Admiral Taylor states that more than eight hundred naval vessels are under construction, from dreadnoughts and battle-cruisers of a size never before contemplated to the armada of submarine chasers designed, built and sent abroad immediately after the declaration of war.

A year has been saved in the construction of many destroyers, and other vessels not expected for delivery until late in 1918, are to-day in actual service in foreign waters. Although billions of dollars are involved in the contracts, the report confines itself to the statement that "all building facilities are being used and exceptional measures taken to accelerate the construction of certain types," and that "these measures are producing results."

DEATH.

PUBLIC OPINION

A Think Tank.
(Ottawa Citizen.)

Still, remember that the tank that had most to do with the British advance was he think tank on Byng's shoulders.

Gompers For Democracy.
(Toronto Globe.)

The Grand Old Man of Labour in the United States realizes that democracy is fighting for its life against Germany. He will have no apologies to make to it when the war is over.

No Virtue in Gloom.
(New York World.)

The German submarine campaign has broken down in its most ambitious undertakings. The British operations on the western front reveal a military establishment of marvellous effectiveness. The Italians are coming back and French courage has never weakened. It is time that pessimism again gave way to confidence. Even Russia may escape from the German and anarchistic conspiracies in which it is enmeshed and contribute something toward the ultimate victory. It is worth while to remember that whatever that whatever obstacles may confront the Allies now or hereafter, Germany's situation is worse. There is no virtue in gloom.

Middlemen.
(New York Commercial.)

Food, shoes, and other necessaries of life are dear and this has drawn attention to the high costs of distribution. In the case of perishable foods the difference between what the producer receives and what the ultimate consumer pays appears to be too great. Food Controller Hoover and other Federal, state and municipal officials are trying to eliminate part of this waste and bring producers and consumers closer together.

Demagogues and sensation mongers are seizing this chance to breed discontent. A western Representative in Congress, with the aid of some newspapers, is making capital out of the agitation by gross exaggeration of the situation. Socialistic public ownership is his panacea for reducing the high cost of living. The Government is to own and operate the railroads and the municipalities are to do the merchandising.

We cannot dispense with the services of the middlemen though some of them might improve and cheapen their service. In a grocery store or a department store the merchant gathers products from all parts of this country and most of the outside world for the accommodation of his patrons.

ENGINEER'S DARING FEAT.

Two Million Dollars' Worth of Platinum Brought From Russia by Young American.

A PACIFIC PORT, Dec. 15. — In boxes carried as luggage, F. W. Draper, an American engineer, brought from Petrograd 21,000 ounces of platinum, the safe arrival of which at a Pacific port was announced in Washington Thursday. The metal, valued at nearly $3,000,000, is consigned to the Secretary of Commerce, and is urgently needed for war purposes. Draper, in relating the story of his trip, said he travelled alone and unarmed across Siberia to Vladivostok, where he took a steamer.

Mr. Baker Is To Blame For Ordnance Muddle, General Crozier Says

Production of Rifles Reduced From 10,000 to 5,000 a Day Recently—No Field Tests For New Machine Gun—Deliveries of 34,000 Needed For Army Will Not Start Until Next April.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Dec. 17.—Responsibility for amazing shortages of ordnance in the American Army was placed squarely upon Newton D. Baker, Secretary of War, by Major-General William Crozier, chief of ordnance, testifying before the Senate Military Affairs committee in the army investigation.

For three hours General Crozier sat upon the witness stand, the target for a veritable drum fire of cross-examination, and disclosed conditions exceeding the fears even of the most pessimistic members of the committee.

Demands from Congress for a wholesale shake-up of the war administration were foreshadowed clearly by the attitude of the committee after to-day's hearing. Senators conducting the inquiry warned the country to be prepared for even more startling disclosures.

Rifle Production Reduced.

The most startling of General Crozier's revelations may be summed up as follows:

In March, 1917, just before the United States entered the war, the average daily production of rifles in the United States was about ten thousand. To-day, nine months after war was declared and with hundreds of thousands of American troops still unarmed, the average daily production has been reduced to five thousand.

The United States Army had practically no effective machine guns when war was declared. Not a machine gun was delivered to the army during the spring of 1917.

In June, without any field test whatever, the army adopted the Browning machine gun for the infantry. Approximately 34,000 of these are needed for the forty-five divisions of the regular army, the National Guard, and the National Army. Not one has yet been delivered. Deliveries will not begin until next April.

Meanwhile the French Government is supplying the American troops in France with machine guns. These guns, however, cannot use American standard ammunition, with the result that the French Government must supply ammunition also.

Democratic members of the committee were as relentless as Republicans in their questions to establish the responsibility for conditions in the army.

Mr. Baker Personally Blamed.

After listening to General Crozier's reasons for the machine gun shortage Senator Chamberlain, the chairman of the committee, said:

"General, I am not satisfied with your explanation."

"Neither am I," answered the General.

"Well, who is responsible?" demanded Senator Chamberlain.

"The Secretary of War," replied General Crozier, in an almost inaudible voice. "He has to be. He had direct charge of the tests of types. He took a personal interest in it. The Ordnance Department is in no way to blame for the shortage."

Senator Hitchcock, of Nebraska drew from General Crozier the admission that the average daily production of rifles in the United States had been reduced from 10,000 in March to 5,000 now.

"What is the cause of that?" demanded Senator Weeks, of Massachusetts.

"The production tapered off," General Crozier replied. "The producers allowed their organisation to get separated. Men left their employ, and it was difficult to get them back again."

Gross Neglect Charged.

"But has that been the result of gross neglect upon somebody's part?" persisted Senator Weeks. "They knew we were in a state of war. Wasn't it the business of somebody to see that their organisations didn't get separated?"

"That would have necessitated keeping the men on the pay roll at a large expense," answered General Crozier. "We did that to a certain extent at considerable expense to the government, and were severely criticised for it, but I am willing to take that responsibility."

Perhaps the only reassuring statements of General Crozier were:

No American soldier will go into action without the latest model rifle. Such rifles are being made and delivered in numbers sufficient to equip all the troops being sent to France.

The French Government will be amply able to supply the American troops with machine guns and machine gun ammunition until the manufacturers begin to deliver the new light and heavy model Browning guns now adopted as the standard American army machine gun

MR. BAKER TAKES BLAME.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Dec. 17.—Mr. Baker, Secretary of War, has assumed responsibility for the ordnance policy of the department, but was reluctant to discuss the disclosure by Major-General Crozier, Chief of Ordnance, before the Senate Military Affairs Committee, of an alarming shortage in guns and ammunition of all kinds. Mr. Baker said that this was information of a military character of value to the enemy.

"I cannot imagine any subject in which our adversaries would be more interested," said Mr. Baker.

The Secretary added that he expected that General Crozier would explain the ordnance situation fully to the Senate Military Affairs Committee and that he would go before the committee himself later to give any information that might be requested.

Mr. Baker said, with some emphasis, when the testimony of General Crozier before the Senate Committee was brought to his attention, that all of the facilities in the United States available for the manufacture of machine guns were being used and that the productive capacity was entirely covered by contracts.

NEW YORK, Dec. 14. — New York's coal shortage was greatly accentuated to-day as a result of last night's severe storm. OLEO-MARGARINE NOW BEING MADE BY TORONTO FIRM

TORONTO, Dec. 15. — Within the past week what promises to be a flourishing new industry has sprung up in Toronto. It is the manufacture of oleomargarine for the Canadian consumer, which has been made possible by the recent removal, until the end of the war at least, of the restrictions which have heretofore prohibited the manufacture or sale of this food product within the Dominion.

Two of the largest abattoir firms in the city, indeed in Canada, the Harris Abattoir Company and the Swift Canadian Company —have begun oleomargarine manufacture, while one or more new companies are said to be in process of formation with the view of manufacturing it also.

The two big firms which have become the pioneers in oleomargarine manufacture in this city already have more orders than they are able to fill, so instant being the demand for the product throughout Canada.

Prospects Are Bright.

"We only began the manufacture of oleomargarine this week," said Mr. McLean," of the Harris abattoir, "and the prospects for a big trade are bright indeed. "We installed at a cost of $20,000 special machinery for the manufacture, and although we are already turning out from six to seven thousand pounds daily, we cannot begin to fill the orders which are pouring in to us from our branch houses in all parts of Eastern Canada.

"We could sell four or five times the amount we are turning out. From all our branch houses at Montreal, Quebec, St. John, N.B., Halifax, Sydney, N.S., and other centres big orders are reaching us. Only to-day we had an order for one carload from Montreal, we couldn't fill, but sent on what we could.

"We already see the necessity of increasing the capacity of our plant to meet the big demand for the product."

"Asked to outline the materials which enter into the composition of oleomargarine, Mr. McLean replied they consisted of oleo-oil, cottonseed oil, lard, June butter and milk.

"Why June butter?" asked your correspondent.

"Because it is the best quality of butter made. In the manufacture of oleomargarine only the best butter will be used," replied Mr. McLean.

"What is the proportion of butter to the whole?

"From 15 to 20 per cent."

"At what price are you offering oleomargarine?"

"We are selling it at 32 cents per pound to the trade."

"What will be the retail price?"

"I am not in a position to state."

Process of Manufacture.

From another source more was learned regarding the process of manufacturing oleomargarine and the constituents of the product. oleomargarine is usually made from refined oleo-oil, churned with "neutral" lard, cottonseed oil, milk and butter. In the process of manufacture the beef fat is cut into small pieces and then "rendered" at the lowest practicaly temperature in water-jacketed kettles. The scum is taken off from the top and the scraps settle in the bottom of the kettle. The liquid fat is then drawn off and allowed to cool, when it becomes viscuous.

In order to extract the oil this mass is transferred in cloths to hydraulic presses and subjected to a great pressure. The solid portion which is left is known to the trade as "oleostearine" and finds many uses, particularly in the manufacture of lard substitutes.

The oleo-oil in the preparation of oleomargarine is a clear amber-coloured liquid and, when fresh, it is entirely free from any disagreeable odor or taste. It is a mixture of oline and palmitin.

"Neutral" is made by melting beef lard and allowing it to "grain" by standing at a temperature favourable for the crystallization of the stearine in corase grains.

These, then the oleo-oil, the "neutral" and usually one of the vegetable oils, such as cottonseed, are mixed with the necessary quantities of milk, cream or butter, with or without colouring matter, and churned in the same way as cream is in the preparation of butter. The product is cooled, drained, worked," salted and packed in much the same way as butter.

Will Offset Losses.

In Canada the fight against oleomargarine has been on the ground that it would injure or destroy the dairy industry, but it is argued on the other side that the new demand which the oleomargarine industry will create for milk, cream and butter will quite offset the losses which might occur in butter-making communities, through a possible decrease in the demand for butter for local domestic consumption.

If the Canadian consumption of butter should be less, there would still remain the never exhausted demand for Canadian butter for export at prices even in advance of those which the Canadian dairymen can secure for his product at home.

"Your office girl takes two hours for lunch and you take only 40 minutes." "Yes." "Why, is that?" "I guess it's because I can get along without a movie for dessert."

MANY ADVANCES DURING WEEK

The following comment on the market situation as regards food stuffs appeared in Canadian Grocer last week:

Oleomargarine of Canadian manufacture came into the market during the week, but importations from the United States have not yet started. The United States Department of Food Control had not yet issued the necessary licenses to export this commodity. It is expected these licenses will be forthcoming, although nothing definite has been given out. Advances have been numerous during the week, and include such commodities as marmalade, tobaccos, vinegar, small sizes of package teas, sauces, jelly powder, pickled and smoked fish, storage eggs. Nuts are moving freely. There is a firm situation in peanuts owing to the shortage of supplies. Brazil nuts were in firmer market with advances recorded in certain quarters. Some Manchurian walnuts in the shell came into the market during the week. While shelled Manchurian walnuts have been brought in heretofore, it is stated that this is perhaps the first time they have been brought to sell in the shell. Rangoon beans gave evidence of an easier market. Ontario beans are scarce and hard to get. Honey continues to be very scarce, with an advance recorded in comb in jars. There are fairly heavy supplies of barrel apples in the Ontario market, and it is anticipated lower prices would not be improbable. Potatoes showed an easier tendency, although farmers are still holding for high prices in the Ontario field. Carrots are in abundant supply, but are not moving. Arrangements have been completed for the purchase of the new crop Cuban raw sugar on the basis of 4.60c f.o.b. Cuba. This should mean a reduction in the price of Canadian refined when the new crop sugar begins to come on the market early in January. Business in grocery lines was reported very good during the past week, equal to the pre-holiday trade of last year.

"THE FILM OF FEAR"

By ARNOLD FREDERICKS

"Who was the woman who just left here—the woman who had just come in with you?"

Miss Ford favoured the detective with a glassy stare.

"I do not understand you," she exclaimed. "I came home alone. What is the purpose of these questions?"

Duvall felt that he had a shrewd opponent to deal with.

"Are you acquainted with Miss Ruth Morton?" he asked.

"Why—certainly— that is, I know her by reputation. She works for the same company as I do. Why do you ask?"

"Miss Morton has recently been the subject of a shameful persecution. The woman who just left this house is concerned in it. Who is she?"

"I do not know what you are talking about," the girl exclaimed, angrily. "I know nothing about any woman. You must pardon me, Mr. Bradley, if I decline to be questioned in this way any further." She moved toward the door.

"Then you wish me to understand that the woman who just this house did not come here with you?"

"Understand anything you please, I decline to be questioned any further."

Duvall made his way back to the sidewalk, thoroughly satisfied with the results of his visit. The Ford woman, in the first place, had lied. The other woman had been with her, beyond a doubt. Duvall thought of her picture on the wall of Miss Ford's room. The latter's reason for lying was equally clear. She and the woman with her were guilty.

In the second place, Miss Ford now realized fully that she was under direct suspicion. If, this being the case, she failed to take some step that would be fatal to both her confederate and herself, Duvall felt that he would be very much surprised. He made up his mind to keep close watch upon the house.

Suddenly it occured to him that Grace might be of immense service to him at this juncture. She could follow the Ford girl, unknown, unrecognized, while he himself could not. He decided to call her up at once, and ask her to join him.

At the corner, the lights of a saloon glowed brilliantly. With a final glance at the dark doorway of No. 162, he walked quickly down the street. He felt that, if he hurried, he need not be away from his post more than a few moments.

The call to his hotel developed the fact that Grace was not in. There was a lady asking for him, however, the clerk said, an alderly woman, who gave her name as Mrs. Morton. She had just come in, and seemed greatly agitated at not having found him.

The name, Mrs. Morton, filled Duvall with sudden apprehension.

"I'll speak to her please," he said. A moment later, he recognized the voice of Mrs. Morton over the 'phone.

"Is this Mr. Duval?"

"Yes."

"This is Mrs. Morton. Your wife came to me, a little while ago, and said that you wanted to see me at your hotel at once. She explained that it was of the utmost importance. Why are you not here?"

"I sent no such message."

"No such message! Then who did?"

"I do not know. You left your daughter alone?"

"Yes."

"Then, Mrs. Morton, I am afraid you have been imposed upon. Wait where you are. I will join you at once."

"Hurry, then, Mr. Duvall. If what you say is true, we do not know what may have happened."

"I will be with you in fifteen minutes."

"I will be with you in fifteen minutes."

The astonishing news given to him by Mrs. Morton filled Duvall with alarm. Clearly the supposed message from him had been part of a scheme to get her away from the hotel, to leave Ruth there alone. He scarcely dared think of the consequences. The following of Miss Ford now became a matter of secondary importance. Fearing the worst, he signalled to a passing taxicab, and drove as rapidly as possible to his hotel.

Mrs. Morton awaited him in the lobby. She was in a state of the utmost excitement.

"We must go back to the hotel at once," she cried. "Ruth is there all alone."

"Where is her maid, Nora?"

"I let her go out this evening."

"Then you should not have left the hotel."

"I would not have done so but for this imperative message from you."

"What was the message?"

"Your wife, or at least a woman claiming to be your wife, came to see me a little after eight o'clock. She said you had arrested the woman who has been sending these threats to my daughter, and that you needed me at once to make a charge against her at the police station. I naturally came here immediately."

"The woman who told you this—she couldn't have been my wife. Describe her."

"She was slight, small, neatly, but not expensively dressed with light eyes and hair."

"That was not Mrs. Duvall, but it answers very well the description of the woman that we are seeking. What did she do when you left the hotel?"

"You are not sure of this?"

"No."

"Then we have no time to lose. Come." He escorted Mrs. Morton to a taxicab and instructed the chauffeur to drive to her hotel at top speed.

Mrs. Morton had very little to say on the way uptown. She was naturally in a state of the greatest excitement. Duvall, too, was greatly concerned. He knew that the false message had not been given by Grace. What purpose had the woman in mind in getting rid of Mrs. Morton? The realization or what might have happened to Ruth alarmed him beyond measure.

The drive to the hotel occupied but a few minutes, but to Duvall it seemed hours. When they at last drew up before the hotel door, he sprang to the sidewalk, ordered the chauffeur to wait, and with Mrs. Morton at his side, hurried into the lobby.

"Give me my keys," Mrs. Morton cried, pausing for a moment at the desk. Then, with Duvall at her heels she rushed to the elevator.

As soon as they arrived at the door of the suite it was apparent that something was wrong. The door stood open. The clerk with one of the maids occupied the little parlour. Through the open door of the bedroom Duvall caught a glimpse of Ruth lying in bed, the figure of a heavily-set, and bearded man bending over her.

"Mrs. Bradley!" the clerk exclaimed, as soon as he caught sight of Mrs. Morton. "I'm so glad you have come. Your daughter has had an—an accident!"

Mrs. Morton paid scant attention to his words. She, too, had seen through the doorway the figure of her daughter lying in the bed. With a cry, she passed the clerk unnoticing, and went toward the bedroom door.

"Ruth!" she exclaimed in an agonized voice, then rushed into the room beyond.

CHAPTER XVI

When Grace Duvall, accompanied by the hotel clerk, found Ruth Morton lying on the floor in the parlour of her suite her first act had been to call for a doctor.

Her second was to gather the unconscious girl in her arms, and carry her into the adjoining bed room.

That Ruth was alive filled Grace with joy. She had feared something worse might have befallen the girl. Yet it was clear that some terrible shock had operated to reduce her to the condition in which she had been found. What this shock was Grace could only surmise.

She placed the girl upon the bed, and proceeded to remove her clothing. By the time she had gotten her beneath the sheets, the clerk came in accompanied by the hotel physician.

The latter after a hasty examination turned to Grace with a grave look.

"The young woman has experienced a terrible shock of some sort," he said. "She is very weak, and her heart action is bad." He took some tablets from a bottle in his medicine case and called for a glass of water. "Severe nerve shock of this sort is a serious matter," he exclaimed. "Sometimes it is fatal, at others the mind may be permanently affected. The young lady must be kept absolutely quiet of course. We will hope for the best. Give her a teaspoonful of this solution every hour. Force her to take it even if she does not regain consciousness. I will look in again in an hour or two. But be sure that she is kept absolutely quiet."

Grace sat beside the unconscious girl for a long time in silence. Once she went into the next room, and called up her hotel, thinking that Richard might have returned, but he had not. She felt that she could only wait where she was, until some word came from Leary.

The clerk, as soon as Ruth was attended to, had hastened down to the lobby, only to learn that the woman who had gone to Miss Bradley's room had not been seen.

It must have been almost an hour before Grace was informed by one of the bellboys that someone wished to speak to her on the telephone. She did not take the message in Ruth's room, the management having given instructions that no calls were to be transmitted there for fear of arousing the unconscious girl. She went quickly downstairs in the elevator and repaired to a booth in the lobby. One of the maids had been left to watch over Ruth.

The message was from Leary, as Grace had anticipated.

"Is this you, Mrs. Duvall?" the cabman asked.

"Yes. What have you discovered?"

"The lady got into her cab a little while after you left me, and drove away. I followed, as you told me to do. She drove to an apartment on 90th street, left her taxicab, and entered. The cab drove away. I am waiting across the street, in a drug store. The apartment is on the corner, 90th Street and Columbus Ave. Shall I stay here?"

"Yes. Wait until I come." Grace left the booth, and hunting up the clerk, told him that she was obliged to go out at once.

"Mrs. Morton should be back very soon," she said. 'One of the maids is sitting with Miss Ruth. Hadn't you better stay with her as well?"

The clerk nodded, then saw the doctor coming through the lobby.

"Here's Dr. Benson," he said. "I will send him up. The young lady will be quite safe until her mother comes."

Grace bowed to the doctor, then hurried out of the hotel, and jumping into a taxi ordered the driver to take her to Columbus Avenue and 90th street. She felt overjoyed to know that the woman Duvall had been seeking had at last been run to earth. She should Grace determined not escape a second time.

At 90th street, she found Leary, impatiently waiting for her in the doorway of the corner drug store, from which he had telephoned. He saw her as soon as she left the cab, and tipping his cap, came forward and joined her.

"She's in there yet, Miss," he whispered, jerking his thumb toward the building on the opposite corner.

Grace glanced in the direction indicated. A somewhat dingy looking apartment house stood upon the corner; its lower floor occupied by a florist's shop. The entrance was on 90th street. Leaving Leary on the opposite corner she crossed the street and entered the vestibule of the building.

The mail boxes on either side contained five names each, indicating that there were ten apartments in the building. Grace looked over the addresses in them carefully, but none of them meant anything to her. None was at all familiar. The name on the torn card had been Ford, but there was no such name among those before her. How was she to tell to which apartment the woman had gone? The situation presented an interesting problem.

Making a list of the names upon a visiting card, Grace determined to try them each in turn. She had observed that the building contained no elevator. She rang one of the bells and almost at once the clicking of the catch told her that the front door was unlocked. She turned the knob and entered.

The occupants of the two ground floor apartments were named Weinberg and Scully respectively. Grace tried both doors in succession, asking for Mrs. Weinberg at the one, and for Mrs. Scully at the other. In each case the woman who appeared bore no resemblance to the one that she sought and she was obliged to pretend that she had made a mistake. The doors were at once closed in her face.

(To be continued.)

He (proposing in a taxi)—"Say yes, darling." She—"Give me time to think." He—"Yes, but good heavens, not in here."

FACE COVERED WITH PIMPLES
ASHAMED TO GO OUT

Many an otherwise beautiful and attractive face is sadly marred by unsightly pimples, blotches, flesh worms and various other blood diseases.

Their presence is a source of embarrassment to those afflicted as well as pain and regret to their friends.

Many a cheek and brow cast in the mould of beauty have been sadly defaced, their attractiveness lost and their possessor rendered unhappy for years.

Why, then, consent to rest under this cloud of embarrassment?

There is an effectual remedy for all these defects.

It is Burdock Blood Bitters. This remedy will drive out all the impurities from the blood and leave the complexion healthy and clear.

Mrs. Katherine Henry, Port Sydney, Ont., writes: "Two years ago my face was so covered with pimples I was ashamed to go out at all. I tried several remedies, but they were of no use. At last a friend advised me to try Burdock Blood Bitters. I got a bottle, and by the time it was used I could see a difference. I then got two more, and when I had used them the pimples were completely gone. I can highly recommend B.B.B."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

By Order of Court

By Archey Cameron New

(Copyright, 1917, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Sleepy desolation settled more thickly on the courthouse square at placid Euclid Corners as the mercury steadily rose in the tube and the county seat sizzled under the fierce summer heat. Even the few horses hitched outside the general store while their masters dawdled on the steps with old Zeb Marks, were too lazy to brush aside the flies that swarmed about their sweaty flanks.

In the old courthouse across the square the county clerk and his single assistant, perched upon their high wooden stools, scrawling at the docket, bemoaned the fate that kept them there while the summer recess afforded some of their more fortunate brethren a chance to get away to cooler climes. But off in one corner of the old gray building, in a small chamber, rather imperfectly cooled by a large electric fan, lounged one individual who seemed to care not whether the rest of the world was sizzling. For behind a desk, heaped high with law books, stenographers' copies, blueprints and papers of every description, his feet encased in large, roomy gaiters, and resting on the desk before him, a huge silk "kerchief" wrapped about his seamy neck and an old green eyeshade perched atop his broad, humorous nose, old Judge Bates sat drowsily staring at the printed page before him, his thoughts afar off.

And into his musings, as if it were a dream, there stole the sounds of the rustle of a woman's dress, and suddenly he turned his head toward the half-opened door, and brought his feet abruptly to the floor. For a young, deliciously cool little apparition in a thin blue frock, revealing a white, rounded throat and a slender, graceful figure from the top of her glorious golden head to the tip of her tiny slippers, advanced toward him, a troubled look in her big blue eyes.

"Well, bless my soul!" exclaimed the judge, kindly, rising and extending his horny brown paw and grasping her slim white hand cordially; "little Ruth Marston. What brings you in town today?"

"I—came—for advice," faltered the girl nervously.

"Well, this is the place," said the other, smilingly. "Here—sit down." And he graciously brushed the dust from an old armchair and beckoned the orphaned daughter of his old law partner to be seated. "What is the trouble?"

She regarded him a moment in doubt, then plunged ahead.

"I—er—if—er," she stammered, and he leaned forward and patted her hand reassuringly.

"Go ahead," he urged, in a kindly tone. "Don't be afraid, Ruth. You're just like my own daughter. Is it—er—a love affair?"

She stared and looked into his keen eyes before replying.

"Y—yes," she admitted, blushing furiously. "I—wanted to know if I could—that is, can a young man—go back on you whenever he wants to?"

The old judge whistled.

"So," he exclaimed. "Is that it? Who's the feller? Is he—all right, Ruth?"

"I—I don't know as I ought to tell you," she continued, "but I thought maybe I could sue him for breach of promise."

"What!" almost yelled the judge. "A daughter of Sam Marston suing a man for breach of promise? Never. My dear girl, where's your pride? The idea!"

She dropped her eyes and blushed more furiously than ever.

"Well, I thought—" she started, then breaking into tears, she cried, through clenched hands, "but, judge, I love him so! And I do want him. He's so fine, so noble. And maybe it's my fault. He—"

The judge, who was gazing at her sympathetically, felt a wave of paternal interest surge through him, as he reached forward again and patted her arm.

"Never mind!" he interrupted, fondling his hand contentedly over his broad, bald pate. "Jes' leave it to me. Us old fellers don't have much fun these days. Nothin' new to interest us. This here business will give me something new to think about. Now, you jes' run along, and come back here—let's see—a week from today. that's it—a week from today."

And he settled back again in his chair and seemed to be drowsing. She started to speak, then checked herself, and, looking at him doubtfully, half lovingly, she tiptoed from the room and closed the door.

A clean-limbed young man, with a girl at his side, emerged from the Burns cottage, laughing merrily. They swung down the village street in step, he carrying a suitcase, and she a large box. On the opposite side, from behind the wide trunk of an oak, there stepped a gray-haired but vigorous old gentleman, and, staring after them, he shook his fist at their backs menacingly.

"Well, John Summers," grated Judge Bates between his teeth, for it was he who had been watching the house opposite for nearly an hour. "So you're 'lting' Ruth, eh?" He started to mutter something else, when a sudden resolution seized him and he swung across to the watched cottage and rang the bell.

"Judge Bates!" exclaimed Mrs. Burns in surprise, as she opened the door. "What brings you here?"

"I want to see young Summers," he answered, jumping at an excuse.

"Why, you just missed him," answered the woman; "he and Katherine just left. She's going back to the city for six weeks. He's taking her to the station. You see, Kit's going to marry John's brother. He works up in the city. Wanted her to come up and help pick out the furniture."

Judge Bates stood and gasped. She stared at him in amazement, and he caught her stare and brought himself back to earth with a bump.

"Can—I—er—would you," he stammered confusedly, "show me his room? I—er—I'd like to see how the young man is fixed."

"Why—no!" answered the surprised Mrs. Burns, taken aback at the unusual request. "This way, Judge."

Judge Bates prowled about John Summers' room, and several times paused and took various photos in his hand, then set them down without comment. Five minutes later he left the house, but a humorous twinkle had set in the corners of his keen old eyes and there was a grim set to his lips, as he ambled back toward the courthouse.

* * * * * * *

It was early morning, three days later, as Judge Bates sat across his desk from John Summers. For several seconds he had stared at the young man silently, then he broke into speech.

"You're a funny mixture, Summers," he was saying. "You're a whopping big fool, and a durn fine man. I kinda reckoned you was a bit proud. But th' fool part of it is—stoppin' speakin' to a girl jes' 'cause she's got money an' you haven't. Hang it, boy, haven't you got gumption enough to be lookin' forward? D'ye expect t' be poor all your life? Y' got th' counselorship fer th' plow works over t' Grandin. An' you're th' lawyer for the two Smith old maids. You're gettin' on. What's the matter with you?"

"But I haven't as much as Ruth has, judge," stubbornly persisted the young lawyer. "And I don't want her for her money."

"Stop!" thundered the judge, bringing his fist down upon the desk. "Stop before I—before this court loses its temper. Now, see here, you proud young fool, God bless you. I'm trustee for Ruth's money and her two brothers and sister, besides. Now I'm getting too old for that job. It's about time it went to a younger man. The law allows 7 per cent commission on the estate. That, with what you've got now, will be as much as Ruth's got. D'ye see?"

"Yes, but—" John started to protest, but again the judge exploded.

"No buts," he snapped; "you're appointed trustee for the Marston estate—to take effect at once. It's—it's an order of this court. And what's more—ye'll find Ruth over there in the next room. You've had your fill at looking 'round your room at her picture. Now, go get a good look!" And a second later a resounding smack from the next room acquainted Judge Bates with the fact that the order of court had been obeyed.

Few People Know This

Large doses of pills for the liver are not as efficient as small doses.

The big dose purges its way through the system fast, but does not cleanse thoroughly.

The small dose (if right) acts gently on the liver, and gives it just the slight help it needs to do its own work, and do it well.

Take one pill regularly, until you know you are all right.

PICKING MEN FOR WAR.

The Selective Draft Was Known In the Time of Moses.

Registration for a selective draft was known thousands of years ago. The first chapter of Numbers tells how Moses in the second year after the exodus from Egypt was commanded to choose from among the various tribes men to tabulate the names of the males over the age of twenty who were able to go to war. The passage, in part, follows:

"Take ye the sum of all the congregation of the children of Israel by their families, by their fathers' houses, according to the number of the names, every male by their polls; from twenty years of age and upward, all that are able to go forth to war, thou and Aaron shall number them by their hosts. And with you there shall be a man of every tribe. (Here are mentioned the men who are to assist in the registration.)

"And Moses and Aaron took these men that are mentioned, and they assembled all the congregation together on the first day of the second month, and they declared their pedigrees after their families by their fathers' houses, according to the number of the names from twenty years old and upward."

DIET AND DISEASE.

Rickets In Children Is Caused by the Wrong Kind of Foods.

"Beware of giving young children too much pasteurized milk, proprietary food or even cereals to the exclusion of brown bread and butter, stewed fruit or roasted apple and a little meat once a day," writes Dr. Reverley Robinson of New York in giving a warning note about rickets in the New York Medical Journal.

He adds that he is "considering especially children two or three years old who are healthy and vigorous unless rickets develops unawares by reason of faulty dietary." And he quotes the following from Osler:

"Like scurvy, rickets may be found in the families of the wealthy under perfect hygienic conditions. It is most common in children fed on condensed milk, the various proprietary foods, cow's milk and food rich in starches."

Rickets is the cause of knockkness and bowlegs. It is due to too little animal fat and protein in the dietary, together with too little lime salts.

Familiar.

A woman and her four-year-old son were on a visit to her brother-in-law in London.

One morning at the breakfast table the uncle said to the boy, "Here, Teddy, is something you don't see in Lancashire?" at the same time placing some small balls of butter in front of him.

"Don't us, though!" said the boy. "There are three balls of butter hanging outside the shop where mother takes our clothes every Monday morning! Ain't there, mother?"—London Globe.

Hurt His Professional Pride.

"I can't graft trees no longer for $3 a day," asserted the reformed crook who had applied for something to do on the farm.

"Three dollars a day is fair pay for working."

"But poor returns for grafting. Try me at something else."

The Haunted House.

Would Be Tenant—I like the house very much, but I hear that it is haunted. Landlord (rubbing his hands and smiling)—My dear madam, I attend to that personally. The ghosts only appear to tenants who do not pay their rent and refuse to move out.—London Telegraph.

Solomon's Orchestra.

It is asserted by some music historians that the greatest orchestra the world has ever known was supported by Solomon in his temple. According to Josephus, there were 20,000 harps and psalteries of solid copper and 20,000 trumpets of silver.

Close.

She—I suppose you saw some close things at the front? He—Rather! There was McDougall of our battalion—I think he was the closest.—London Ideas.

Subject For Pity.

Belle—She says her face is her fortune. Beulah—Well, I pity the person she wills it to.

Enjoy present pleasures in such a way as not to injure future ones.—Seneca.

SHIPS AND THEIR SIZE.

Why You Cannot Compare the Vessels According to Tonnage.

The different uses of tonnage terms when speaking of ships are causes of confusion to the lay mind, states Captain C. A. McAllister, engineer in chief, United States coast guard, in the Popular Science Monthly. For example, steamship companies in order to impress upon the traveling public the size and consequent relative safety of their craft will advertise the sailing of a certain steamer of 20,000 tons, meaning, of course, gross tons. The company's agent, in entering her at the custom house, will take great precaution to certify that she is of only 7,340 tons when paying tonnage taxes. He then is referring to her net tonnage, and, in fact, that standard is used only when paying dues or taxes.

Displacement tonnage is almost exclusively applied to warships, as they do not carry cargoes. Strange to say, the tonnage of a battleship varies almost hourly, as coal or other weighty objects are used or taken on board. The tonnage of warships is, however, fixed. They are referred to in terms of the fixed tonnage.

A statement that a 10,000 ton battleship sank a 10,000 ton merchant ship does not mean that the ships were of equal size. The merchant ship would be much the larger owing to the different meanings of the term "ton" as applied to the two types of vessels. It is absolutely impossible to give rules for the relations of these terms, as the conditions vary too greatly. Generally speaking, the gross tonnage of a ship is from 50 to 100 per cent greater than the net tonnage. Tons displacement are always in excess of tons gross. Deadweight tonnage is on an average from 30 to 50 per cent greater than gross tonnage.

THE BIBLE NEGLECTED.

Though Still the Best Seller, It Is Not Read as It Used to Be.

Although the Bible still leads all other best sellers, few read it. People still present Bibles to brides and grooms. People still present Bibles to children. Colporteurs still roam the country handing out Bibles among the villagers. Associations of devout enthusiasts still put Bibles in hotels. But the Bible is seldom read aloud in the home. And the type of American who daily reads his Bible in secret from a sense of duty is becoming more and more rare.

Quite apart from its moral and religious bearings, the neglect of the Bible involves a cultural handicap worth noting. It involves a cramping of the popular vocabulary, as no other literary masterpiece is such a well of English pure and undefiled. It involves a dulling of literary perceptions, as literature abounds in Biblical allusions which every reader of the Bible instantly understands, but which only readers of the Bible ever can. Finally it involves a failure to respond to many a good joke, as an astonishing percentage of the best quips are nothing more or less than Biblical allusions.

It is mainly useless, we realize, to propose a course of self enforced Bible reading for adults. We insist, however, that parents who want their children to get the most enjoyment out of life may well see to it that their children develop an acquaintance with the Bible. It is the basis of keen speech. It is the basis of intelligent reading. It is the basis of culture. And by culture we mean a capacity for enjoying the fine and beautiful things of this world and the capacity for producing some.

Fright and the Hair.

The hair does stand on end under certain conditions, because there is a little muscle down at the root of each hair that will make each hair stand up straight when this muscle pulls a certain way. It is difficult to say just how these muscles are caused to act in this way when we are frightened. We know that when thoroughly frightened our hair will sometimes stand straight up, and we know that it is this muscle at the root of each hair that makes it possible, says the Book of Wonders, but why it is that a big scare will make this muscle act this way we do not as yet know.

Women Farmers.

Upward of 120,000 women in England and Wales are working in agriculture. It is officially estimated one-third of the labor usually employed on the land has been taken for war work.

Unkind Wit.

The desire to shine by delivering himself of a crushing repartee all too often leads the witty individual into excesses that seriously offend charity and not rarely justice as well.

A wit that is unkind is not a gift to be proud of. It usually belongs to a discontented and spiteful person who apart from these failings would be a very nice friend, but the biting wit on which he prides himself keeps everybody at a distance. While one dislikes the person who is ready to agree to anything one may say, it is rather better to have that than continual disagreement and stinging wit.

Fattening Snakes.

There are ranches in the great southwestern part of the United States whose whole business is the fattening of rattlesnakes and other reptiles for market. The market for these creatures is an active one, including museum proprietors, circus men, sideshow actors, zoological devotees and also chemists who are after the various snake poisons

COULD NOT KEEP QUIET

Diseases of the nervous system are very common.

All the organs of the body may be sound while the nerve centres may be affected.

Many women become run down and wornout by household duties never ending, and sooner or later find themselves with their nerves shattered, and the heart action weakened.

On the first sign of any weakness of either the heart or nerves, flagging energy, or physical breakdown, do not wait until your case becomes hopeless.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will at once quieten the shaking nerves, strengthen the weak heart and build up the entire system.

Mrs. F. Bailey, 221 Earl St., Kingston, Ont., writes: "I was suffering very much with my nerves, so much so that I could not keep myself quiet at all. I was recommended to try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills so I bought three boxes, and I must say I have derived much benefit from them, so much so that my friends have all noticed the change in me."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c. per box at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Curious Choice of a Wife.

Some years ago an English curate surprised his parishioners by marrying a widow considerably older than himself. The astonishment was still greater when the cause was known. The curate had become engaged to a young girl whose frivolous conduct soon led him to regret the step. He offered a settlement for his release, but it was refused. He endeavored in every way to break the engagement, but without success.

"Is there nothing I can do to escape this?" he exclaimed one day in despair.

"Yes," remarked the girl's mother, who was present and who had been the prime mover in the marriage negotiations, "by marrying me."

The curate decided if he had to marry one of the two he preferred the mother and accepted her. The young girl married a wealthy stockbroker.

Inconsistent Teachers.

"And how do you find school, Harold?"

"Rather difficult, sir. The teachers are inconsistent. In English composition we are told to be original. In arithmetic we are all expected to get the same answer."

The Same Argument.

"I don't see why you complain about the size of my bill," said the doctor. "It is not as big as it might have been."

"That's all right," replied the man. "I wasn't as sick as I could have been either."

Awful Thought.

"And you ought to be made to eat humble pie."

"But don't you try to make it yourself, dear. Spare me that."

Giving Her Credit.

"Giddings willingly gives his wife full credit for what he is."

"What is he?"

"Bankrupt."

He that would have his virtue published is not the servant of virtue, but glory.

THE PLAY OF "HAMLET."

Does It Always Make the Dane and the Gravedigger Enemies?

In his "Notes on Shakespeare's Workmanship" Sir Arthur Quiller-Couch says that "Hamlet" was written "not for an audience of Goethes and Coleridges, but for an audience of ordinary men and women," and, speaking of its popularity, he says that to this day a traveling company of [British?] actors, thrown on their beam ends for lack of money, having acted this or that to empty houses, always as a last resort advertise "Hamlet." * * * When an actor takes a benefit, "Hamlet" is the piece most commonly chosen. * * * But why does the gentleman who enacts the first gravedigger also choose "Hamlet" for his benefit night?

I was once assisting at a dress rehearsal of "Hamlet" when the first gravedigger came off the stage in a passion. In the greenroom it exploded. "Why," he wished to know, "should I be treated like a dog by this conceited fool?"—meaning our Hamlet, of course. "His temper gets viler at every rehearsal. Surely, after airing his vanity through four acts, he might be quiet while I have my little say!"

"Bless you, sir," answered an old dresser, "it's always like that. In these forty years I've helped dress, I dare say, all that number of Hamlets, and Hamlet and the First Gravedigger always fall out. It's a regular thing. I've known 'em to come to blows. Hamlet and first gravedigger! When you've said that you've said oil and vinegar."

KEEPING TREES IN HEALTH.

Roots and Crowns Must Be Made to Balance Properly.

Well nourished, healthy trees are less liable to the attacks of insects than those that for lack of sufficient plant food are making a slow and uncertain growth. To keep trees well fertilized and in a vigorous condition is the best possible insurance against insect depredations and all forms of disease.

A soil which supplies abundant nutriment and moisture is the prime requisite for successful tree culture. In the forest natural conditions are favorable in this respect, but in the open field or town they are frequently quite the reverse. The roots are robbed of the required moisture and air by heavy sod or pavements. To grow trees under such conditions requires scientific care in the way of fertilizing and pruning to maintain proper balance between the roots and the crown or top.

If the nourishment received by the roots is scanty the judicious thinning out of the branches of a tree has much the same effect as soil improvement. A heavy top cannot be adequately nourished by a stinted root growth, and if not pruned the effect is quickly indicated by dying branches here and there, nature's way of maintaining the right balance between root and crown. It is better for the tree to forestall nature in this respect by timely and careful pruning. Dead branches are not only unsightly, but the scars thus left are slow to heal and invite disease and decay

Caroline Herschel.

Among distinguished women who have helped to shed light upon abstruse subjects was Caroline Lucretia Herschel, the noted astronomer. She was the daughter of a musician of Hanover. Her early education was designed to lead to a musical career. She accompanied her brother, William — afterward the illustrious Sir William Herschel—to England. Brother and sister soon turned their attention to astronomy, and in 1798 Caroline published a "Catalogue of Stars." Until Sir William died in 1822 she was content for the most part to be known only as his assistant, but later she engaged in many original and independent investigations. She devoted special attention to the discovery of comets, and claimed priority in the discovery of at least five.

No Hurry.

The telephone bell rang with anxious persistence. The doctor answered the call.

"Yes?" he said.

"Oh, doctor," said a worried voice, "something seems to have happened to my wife. Her mouth seems set, and she can't say a word!"

"Why, she may have lockjaw," said the medical man.

"Do you think so? Well, if you are up this way some time next week I wish you would step in and see what you can do for her."

War Endings.

No great war of modern times has ended during the winter months, nor, with the exception of the Russo-Japanese war, has any begun then. For a century all wars have begun in the spring, summer or early autumn and ended between March and August.—

"Well, have you been fixing your fences?"

"Been digging trenches," declared Congressman Flubdub. "I'm in for a real fight."

Fur Bearing Animals.

The fur trade in this country has grown to such proportions as regards its business value that naturally the concern of those engaged in it is directed to its permanency. Curiously enough, the prevalent opinion that fur bearing animals are fast decreasing in numbers is not correct as regards those animals which furnish the bulk of the fur business.

There are a number of fur bearing animals which cannot exist in civilized and thickly settled countries and which consequently are fast dying out. But muskrats, coons, skunks and some others seem to thrive and multiply in spite of civilization, for such old and thickly settled states as New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio still contribute largely to the fur trade, especially in muskrat skins. Should the time come when these animals cannot be had plentifully in their wild state it is not unlikely that they will be bred especially for their furs

Wit of Joseph Choate.

Joseph Choate had a decidedly nasal voice, but it was a beautiful voice, resonant as some big gong, and his rather unkind wit was as genuine as his courage. Every now and then his wit was touched with beauty, as when he said of the freshmen dormitories at Harvard that all they needed to make them rivals of the Oxford college buildings was ivy and time. Mr. Choate took a playful satisfaction in suddenly chilling auditors whom he had carefully warmed. Speaking once at a boys' school, three of whose graduates had acted as his secretaries when he was ambassador, he delighted his audience by his praise of these secretaries. After enjoying the pleasure of masters and boys Mr. Choate wound up by saying something like this, "Perhaps I ought to add that all I ask of a secretary is that he shall keep out of my way and shave every day."

Surmounting the Impossible.

It has been the experience of every forester as he goes about the country to be told that a certain mountain is impassable, that a certain trail cannot be traveled, that a certain stream cannot be crossed and to find that mountain, trail and stream can all be passed with little serious difficulty by a man who is willing to try. Most things said to be impossible are so only in the mind of the man whose timidity or inertness keeps him from making the attempt. The whole story of the establishment and growth of the United States forest service is a story of the doing of things which the men who did them were warned in advance would be impossible. Usually the thing which "cannot be done" is well worth trying.

Eccentric Place Names.

There are one or two place names in England which for eccentricity it would be hard to beat. Cornwall boasts of a village called Drunkards All And of a tithing called London Apprentice. The same of another Cornish village, Grumzia, sounds worse when spoken than it looks in print. The same may be said of the neighboring village of St. Eval, which is pronounced "Sandeval." Bishop Philpotts asked a candidate for ordination where he came from. "St. Eval," was the reply. "Dear me," remarked the bishop, "I know that Cornishmen venerate St. Tudy, St. Cuby, St. Uny and other saints unknown to the calendar, but I was not aware they had canonized the devil!"

A Generous Empress.

It is said that one morning at breakfast a general related to Napoleon III. the misfortunes of a brother officer, who, "because he had not 15,000 francs, must be dishonored." While the emperor questioned further particulars Eugenie flew to her room and, returning with a package of banknotes, said, "Take them, general, and never tell me his name." And his name the generous empress never knew.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Bad Combinations With Meat.

Dr. Fenton B. Turck says that "the use of meat has been shown to favor intestinal autointoxication; hence many advise total abstinence from the eating of meat." When meat is eaten alone or with a food that is nearly compatible, such as bread, the results are less undesirable than when eaten with a meal consisting largely of fruits, green vegetables, rice or milk, since these foods, being digested principally in the intestine, hasten the passage of the meat from the stomach, where it is best digested. Pork, for instance, requires five hours in the stomach; rice, milk, apples, uncooked cabbage, toast, potatoes average less than two hours, so that such a combination would not be as good as a larger quantity of beef or pork with bread alone.

The Secondary Marriage

During the war there have been frequent but for the most part unverified reports of German schemes for increasing future man-power by the promotion of bigamy or polygamy. We have now received some trustworthy evidence in the shape of a pamphlet, in its second edition, which has been published this year by the firm of Oskar Muller of Cologne.

It is called "The Secondary Marriage as Only Means for the Rapid Creation of a New and Powerful Army and the Purification of Morality." The author, whose name is Carl Hermann Torges, says that he is well over 70 years of age, and that he has "travelled almost every sea, and worked through life with open eyes." So he "appeals for unprejudiced examination of his proposals, the adoption of which may be expected to lead logically to the desired improvements."

The pamphlet is based upon the future needs of the German army, because "the military strength of a people depends in part upon the number of men able to bear arms." Germany's heavy losses in the war must be made good, and at the same time every effort must be made to meet the decline in the birth rate, which was lamented before the war. The writer declares that "the bachelordom of today is a cancer which must be extirpated. He denies that the expense of married life is the main reason why men remain unmarried, and he deals at some length with the economic training of women for marriage. He then leads up to his main proposals with a chapter which declares roundly that "the conception of immorality is relative," and that "good morals are only what the upper classes of society approve." The "facts" are said to give Germany "the justification, in case of necessity, to put the stamp of morality upon what today seems immoral. "In any case, if the falling off in births is to be counteracted, bachelordom must be reduced to the minimum which the circumstances require."

The main proposals are stated as follows:

Women in all classes of society who have reached a certain age are, in the interests of the Fatherland, not only authorized but called upon to enter into a secondary marriage, which is supported by personal inclination. Only a married man may be the object of this inclination, and he must have the consent of his married wife. This condition is necessary in order to prevent the mischief which otherwise might surely be expected.

The offspring of these lawful secondary marriages bear the name of their mother, and are handed over to the care of the State, unless the mother assumes responsibility for them. They are to be regarded in every respect as fully equal members of society. The mothers wear a narrow wedding ring as a sign of their patriotism. The secondary marriage can be dissolved as soon as its object has been attained.

Elsewhere Herr Torges says that he thinks that the objects of his new institution can be fulfilled in twenty years, and that secondary marriages might then be abolished. He ends his pamphlet as follows:

The difficulties consist solely in ethical scruples, which, notwithstanding the issue of the proper regulations by the State, will continue to operate until conscience has disposed of them. Thus this question becomes a religious question, which can be solved only with the help of the clergy. It rests, therefore, with the women and the clergy, assisted by the State, to determine whether Germany shall be able not only to maintain herself on her present pinnacle of morality, but by her own strength to stand up in the future as in the present to the pressure of enemies who are increasing numerically. — London Times.

Markets of Paris.

The first markets of Paris were established more than a thousand years ago in the Isle de la Cite. The booths were hereditary property, and their descent was generally from mother to daughter, who held them directly from the monarch. During the stormy times of the revolution these market women were conspicuous by their qualities of arm and tongue, both grown strong by centuries of sturdy exercise. These characteristics however, do not appear in their successors, who trust to their cleverness and coquettish charm to fight their battles.

No Harm In Cucumbers.

The cucumber is not, in any sense, a poison nor an injurious vegetable. Sprinkling the sliced cucumber with salt is unnecessary. It does not "draw out" any poison. It only wilts the vegetable and renders it less appetizing. The harm resulting from eating cucumbers is due to the neglect to thoroughly chew the cucumber slices before swallowing them. All foods, green ones in particular, need to be most thoroughly masticated before they are swallowed. The cucumber gives zest to a meal, especially if it be served cold and crisp. In preparing the cucumber first peel it and then slice it in very thin slices and place these in plain ice water to soak and become crisp. It requires an hour for this usually.

Chances For Success.

I have many times been asked if, in my opinion, the young man of today had as good chance to make his mark in the business world as did his elders. My answer is, "Never since our pilgrim fathers landed on the shores of Plymouth were the opportunities for the young man's success greater than they are today. It is for him to determine whether he will be a success or not."

A Mathematician.

"Daddy," said Bobby, who was eating an apple, "what would be worse than finding a worm in this apple?"

"I do not know, son, unless it would be worse to find two worms."

"No," said Bobby. "It would be worse to find half of a worm."

Musicians In Army and Navy.

Each regiment of the army has a band. Men in the band have no military duty to perform other than that of playing, unless the band be mounted, in which case the care of a horse follows. They have ample time to practice and are constantly under the instruction of a chief musician, who is an expert in his line. The duty of a musician in the navy is not hard. The band plays twice daily for an hour. Musicians attend no drills and do no work except keeping their quarters clean.

Warlike Women.

The most celebrated warlike women among the ancients, apart from the fabled amazons, were the Helvetian ladies. Caesar praises highly their military achievements. In more than one instance the legions of Rome turned their backs on the fair ones of Switzerland. During the crusades women often performed the most romantic and chivalrous deeds, dying cheerfully by the sides of their lovers and husbands.

Cleaning Fluid.

An excellent homemade cleaning fluid used generally for many emergencies is made by dissolving four ounces of white castile soap in a quart of boiling rainwater. When cool add two ounces each of alcohol, ether and glycerin, four ounces of ammonia and finally one gallon of rainwater and then bottle. This will remove grease spots from clothing and spots from table covers, carpets and rugs.

ENEMY CHECKED BY LAND AND WATER DEFENCE

Entire Gulf of Venice Has Been Scene of a Continuous Naval Lagoon Battle---Huns Are Trying to Turn the Italian Right Wing By Progressing Around the Northern Limits of the Venetian Gulf---Calm on Western Front.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(By Henry Wood.)
(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES IN ITALY, December 17.—Italy is waging the war of the Lagoons to save Venice, the strangest, half acquatic, water and land conflict the history of war has ever known. Fifteen centuries ago Attilla and his original huns reached exactly the same spot between the Piave and the Sile rivers that the Modern Teutonic huns have reached to-day. Fifteen hundred years ago the original inhabitants of this section fled from the mainland and on the gulfs and flats of the lagoons founded the island colonies which eventually became Venice. Over the same intervening canals, marshes, lagoons and lakes by which Attilla and his huns were checked, Italian forces to-day are checking the modern-day huns. They are checking the enemy by a highly perfected land and water defense which, when the conflict is over, will form one of the most interesting chapters of the whole history of the war.

Since November 13, when the Austrians in crossing the lower Piave in their headlong rush to Venice were suddenly checked by the Italian lagoon defences, the entire Gulf of Venice, with its endless canals and marshes, with islands disappearing and reappearing with the tide, has been the scene of a continuous naval lagoon battle. It was still progressing today. The fighting is absolutely precedent.

The modern huns are desperately trying to turn the Italian right wing by progressing around the northern limits of the Venetian Gulf.

For the purpose of the lagoon battle, as well as for general defence, the Italians inundated the section and sealed all Adriatic entrances into the gulf by mine fields. The Venetian Gulf, therefore, was converted into an isolated sea.

Over this inland waterway the conflict is raging bitterly.

To fit their purposes of defence, the Italians have developed a lagoon fleet ranging from the fleetest of motor moats, armed with machine guns, small cannon and torpedo tubes, to huge, cumbersome, flat bottomed British monitors, mounting the biggest of marine guns. All the Italian vessels navigate secret channels dug in the bottom of the shallow lagoons. Only the Italian war pilots know these courses. Even gondolas steering off the channels are instantly and hopelessly stranded. Not only this, but since the muddy flats and marshy islands do not permit artillery emplacements, the Italians leave developed an immense fleet of floating batteries.

The guns range from three-inch field pieces to the great 15-inch monsters. Each is camouflaged to represent a tiny island, a garden patch, or a house-boat.

Floating on the glass-like surface of the lagoons, the guns fire a few shots and then change position, making it utterly impossible for the enemy to locate them. The entire auxiliary service of supplying this floating army has been adapted to meet the lagoon warfare. Munitions dumps are on boats, constantly moved about to prevent the enemy spotting them.

Gondolas and motor boats replace the automobile supply lorries customary in land warfare. Instead of motor ambulance, motor boats carry off dead and wounded. Hydroplanes replace ordinary fighting aircraft.

Throughout the whole lagoon front the army and navy organization is concentrated and co-ordinated.

Along the northern limit of the Venetian Gulf where the Austrians, having filtered into the Piave delta, now seek to cross both the Sile and the Piave, the enemy each night hooks up pontoons. At daybreak every morning one end of a huge pontoon structure is anchored to the east bank of the Piave and the other flung out to the strong current, which soon stretches the makeshift bridge across.

The moment this happens the enemy infantry madly dashes across.

Simultaneously the Italian floating batteries open a terrific fire. Every evening the Austrians have tried the trick, and every morning they have failed with heavy losses to effect a crossing.

Flooding of the delta maroons thousands of Italian families on island-like patches and likewise cuts off some Austrian troops. The latter stick stubbornly to their strongholds, supplied by Austrian boats. Day after day these patches of land are scenes of fierce hand-to-hand fighting, when small detachments on either side try to drive the other off.

LONDON, December 17.—There is nothing of special interest to report, says the official announcement to-day from the War Office.

LONDON, December 17.—London newspapers forecast that the Allies will recognize the defacto rule of Bolsheviki in order to prevent Russia from passing under the political and economic heel of Germany.

This is along the lines of the statement made by Lord Robert Cecil, Minister of Blockade, in an interview with the Associated Press on Friday. A step in the re-establisment of relations with Russia may be seen in the report that Great Britain has decided to release the Russian, Tchitcherin, who is in prison in London as a treasonous propagandist, but who has been chosen by Bolsheviki as Ambassador to London. The Bolsheviki have now withdrawn the refusal to permit British civilians or couriers to leave Russia. Presumably the Bolsheviki will not insist on Tchitcherin occupying the post of Ambassador, and he will return to Russia immediately.

The same signal will be given again at 10.30. If the result is entirely in doubt, the lights will not go out.

ROBBERS ARE ROUNDED UP AT NIAGARA FALLS

Police Believe They Have Arrested Two of the Gang Who Have Been Terrorizing the Whole Niagara District for the Past Few Months

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Dec. 17.—The Niagara Falls police think they have rounded up two of the gang of highway robbers who have been terrorizing the whole Niagara district, robbing foreigners by the wholesale in the vicinity of St. Catharines, Niagara Falls, Welland and Port Colborne. In the last few months the gang has cleaned up six or seven thousand dollars. Yesterday morning early two Spaniards, who came to Niagara Falls, were going to their boarding house when they were suddenly set upon by three masked men, who thrust pistols in their faces, and ordered them to "shell out" their money. The Spaniards put up a stiff fight and the robbers beat them unmercifully. One man had $500 in his shoe and the other $650 in the breast of his vest. The robbers took this and made their escape. City police arrested Benjamin Alvarez and Bartholemew Palei, two Spaniards, on a charge of doing the robbery. They had no money on them when arrested. They were remanded until the 24th.

COLD SNAP AT KINGSTON

Meekle's Election Over Richardson is Conceded

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

KINGSTON, Ont., Dec. 17.— This was a cold day for the elections. The official record showed nineteen and a half degrees below zero. It is conceded that W. F. Nickle will have a majority of 2,000 over Dr. A. W. Richardson, Liberal candidate. The latter has not a strong organization, while the Unionists have a big band of workers who are doing their best to get out every voter..

Front Of The Stove Blew Out

Mr. Jonathan Pursglove, 107 Aylmer Street, is Badly Injured

Jonathan Pursglove, 107 Aylmer St., was seriously injured yesterday morning at 9.15 when the water front of his stove blew out.

The fire in the kitchen stove, which had been banked up during the night, When Mr. Pursglove came down at 8.30, seeing the fire out and the pipes leading from the tank frozen, he started a new fire. In a few moments the steam generated, blew the stove into complete wreckage, parts of the flying iron hit Mr. Pursglove in his left eye, blinding him. Both his legs were also broken, and he was taken in Bellegham's ambulance to Nicholls Hospital unconscious and in a critical condition. Dr. Neal was in attendance. Inquiries to-day found him to show slight signs of improvement.

Aldermen Will Seek Re-election

To-day His Honour Judge Huycke is dealing with a number of appeals respecting mistakes and omissions in the municipal voters' list. With the Federal elections out of the way, local interest will be focused on the municapal elections. One week from to-day will be nomination day, and on New Year's Day the fate of the candidates will be decided by the electorate. The aldermanic terms of five aldermen expire with the year, and they will have a choice of dropping out of the municipal limelight or standing again for re-election. The aldermen whose terms expire this year are: J. Saunders, G. H. Duncan, A. H. Stratton, W. Langford, and A. Weir.

Aldermen Stratton and Duncan will enter the Mayoralty contest, and the three remaining aldermen will appeal to the people for a renewal of public confidence.

27 SQUAWS AT CHEMONG ENFRANCHISED, FATHERS OF SOLDIERS OVERLOOKED

When the Borden Government handed out the ballots with Meighen discrimination, the deal placed the braves of Chemong Village in a strange position. The mothers and sisters of the soldiers who enlisted from the reserve were nfranchisd for the purposes of the present elections, but the fathers were entirely ignored.

Thus there were twenty-seven votes from the Indian Village. The nearest polling place is at Selwyn. It was stated by one of the Indians that neither party sent representatives to address or instruct the women electors, and of course there was no intimation that the braves would have any infilluence over their wives, or whether any infilluence or instruction was necessary.

REV. R. G. PEEVER CREATES A STIR IN A. LONDON, ONT.

Former Peterboro' Pastor Undertook to Advise His Congregation How to Vote—Politics From the Pulpit

FEELING RUNS HIGH

LONDON, Ont., Dec. 17.—Political feeling, which has been running high the past few weeks, continues strong on the eve of the elections. Yesterday morning Union government received support in several churches, and in one case the mention of politics produced a sensation. This was in the First Methodist, one of the largest churches of western Ontario. Rev. R. G. Peever, who came here from Peterborough, undertook to advise his congregation how to vote. One member who differed from him stated afterwards that many kept their seats because hey were here before Mr. Peever, and they did not want the church to suffer. Howerever, others could not tolerate what hey considered objectionable from the pulpit, and in the middle of his address half a dozen men left the church, also one lady, who walked from the front in protest. A prominent citizen who remained seated made a remark to another who was leaving, which provoked the latter to slap the other.

After the minister's remarks were finished the sensation of the morning was increased by a member of the congregation voicing his protest, saying that he had intended voting for Union Government, but that Mr. Peever's acion had made him alter his decision.

Food Crisis In Belgium

A Terrible Christmas Prospect —Children's Milk Fund

With recollections of the agony of last Christmas in Belgium, energetic steps are being taken to overcome the shortage of milk and to secure for the young children, the aged and the sick people, the necessary nutrition. The committee has already received a first loan of five million francs, which is an endeavour to acquire the necessary cattle, fodder, stables, and other material.

A child has to be, however, in the last stages of starvation to benefit by such assistance. So long as a semblance of health and strength can be maintained, by the ration of a bowl of soup and a slice of bread per day, nothing can be done for the children, and for the extra assistance given to the children who are suffering from tuberculosis, rickets, and other symptoms of malnutrition, the amount that can be done is dependent upon the generosity of some well-to-do Allies.

Belgium pleads to Canada for support, and surely at no time could the appeal be more strongly made than in the midst of the preparations for our own Christmas festivities.

NEGOTIATIONS AT STOCKHOLM FOR A SEPARATE PEACE

Philip Scheidman, Leader of the German Majority Socialists is Conferring With Bolshevi.ki Minister in Swedish City

REFUSES TO TALK

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By Joseph Shaplen.)

STOCKHOLM, Dec. 17. — Philip Scheidemann, leader of the German majority Socialists, is here to-day conferring with Bolsheviki Minister Orlovsky on peace between Germany and Austria. "I am very sorry, but I cannot discuss the nature of my conferences with M. Orlovsky," Scheidemann tlod the United Press to-day.

Orlovsky was equally reticent. From other sources, however, it was reported that Scheidemann had been clothed with full powers by the German Government, which had directed the peace angling at Stockholm rather than at Brest Litovsky, because proceedings at the latter place were subject to full publicity by the Bolsheviki. The Brest Litovsky conference of commissioners representing the armies of Germany and Russia will presumably continue, irrespective of negotiations at Stockholm.

The Bolsheviki, it was reported, first suggested the conference with Scheidemann at the Swedish city in the belief that they could line up Scheidemann's majority Socialists against German imperialism.

After four months' efforts, Scheidemann has finally managed to meet with a representative of Russia to angle for peace. Scheidemann, the leader of the majority Socialists, is a firm supporter of the German government, managing in some inexplicable way to bend his pseudo-Socialistic creed to fit in with Germany's autocratic course. It was Scheidemann who last summer tried for weeks to call an "International Socialist conference on peace" at Stockholm. At that time, it was known that he was a direct agent of the German autocratic government and presumably the government was seeking to foster just such an alleged Socialist meeting. At any rate the German government "Socialists" of the Scheidemann type would manage to dominate and control any such "International." Scheidemann lined up the International Socialist Bureau of the Hague behind such an International conference. Then French Socialist and Labour members were forbidden to attend any such patently German inspired meeting and the conference fell through.

Donations For Christmas Treat Of Soldiers' Kiddies

The Examiner wishes to acknowledge, with thanks, the receipt of a number of donations for the Christmas treat for soldiers' kiddies under the auspices of the Great War Veterans. Among them is the sum of $13.80 from the employees of the Bonner-Worth Company, $10 from Mr. and Mrs. Geo. A. MacDonald, $10 worth of toys from Richard Hall and Sons, and a barrel of apples from Mrs. Oke. The treat will be held on Saturday afternoon at the Salvation Army Temple, Simcoe street.

Official Announcement to This Effect Was Made Yesterday—Treaty Has Also Been Formulated it is Stated in Petrograd.

CONFIRMED BY HUNS

PETROGRAD, Dec. 16.—Announcement was made to-day by the Bolsheviki official News Agency that Russia and Germany had agreed upon the terms of an armistice. It is reported that a treaty has also been formulated.

The Russian delegates constituting the Armistice Committee at Brest-Litovsk have advised the Bolsheviki authorities at the Smolny Institute that an agreement was reached with the Germans on Friday concerning the transfer of troops. It was to this effect:

"Both sides signing this agreement bind themselves until December 30, 1917 (January 12, 1918), not to carry on operative military transfers on the front from the Baltic to the Black Sea, except such transfers as were already begun up to the moment of signing this agreement.

Confirmed by Berlin.

An armistice agreement between the Bolsheviki Government in Russia and the Teutonic allies was signed at Brest-Litovsk on Saturday, according to official announcement made by Berlin to-day.

The text of the communication follows:

"An armistice agreement was signed at Brest-Litovsk yesterday by plenipotentiary representatives of the Russian Upper Army Administration on the one hand, and those of the upper army administartion of Germany, Austria-Hungary, Bulgaria and Turkey on the other hand.

"The armistice begins at noon, 17th December, and remains in force until 14th January, 1918. Unless seven days notice is given it continues in force automatically. It extends to all the land and air and naval forces of the common fronts.

"According to Clause 9 of the treaty, peace negotiations are to begin immediately after the signing of an armistice."

Nicholas still a Prisoner.

An official denial was made at Smolny headquarters this afternoon that Nicholas Romanoff had escaped from Tobolsk.

In view of the announcement that the British Government is prepared to re-examine the question of the detention of MM. Tchitcherin and Petroff, Russian citizens, under arrest in England, with a view to their return to Russia, Leon Trotsky, Bolsheviki Foreign Minister, has ordered that British subjects shall be free to leave Russia.

Kaledines Reported Captured.

The Petrograd official news agency says the Bolsheviki have captured three important cities in the Don Cossack territory and that General Kaledines, leader of the Don Cossacks, has been arrested, apparently by his own generals. With Korniloff reported defeated and wounded near Bielgorod, the only one left of the counter revolutionary triumvirate of military leaders is General Dutoff, hetman of the Ural Cossacks, who has been operating in the Province of Orenburg.

Germans Getting Fat.

The Germans already have begun to obtain fats and other sorely needed supplies from Russia, according to information reaching Petrograd today.

Charles Smith, of St. Louis, a member of the staff of John F. Stevens, head of the American Railway Commission to Russia, is reported to have been arrested.

Peterboro' Soldier Dies Of Wounds

Mrs. Ernest King, 312 Townsend street, has been officially notified of the death of her husband from wounds received in action. Private Ernest King who was a member of the 93rd Battalion, died in No. Australian Casualty Clearing Station as a result of gunshot wounds in the back. He leaves a wife and one young child.

MONDAY, DEC. 17, 1917

NOW FOR OURSELVES.

For the past month we have been working with patriotic or partizan zeal, as the case may be, to save the country. By the time this is read the elections, as far as the voting in Canada is concerned, will be decided—we shall know whether the Borden Government has had its many sins forgiven, or whether Canada's grand old man has reaped the fruits of national sanity.

Now we can get down, with minds undivided, or undisturbed, except by the lingering reflux of political passion, to our own domestic affairs.

We can give ourselves to the duty of civic recognition of the claims of our War Veterans, and to the consideration of, in part, rewarding them for the services they have rendered under arms. Many of their comrades are eternally provided for—with lonely, cross-marked graves in a foreign land; and, pending national recognition and reward, which, judging from precedent in this and other countries, will be officially tardy. We can do our bit by helping furnish their new quarters, and providing a comfortable "home," where the Veterans, who have done so much for us, may rest from their labours and, looking about them, may see comfortable evidences of the gratitude of their fellow citizens.

Then we have our own civic election to look after. This will be an easier matter—the issues are clearer, more distinct, more uncloaded; and half the electorate will not have hanging over them the damper of a loaded franchise act and an adjustable voters' list. All we have got to do is to proceed in the same old way to elect a mayor and ten aldermen. And this year that will be a matter of no small moment. War conditions and other things have combined to prepare a pretty heavy programme of responsibility for our civic rulers the coming year, and we shall need a body of councillors of business ability and broad outlook, to successfully manage our business.

We have, besides, special questions to be decided by popular vote. We shall have the responsibility of deciding for or against the proposed change in the manner of election of aldermen—from the ward system to the system of election by general vote. If the people declare for the former, they will still continue to be directly represented by only two of the ten aldermen comprising—with the Mayor—elected by the vote of the whole body of electors—our City Council.

Then we shall be called to endorse the agreement of the City Council to grant possesion of a part of a nominal street reserve to the De Laval Company, so that it can expand—by the construction of new buildings, for which there is no room available on any other portion of its site.

Do your Christmas shopping early, and do a good deal for the necessitous and unfortunate.

"Well, the war brings new alignments." "Yes, yes. Various people view it in various ways. Heard a lady at the drug store the other day insisting that the druggist cash a Canadian quarter at face value, on the ground that we are now allies."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

INDUSTRIAL EXPANSION.

The Examiner has previously called attention, and given praise to the splendid manner in which Peterborough as a city and an electorate has shown its attitude of staunch loyalty, fair play and liberality to our manufacturing industries — an attitude, combined with corresponding action, to which we owe the possession of one of the most important, if not the largest, civic group of manufacturing industries, according to our size, in the Dominion.

Last year we demonstrated this attitude by incurring considerable financial responsibilities. Now we are called upon to demonstrate this attitude upon easy terms—without incurring any expense—simply by the cession of a part of an unused street reservation to the De Laval Company so that it can have space upon which to erect needed additions to its already extensive buildings.

It may be well to recall that when the city furnished a site for the De Laval Company it reserved a strip on the north end forty-eight feet wide for a street. The company asks possession of forty feet— eight feet being still reserved for a public thoroughfare—and the city has agreed to grant it, subject to the approval of the ratepayers.

And this matter will be submitted to the ratepayers, who will doubtless favourably consider it. The company's request, while made in its own interests, is also in the interests of the citizens. The larger the company's plant and buildings the better for the city.

And so far as the expression can morally apply, the company has earned consideration. It has kept, and more than kept the letter of its agreement with the city. It agreed to build a modern factory and employ at least fifty hands. It has erected and has in operation a modern factory three times the size agreed upon and employs four times as many hands—as against fifty. 200 hands with a yearly pay roll of $200,000. It thus contributes to the money circulation of the city every year ten times the outlay Peterborough made for all time, to secure the establishment of the De Laval in the city. And the city gets this back in another way.

The company was exempted for ten years from all but school and special taxes. In meeting the latter it pays about $2,000 per year. It has been doing this for five years and in another five years the company will have repaid in school taxes the total of the city's cost in respect of the company.

The company has done well for the city and has, by its enterprise and substantial contribution to the city's prosperity and industrial importance, one may say, fairly earned the comparatively small request it presents—the surrender of a part of a street, that is virtually useless now and prospectively—as site for the erection of large additions to the splendid group of buildings it uses in the operation of its important and expanding industrial activities.

This is wash day for the thrifty housewife; will it be whitewash day for the Borden government?

BRITAIN AND U.S. DEARER.

Food Controller Quotes Figures to Prove That Most Staples Are Really Cheaper Here.

OTTAWA, Dec. 14.—Hon. W. J. Hanna, Food Controller, quoted the following figures in an address to show that some prices are higher in Great Britain than in Canada:

	Canadian.	British.	Difference per cent
Milk	10½c	14c	35⅓
Eggs	51c	85c	66⅔
Bacon	42c	57c	36
Round steak	28½c	52½c	85
Oatmeal	6½c	10c	54

Similarly he quoted the following for the United States and Canada:

	Canadian.	American.	per cent Difference
Potatoes	$1.74	$2.71	56
Bread	.07	.11	47
Bacon	.43	.48	12
Beef	.29	.30	5
Butter	.50	.54	3
Rolled oats	.07	.09	28
Rice	.09	.11	21
Fish	.18	.23	27
Cheese	.30	.35	16
Milk	.11	.12	9

In four notable cases only were American prices lower, namely:

	Canadian.	American.
Lard	.32	.31
Sugar	.11	.10
Eggs	.54	.49
Coffee	.40	.31

He declared that there was not a bushel of exportable wheat in the United States, allowing for normal consumption, but that 100,000,000 bushels would be obtained by cutting down consumption. He urged Canadians to save 20 per cent. of their normal consumption.

5,000 NORWEGIANS LOST.

Sailors Who Have Been Victims of Hun Subs. and Mines.

LONDON, Dec. 15.—It is stated officially that Norway has lost 5,000 sailors during the war, a Central News despatch from Christiania reports. The sinking of two more steamships is told of in the despatch.

Fire and Water.

Why does water put out fire? This is at first a puzzling question, because back in your mind is the thought that, since hydrogen and oxygen are necessary to make a fire burn, it seems strange that water, which is composed of oxygen and hydrogen, will also put it out.

A burning fire throws off heat, but if too much of the heat is taken from the fire suddenly the temperature of the fire is sent down so far below the point at which the oxygen of the air will combine with it that the fire cannot burn, says the Book of Wonders. We speak commonly as though water thrown on a fire drowns it. That is practically what happens. Scientifically what happens is that the water thrown upon the fire absorbs so much of the heat to itself that the temperature of the fire is reduced below the point where oxygen will combine with the carbon in the burning material and the fire goes out.

Men Who Succeed.

Thomas E. Wilson, the Chicago packer, says in the American Magazine:

"The higher up he is the more dependent an executive becomes on those under him. The real success of an executive, it seems to me, rests on his ability to promote wisely, and at the same time to keep the force working in harmony and contentment. A little jealousy here and there in an organization can ruin its efficiency. I have known men who had enough general grasp of things to have made great department managers, only they could not get along harmoniously with those about them. If a man can't get along pleasantly with his associates he cannot successfully handle a force of men. I never like to promote a man to a responsible place if he has failed to work in hearty co-operation with the men alongside of him. When you hear men say of their boss, 'He is a good fellow to work for,' you may know he is a successful executive."

Brandon the Executioner.

June 20, 1649, was the day on which Richard Brandon, official executioner for the city of London, died, says the Dundee Advertiser. Tradition has it that he decapitated Charles I. and was paid $150 for his pains, all in half crowns, within half an hour after the deed. He is also reported to have been presented with an orange stuck full of cloves and a handkerchief out of the king's pocket as soon as he was carried from the scaffold. Brandon was at once offered 20 shillings for the orange, but he refused this sum and afterward accepted 10 shillings in a market thoroughfare. In the burial register of Whitechapel there may be seen the following entry under 1649: "June 21—Richard Brandon, a man out of Rosemary Lane. This Richard Brandon is supposed to have cut off the head of Charles I."

Extent of Africa.

Nearly one-fourth of the earth's land surface is comprised within the continent of Africa, and it is as far around the coast of Africa as it is around the world. Every eighth person of the world's population lives in the dark continent. The blacks double their number every forty years and the whites every eighty years. There are 843 languages and dialects spoken among the blacks of Africa, but only a few of them written. One area in Africa unoccupied by missionaries is three times the size of New England, a second would make four states like New York, and another is eighteen times the size of Ohio. Throughout Africa there is one missionary for every 133,000 souls.

Conscience Satisfied.

"Lizzie, will you be mine?"

"Not on your life."

"Don't you love me?"

"No, I don't and never did."

"Are you sure?"

"Absolutely sure! I would rather be shot than marry you!"

"Thank you for them kind words, Lizzie. I had to ask somebody to marry in order to do my duty, but now that I have been refused I will never have to ask anybody else. Now my conscience will allow me to be a merry bachelor and save money for my old age."

In the Boarding House.

"That new couple look as if they had some guilty secret."

"They have."

"Huh?"

"They kept house once, but they don't want to put themselves completely in the landlady's power by letting her know they didn't make a success of it."

Apology.

"I hear, Mr. Catts, that you said I was a wallflower at the ball."

"My dear Miss Passy, I remarked that you were among the conspicuous wall ornaments of the occasion."

"Oh, Mr. Catts, now that's something different, but you flatter me!"

The Ambitious Bride.

Bill—Hello! Home from your honeymoon trip already?

Gill—Oh, yes.

"Rather short, wasn't it?"

"Oh, yes. My new wife seemed rather anxious to get home and try her cooking on me."

The Pessimist Says:

"Seeing is believing," but that does not alter the fact that some men see things which have no real existence and therefore believe things which are not true.

To what gulfs a single deviation from the track of human duties leads!

Much Too Much.

We eat too much. We heat too much. We try too much to beat too much. We growl too much. We scowl too much. We play the midnight owl too much.

We ape too much. We gape too much and dally with red tape too much. We treat too much and cheat too much and fear to face defeat too much.

We buy too much. We lie too much and snivel and deny too much. We have too much and slave too much, with one foot in the grave too much.

We sit too much. We spit too much, wear shoes too tight to fit too much. We mess too much and dress too much, in sixteen suits or less too much.

We spite too much. We fight too much and seek the great white light too much. We read too much. We speed too much, hit dope and use the weed too much. We drink too much. We prink too much. I think we even think too much.—Oscar Schleif in Health Culture.

Scraping a Bat.

Baseball players are as superstitious as Zulus. In no way is this more lucidly illustrated than in the care which some of them lavish upon an ordinary baseball bat. Manufacturers, says the Popular Science Monthly, oil and shellac their bats to make them sleek and fresh, and the superstitious baseball player proceeds to use glass, bone, sandpaper and what not to remove the finish. Why? Oh, "just because," to give a woman's reason. He may have a notion that the bat will last longer without it. But the truth is that the shellac really acts as a preservative of the wood.

Some baseball players imagine that it is impossible to make a strong hit with a new bat, because the bat is so sleek that the balls glance off it. Others believe that scraping a bat fills up the crevices and cracks and thus lengthens the life of the bat.

Bushels In New York.

According to New York law, the bushel shall consist of seventy pounds of lime or coarse salt, sixty pounds of wheat, peas, potatoes, clover seed or beans; fifty-seven pounds of onions; fifty-six pounds of Indian corn, rye or fine salt; fifty-five pounds of flaxseed; fifty-four pounds of sweet potatoes; fifty pounds of cornmeal, rye meal or carrots; forty-eight pounds of barley or buckwheat; forty-five pounds of herdsgrass, timothy seed or rough rice; forty-four pounds of sea island cotton seed; thirty-three pounds of dried peaches; thirty-two pounds of oats; thirty pounds of upland cotton seed; twenty-five pounds of dried apples; twenty pounds of bran or shorts. For a fractional part of the bushel a like fractional part of the above weights shall be required.

Order of the Thistle.

The Order of the Thistle is a Scotch order of ancient origin. Tradition has it that it was established A. D. 787 as the result of a vision of a bright cross seen in the heavens by Achaius, king of the Scots, and Hungus, king of the Picts, while they were engaged in prayer on the night before the battle with Athelstan, king of England. So far as the records show, however, it was either re-established or founded in 1687 by James II. of England by the appointment of eight knights.

The order collapsed, but was revived by Queen Anne on Dec. 31, 1703. In 1827 it was decreed that the membership should consist of the sovereign and sixteen knights, but others of the royal family were admitted.

Two Views of the Case.

A prospective bridegroom made his first call on his future bride in company with a marriage broker, and while in the parlor waiting for the appearance of the family the broker drew the young man's attention to a glass closet containing a handsome silver set.

"Just look at these things!" he said. "You can see how wealthy these people are."

"But is it not possible that these articles were borrowed for the occasion," inquired the suspicious young man, "so as to give an appearance of wealth?"

"What an idea!" answered the agent reprovingly. "Who in the world would lend them anything?"

Always In the Lead.

The Morning Star announced the death of William B. Jones when he was not dead, writes Simeon Strunsky in the New York Evening Post. The next day it printed the following notice:

"Yesterday we were the first newspaper to publish the news of the death of William B. Jones. Today we are the first to deny the report. The Morning Star is always in the lead."

Her Excuse.

Mother—Alice, I was very much surprised and shocked last evening when I passed the parlor door and saw Mr. Wardle with his face close to yours. Daughter — Yes, mamma; isn't it a shame? The poor fellow is so awfully nearsighted!—London Telegraph.

Just a Step.

"You may not believe it, mum, but I wunst knelt at de feet of a queen."

"And how did you fall so low as to become a tramp?"

"It wuzn't much of a fall, mum. You see, I was a super in de movies."

Top and Bottom.

The chiropodist is a humble individual. In the profession he begins and is content to rest in at the foot. The barber, on the contrary, is ambitious. He begins at the head and stays there.

Haste makes waste, and waste makes want, and want makes strife between the good man and his wife.

READ THE EXAMINER

PRESS COMMENT ON THE NAVY REPORT.

"Report is Notable."

Boston Post:—"Secretary Daniels' annual report is notable, in one way, for the things it does not and cannot say under the circumstances. But the information that it fails to reveal will all come, as the Secretary says, 'after the victory.' Yet enough is told by his document to make all of us Americans proud of the navy and satisfied with the way it has been handled, with all its attending problems, since the war began."

"Honorable to the Service."

Philadelphia Public Ledger: "It is no derogation of the credit that is due the Secretary of the Navy to point out that in bringing the naval forces to bear against the enemy he government was confronted by no such problem of reorganization from the ground up as was involved in the creation of a new army, but it is plain that the task of expansion and of active co-operation with our allies has thus far been performed with a minimum of delay and friction and with a unity of purpose and harmony of action that is honourable to the service."

Brooklyn Eagle: "We believe that nothing has been left undone to make the navy worthy of the country whose flag it carried ahead of our army into the war zone. We are convinced that Congress will leave undone nothing to increase an efficiency already proved. Our whole plan of war would collapse if Congress withheld from the navy any portion of the vast sum needed to make it not only an expression of the power of the whole republic, but also in every sense an adequate expression."

NO WOMAN SPY SHOT.

Official Denial From Washington of a Malicious Rumour.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—Persistent repetition of a story that a woman spy had been executed in the United States has caused the State Department to send an official denial to American Consuls and Legations in European neutral countries. The story originated in Germany, and its widespread use in regarded as another case of propaganda. The name of the woman was given as Anna Huitems. Ordinarily no attention would have been paid to a story so palpably false, but in this case credence appeared to have been given to it in neutral countries.

FLIES SAFELY ACROSS EUROPE

Details of the Remarkable Adventure of a British Airplane

LONDON, Dec. 15.—The story of a British battle aeroplane's flight to Constantinople from London, and its sequel, in the bombing of German Headquarters and the Turkish War Office there, was told yesterday by Handley Page and Basil Johnson, whose firm, Rolls Royce, Ltd., built the engines that flew the 2,000 miles without a hitch. Loading up at Hendon the machine proceeded to Paris and Lyons, and to avoid the Alps continued by way of Marseilles. From Marseilles the journey was by way of Spezia to Pisa, Rome, and Naples, which was the last point over friendly country.

The next and perhaps most difficult stage of the journey was over the Albanian Alps to Saloniki, a trip of 250 miles across mountains varying from 7,000 to 10,000 feet in height, with no suitable place for a landing in case of need. Squadron Commander Savoy who was chief pilot, told him, Handley Page said, that they could see well Bulgarian horsemen below who were running about in every direction waiting for a chance to kill them if they came down.

MISS COBEN FIRST TIME.

From Saloniki the adventurous party flew to their base, overhauled the machine and prepared for a long distance bombing expedition to Constantinople, a distance of about 320 miles. On their attacking trip they set forth with sixteen bombs, each weighing 112 pounds, and on arriving at the Sea of Marmora they throttled down from 2,000 to 1,600 feet, the Golden Horn and other points being clearly in view. After a short survey of the lights of Constantinople, and in order to make sure of their objectives, they came down to 800 feet, and dropped a salvo of four bombs, hoping to reach the German battle-cruiser Goeben, which was anchored just beneath them. Unfortunately missed the ship, but then managed to hit one or two submarines that were lying alongside her.

Turning on their course the British airmen made another attack on the Goeben and this time, in spite of the attentions of a number of Turkish and German anti-aircraft guns, managed to plant four bombs on the battle cruiser. Then they flew up to a ship called The General, which was the Headquarters of the German Staff and dropped two bombs on her, to the great consternation of naval and military officers assembled in her saloons. One more target too tempting to be missed attracted the intrepid aviators, and they next made way to that part of the city where the Turkish War Office is situated, and dropped two bombs on the building.

BOMB CITY FOR HALF AN HOUR

After half an hour's bombing of Constantinople the airmen turned round and started back to their base, Flight-Commander McLellan relieving his chief in steering. They had not escaped without damage, but even after one engine had been put out of action, they were able to get away without serious damage from guns below.

Handley Page said that Engineer Lieut. Rawlings, who was one of the party, reported they had no trouble at all with their engines, although water in the radiators boiled on one very hot day.

PUBLIC OPINION

A NEW TRADE WORLD.

Germany will see a new trade world when the war is over. As Mr. Redfield said, other nations will not have to look to her for dyestuffs, for optical glass, for potash and other materials of which she once seemed to think she had a permanent monopoly. With the closing of German markets came understanding of the magnitude of our resources and the value of our opportunity.—Rochester Post-Express.

WILL BEER FOLLOW BOXING?

Public exhibitions of boxing in New York State have come to an end because the game fell into the hands of unscrupulous adventurers and the Legislature was forced by public opinion to repeal the Frawley law just as it repealed the Horton law years ago. This repeats the story of horse-racing which suffered because gambling in poolrooms became a public nuisance.

Retail liquor dealers pray to be let tioned. She has lost her reputation. of these pests puts the whole business in danger. A few more incidents like the poisoning of men with wood alcohol in an Eastside saloon a week or two ago, will lead to prohibition in New York.—New York Commercial.

GERMANY'S MORAL BANKRUPTCY.

After more than three years of war, we hear a great deal about German man-power being exhausted; about German finances being at the point of collapse; that Germany's food supply is failing; that many of her industries are ruined; that her shipping and commerce have suffered blows from which it will take a generation to recover.

But Germany has to mourn to-day a greater loss than any of those mentioned. S' has lo' her putation. She has squandered her moral assets. Nobody believes her. Nobody trusts her.

A long course of lawlessness heaped upon duplicity, of brutality mingled with deceit, has made every utterance of the German government suspect. Hence the amazing, the painful unanimity with which public men and the press in all belligerent and neutral countries have look d upon the repeated peace offers of the German authorities as merely a snare for the unwary.

Thus is the fated and terrible punishment of Germany already beginning. She is reaping what she has sown. Her rulers have brought the name of their country into disrepute. Their promises no longer pass anywhere at their face value. Every governmental move by Germany is closely scrutinized to see if some treachery is not wrapped up in it. It is as if the word "German" had now become the international trade-mark for double-dealing.

To-day Germans look around the horizon and see nowhere a friend, nowhere a nation that will accept the bare pledge of the German government. Everywhere they perceive dislike and distrust. This is the moral punishment of Germany for her crimes, and it is not to be wondered at that many of her citizens are crying out that the punishment is greater than they can bear.—New York Evening Post.

New York "Journal of Commerce" —There is little danger that demand will not be kept up to as high a limit as can be reached and supply is in no danger of outrunning it. What will be chiefly needed is proper proportion and adjustment and business-like operation with a keen supervision by public authority. There is no danger of over-doing this next year. Even if the war should cease before the harvest the exhausted nations would be in great need and the industrial and commercial reaction would not reach the land or its products. The farmers would be among the most fortunate.

Boston "Globe"—However ghastly proportions the casualties of the Halifax disaster may assume they will not equal one day's toll of the war fronts in Europe. And yet they come to us with an entirely different force. Partly, it is that for three years and a half we have supped full on the horrors of Europe; partly, of course, it is that Halifax is a neighbour, near, and to many of us, dear; but, above all, the shock comes from such a disaster having befallen a city through accident.

Louisville "Courier - Journal" — Within the threshold of a fourth winter Germany faces the need for desperate measures. This will account for the renewed activity in the west. The Italian drive, if not a failure, halts. The doings in Russia are too equivocal, and the collapse, if collapse it be, comes too late to be effective. Reduced material force on the part of the Germans is supplemented by waning moral force The end may not be at hand. But the inevitable is beginning to come to pass.

SOUTH AMERICAN TRADE.

(Milwaukee Journal.)

Germany has been driven out of all the markets of South America. Not only have German exporters lost their business during the war, but . . . the best observers agree that under the most favourable conditions it will be a long time before Germany can get back even a fraction of her trade advantages in the South American field. British trade in South America has suffered to some extent, too, because English industries are largely absorbed directly and indirectly, by the war. Despite the war industry, however, British trade in South America is still of some proportions. America, on the contrary, has tripled her trade with most South American countries since the war started.

SYMBOL OF DEMOCRACY.

(Boston Advertiser.)

Rarely, if ever before, has the market basket commanded its present respect. Time was when it was the last thing in the house milady would venture to carry on her arm down the street. Even the young miss of the household, down from college, where she has been taking extra courses in home economics and household duties, refused to consider the practical victual carrier. But now! The mad scurry to aid and abet one Herbert Hoover, the desire to show the stuff of which women are made, the establishment of municipal markets and the introduction of "carry-your-own-bundle" campaign's by most stores have brought the market basket into prominence again, and it seems to be doing extra duty. The market basket is a new symbol of democracy.

PERMANENT ASSETS.

(Boston News Bureau.)

Now one year of war calls for nearly as much as fifty years of peace.

But is it all war waste,—as though lumped in the Atlantic? Not at all; many lasting assets remain, tangible and intangible. To cite but a few:

One-third, or 13 billions, of our two-year budget will represent a mortgage on our allies,—with vast future credit and trade potentialities.

Spending two billions on ships, we shall have, spite the submarines, an ocean fleet of ten to twelve million tons.

Spending in two years $11,800,000,000 on army and $2,500,000,000 on novy, peace will find us with a magnificent equipment for guarding honourable peace in future generations.

Besides such things as 25,000 aeroplanes, new camps, warships, munitions plants, etc., we shall have a trained young manhood for our defence, itself benefited vastly, and vastly speeding also the "melting pot" process. As a nation we shall have tested and have found ourselves.

Not counting all these, and a myriad other obvious assets salvaged, were not all these billions cheap merely as purchase or as insurance prices for our great object—

Salvation for coming centuries of our own, and of a world's democracy?

BRITISH WORKERS CALL FOR RATIONING SYSTEM

LONDON, Dec. 15.—Resolutions calling on the Government to introduce a system of rationing and asserting that a grave crisis is approaching in many of the working class districts were adopted to-day by the Workers' National Committee, which includes representatives of most of the large trade unions. Robert Smillie, president of the Miners' Federation, is chairman of the committee.

The resolutions say that in some working class districts women are compelled to wait in front of shops and often are unable to obtain tea, sugar, milk, butter, bacon or margarine. A bad system of distribution is said to be largely responsible for this state of affairs.

One Day Will Do It

People who have been suffering from backache, kidney trouble, rheumatic ailments, are sometimes under the impression that they will have to continue to suffer from these ailments and they will be unable to obtain relief. Headache, nervousness, soreness in the bones and limbs are frequently caused by poisonous gases being absorbed into the system, and the kidneys are overtaxed in their effort to expel these gases. Dr. Banta's Kidney and Rheumatic Pills will prevent the formation of these poisonous gases, and are a positive cure for Kidney troubles, rheumatic ailments or any disease arising from a disorderly condition of the kidneys. The manufacturers are so confident that these Pills will do what we claim for them that your dealer is authorized to refund your money if they do not give you satisfaction. Will you try them and be convinced? They are sold by one reliable dealer in each county. Sold in Peterborough at Lynch's Drug Store. Price, 50c. Mail orders attended to promptly.

WHEN THE LEADER RESIGNED.

A choir trouble had arisen in a New England church. The Director had proved himself headstrong and utterly regardless of the fitness of things. As a result of some criticism he resigned, with a number of his friends, and a meeting of the congregation was called to discuss the situation and find a remedy. Many spoke, but the remedy was still undiscovered. Then rose the great-grandson of Jonathan Edwards, a young man timid almost to shyness, who never before had ventured to speak in public. The attention of the whole congregation was upon him. Slowly, haltingly, he began, "I believe I have discovered the origin of evil." The people could not see the connection, but remained attentive. "Yes," he continued, "I have come to the conclusion that Lucifer was the leader of the Heavenly choir and had to resign."

MUSIC DURING AIR-RAIDS.

To the folk of London town air-raids have ceased to be a novelty. Londoners are meeting the trying circumstances with fortitude. During the raids music is frequently called into commission to enable the people to keep cool, be cheery and stand the strain. One evening it is related that when the raid was on, a street-organ in a sheltered corner of a busy thoroughfare ground out Leslie Stuart's "Soldiers of the King" with an air of defiance that is typical of the British spirit. In the days of the South African war that same number, which was then "Soldiers of the Queen," nerved many a heart.

A little later the same evening there was heard in a home some voices accompanied by a piano singing the old hymn, "Hold the Fort." These represent the spirit that will not down.

Conditions In Russia Intolerable

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)
(By Ralph Turner.)

TOKIO, Dec. 17.—Conditions in Russia are becoming intolerable, and American Ambassador Francis is advising Americans to leave, according to American refugees arriving here today.

Food supplies throughout Russia are becoming so scarce as to suggest an approaching famine. Unrest and internecine strife has torn the nation. All Americans who possibly can leave are arranging to do so.

One hundred and sixty-seven Americans are now awaiting passage out of Petrograd by the trans-Siberian railway via Japan and China.

WARM FIGHT IN LONDON

One Member of Methodist Congregation Smashes Another With Hymn Book

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, Ont., Dec. 17.— The bitterest election fight in years is on today and every available vote is being gotten out, both sides are making every woman voter take the oath that she is qualified. Last night in some churches the members got up and left when the pastors endeavoured to influence the voting. In the First Methodist church Arthur Little, a millionaire dry goods man, smashed F. C. Mitchell, manager of the National Drug Co., over the head with a hymn book, claiming Mitchell hissed him as he was walking out after the pastor started an appeal for Union Government.

210 BLINDED AT HALIFAX.

Proportion of 35 to 10,000 Population Votes for Relief.

HALIFAX, Dec. 15.—The directors of the Bank of Nova Scotia at a meeting yesterday voted $100,000 to the Halifax relief fund.

Sir Frederick Frazer states that a committee for Halifax blind relief work has been formed. He has received several letters and telegrams offering help. The situation in Halifax, he says, is appalling, with at least 210 persons blinded as a result of the terrific explosion. The proportion of blinded in the army at the front is one in 10,000. In the Halifax explosion the proportion is 35 in 10,000, and all in a moment of time.

The Saskatchewan Government has voted $25,000 to the relief fund.

Windows Were Blown Out But Occupants Of House Escaped

Mrs. McElhiney has received the following letter from her sister-in-law in Halifax:

Halifax, 9th Dec., 1917.

My Dear Annie,

You will have received the wire I sent saying we had escaped the terrible calamity that took place in our city this week. Oh, I can hardly begin to tell you of it, but no doubt you know all about it by this time. I am glad to tell you we all escaped without a scratch. All our windows were blown to pieces; I don't know why we were not cut to pieces. Myself and little Gordon were in the kitchen, where I was washing dishes. They were blown out of my hand and went across the kitchen with such force. Gordon was under the window sitting in his little chair. I ran for him and caught him in my arms, and we were covered with glass, but did not get a scratch. Herbert was on his way to school. He was whistled along the street over so far, but did not get hurt, and John was up Water Street not far from the explosion and did not get a scratch. But he was terribly frightened; he ran all the way home; he thought we were all gone, as he passed so many dead and bleeding to death on the street on his way home. But when he came and saw us all right he went and got some sticking plaster and bandages, and he and Herbert went as fast as they could to render first aid. They had not got through much, when the call came for everyone to leave their homes and go to the country, for fear of another explosion. They thought the magazine was going to blow up at the dockyard. If it had, I guess we would have all been gone; but they flooded it. We had to leave our homes and go to the commons and stay until all danger was past.

Oh my, Annie, I cannot describe the misery and suffering that we have witnessed in Halifax these few day. I could never begin to tell you; it is awful. There are two thousand dead, and lots of bodies not yet found. John has been working night and day and Herbert has been working, helping all they can. The streets were littered with dead and dying all day Thursday. This is Sunday, and everything is going on as in the week. There is not a church or hall of any kind to hold meetings in, so I don't know when we will have meetings again. This was to be our young people's day. The Commissioner was to be here. He is here, but he has another mission.

The Great Work Of A Peterboro' Contracting Firm

Completion, By Messrs. Morrow and Beatty, Engineering Contractors of Peterboro', of Great Pulp Mills Plant at Cochrane

The current number of The Canadian Engineer contains an excellent and elaborately illustrated article describing "The Hydro-Electric Power Development and Pulp Manufacturing Plant" of the Mattaguami Pulp and Paper Company, recently completed by Messrs. Morrow and Beatty, engineering contractors of this city.

The works are situated at Smooth Rock Falls, on the Mattagami river, thirty-two miles west of Cochrane, and three miles north of the National Transcontinental Railway, with which it is connected by its own spur line, also built by Morrow and Beatty.

The works, which mean the planting of a new town—a new industrial centre—at the most northern point of site of such works, and the erection of eight concrete mill buildings, dam, power house, pumping station, and other plants.

The natural engineering difficulties to be overcome were complicated by a good deal of construction work being carried on during severe winter weather, during the year, and are half consumed in construction.

Besides the contractors for the elaborate structural work, another Peterborough firm had a hand in. The generators and switchboard were supplied by the Canadian General Electric Company of this city.

The entire work involved the excavation of 21,000 cubic yards of rock 57,000 yards of other material, the placing of 34,000 cubic yards of concrete and the employment of 1,000 tons of structural and reinforcing steel.

The present capacity of the pulp mill is 100 tons of dried pulp per day. The ultimate capacity of 150 tons daily, will be attained by the installation of another "digester" and "blow-pit".

The establishment of a town and great pulp and paper works, as "a going concern" in a recently howling wilderness, a thousand miles north of Peterborough is a matter not only of local, but provincial and national, significance.

These works are the pioneer of an immense development of natural resources that will be due to, and largely justify, the immense cost of construction of, the National Transcontinental Railway.

A. O. F. GRANT FOR HALIFAX

The local lodge of the Ancient Order of Foresters authorized a grant of twenty-five dollars to be sent to the Halifax Lodge for the purpose of helping out any brother who may be in distress.

LIFE IN GERMANY AFTER 3 YEARS OF WARFARE

A Swedish lady who has just returned from an extensive tour in Germany, publishes in the Dagens Nyheter newspaper, of Stockholm, interesting particulars with regard to the present internal situation of that country. She is charged by the Germanophile Press with acting with base ingratitude to the German people, who received her kindly and she is even accused of having fraudulently obtained passports through personal influence which otherwise would not have been granted, there being as much difficulty in crossing the frontier into Germany as in penetrating into the heart of Tibet. The narrative is the more interesting as it gives some particulars that have not hitherto been divulged in the neutral press. After some exciting adventures at the frontier station, where she was more than once arrested as a spy, and where afterwards her luggage was minutely examined, and fresh wrapping paper was provided for her parcels and charged for, the lady was allowed to proceed by train.

In the train she met a young soldier who was going home on sick leave until Christmas, when he hoped peace would be declared. His description of the life of the men at the front was fearful. They were starved and frozen, he said, and often they had to build walls of the dead bodies of their fallen comrades to protect them from the enemy's fire. He was utterly despondent, and on being given some bread wept, saying that his mother would not have died if such bread could have been got for her.

In one town which she visited the lady called on a family who invited her to take coffee with them. She asked where they got the coffee from, and they said from a Dutch smuggler, who is now a millionaire, and has bought a castle belonging to one of the late King Leopold's associates. She found families living in houses that were like besieged fortresses, with all the rooms, from garret to cellar, full of all sorts of provisions stored up in secrecy. The condition of the poor, however, baffles description. They are literally starving. Beer is not of the same quality as of old, but it is drunk in immense quantities by those who can afford it. The railway regulations are exceedingly stringent. If a train stops at any particular place for more than four hours the passengers are placed under arrest and closely questioned. Fares have been doubled but in spite of this, the trains are so crowded that many travel on the roofs of the carriages. Female guards are now numerous. The lady was invited to a field hospital, but the scene there was so horrible that she refrains from describing it.

CONDITIONS IN BERLIN.

In Berlin she put up at an hotel in Unter den Linden. Here she had an opportunity of witnessing organized starvation with all its horrors. The poor were in rags and could hardly stand on their feet from exhaustion. Starving children were to be seen begging everywhere. Outside the shops there were long queues of people hundreds deep. Often not more than ten people in a hundred succeeded in purchasing anything. For vegetables a maximum price was fixed, and consequently none were to be had. The only way to get food is to go to certain shops late at night and pay prohibitive prices at the back-door. Housewives without servants go out poorly clad to do their shopping in this way after nightfall. All linen goods in the hotels and restaurants are commandeered and travellers are therefore subjected to serious inconvenience. The dirt is abominable. The commandeering of metals goes on briskly. Copper articles are no longer to be found in private houses. One day the lady was in a confectioner's shop when two policemen came in and unscrewed some brass trays on which cakes were displayed. The confectioner in a rage shouted: "Go across to the Prince in the castle yonder, and take the door-handles from his stable there, which have twice as much copper in them as my trays and leave me things which I need for my business. The policemen took good care not to follow this advice because the Prince was a captain of Hussars, although he had never been on active service, and a man with sixty millions. The last of the church bells in the country have been taken to be melted down.

Irate Business Man: "You book agents make me so angry with your confounded nerve and impudence that I cannot find words to express my feelings."

Agent: "Then I am the very man you want. I am selling dictionaries."

CONSERVE WOOL SUPPLY.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—Restrictions governing the exportation and importation of wool have been tightened by the War Trade Board with a view to conserving American supplies and checking the increase in prices, which have risen 200 per cent.

No commodities containing wool will be permitted in future to leave the country, it was announced, if in the judgment of the board the wool is needed for the uses either of the army or the navy.

Importers before they can obtain licenses will be required to sign an agreement that they will sell no wool to persons other than manufacturers and that they will give the Government an option to purchase all wool imported at a price five per cent. less than that obtained for the same grade July 30 last.

U.S. CAR SHORTAGE.

A statement by the Chairman of the U.S. Railroads War Board would indicate that, despite the uproar over the railroad situation, and the admittedly serious aspect of the problem, the existing management is not doing altogether so badly. He reports that on December 1st the car shortage, that is, the excess of unfilled car orders, amounted to 117,132 cars. This is 22,880 unfilled orders less than on November 1st, and while it is 10,000 more than on December 1st a year ago, the roads are now handling at least 20 per cent. more business than a year ago.

RECORD VOTE IS EXPECTED

Polling is Brisk Thoughout Ontario in the Dominion Elections

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

TORONTO, Dec. 17.—Voting in the Dominion election here opened briskly and early in this city, and in some instances there were many men and some women waiting at the booths before the deputy returning officers and other officials arrived with their impedimenta at six a.m.

The prospects are that this city and the Province of Ontario as a whole will produce a record male vote today, in addition to a very heavy increase brought about by the soldiers' women vote.

It is expected that the majority of the votes will be polled here before noon.

In the rural constituencies of Ontario it is thought that the vote will also be very heavy, though in some cases the roads are almost impassable owing to heavy snowdrifts.

Motoring is out of the question in many localities, and all kinds of sleighs and rigs have been pressed into service.

The Smart Blouse Offers a Splendid Gift Possibility

Admittedly handsome, though bordering to severity, is a BLOUSE of White and Royal Blue Georgette. A sailor collar with hemstitched edge of Royal blue, front closing finished in same manner; a four-inch stripe of Royal blue crosses the bodice, on which is a beaded coral, blue and white medallion, on either side. Price $13.00

If you are a lover of simplicity WHITE GEORGETTE, with an all-over pattern done in black and white beads, will make a strong appeal to you. The collar is unique because of its many points that break at queer angles. The cuffs are handsomely hemstitched. Price $12.00

The material in this model is WHITE GEORGETTE, with the front formed of an inset panel of crepe and lace, with overlapping hemstitched edges. The collar is the convertible sort, and when buttoned shows a black bow. The cuffs are formed of black ribbon and a turn-over of lace. Price $12.00

For the woman of middle age or she who is advanced in years, we have a BLOUSE that expresses her taste precisely. To be modish the material is necessarily Georgette and the colour is Grey. On the bodice is elaborate embroidery workings of purple silk and cut steel. The convertible collar is purple and likewise the cuffs. Price $12.00

THE MONK COLLAR OF LATE has been featured in many BLOUSES, but we have seen none quite so effectively arranged as this model of Maize Georgette, with citron green trimming. The collar is closely pleated and forms a semi-circle which meets two huge points at the shoulders that taper to the waisit line in a panel effect. Fancy coloured buttons, to match the colour scheme are judiciously placed on shoulders and cuffs. Price $12.75

"Have Cause To Be Proud."

Troy Times: "The annual report of Josephus Daniels, Secretary of the Navy, begins with an allusion to the fact that since 6th April the ships and sailors of the United States have undergoing the test of war. He cannot speak in detail of the greater naval operations in connection with the war, but notes that the record is one of which the American people have cause to be proud."

25 Below Zero Early On Sunday

Weather Was Colder Yesterday Morning Than On Any Day Since 1915

The temperature took a decided drop Saturday night, and early on Sunday morning had reached 29 deg. below zero as its low point. In the morning it began to rise. By church time it had risen to 10 below, and by noon to zero. The winter has set in unusually early, and also with exceptionally severe weather.

Feb. 24th, 1916, was the coldest dip of that year, with 18 below.

Twenty-eight below was registered Jan. 30, 1915, as the lowest.

Twenty-nine below was the low point, Dec. 26th, 1914.

Jan. 13, 1914, gave us 32 below. This was the coldest day in recent years, but is not a record.

The preceding winter gave 17 below on Feb. 17, and 1912, 28 below in Jan. 13th.

1911 gave 15 below, and 1916, 26 below.

Dying Husband Kisses His Wife's Picture

The following letter has been received by Mrs. Knowles in regard to the death of her husband in France:

No. 5 General Hospital,
B.E.F., France.

Dear Mrs. Knowles,—I have been meaning to write you some time to tell you a little incident that occurred two or three hours before your husband passed away. I think you have heard officially from the authorities here, but I thought I would write this as I'm sure any little thing is a little comfort to one when one has such sorrows to bear.

I was standing by your husband's bedside and he asked for a photograph, so I searched and assisted him to look through the little hospital bag and we found his photographs. I then understood that it was your photograph he searched for, so I held different ones to him for him to tell when it was he desired. At one he nodded and he picked it up in his hand and kissed it again an again, fervently, and when I had put all the other things and photos back in his bag I asked him should I leave the one of you he had kissed out on his locker so that he could reach it and he seemed very pleased and wished it so.

I hope this little incident may be of some comfort to you. I am so sorry for you wives away over the water. You must sometimes feel so far away.

Please accept my sympathy in your bereavement.

Yours faithfully,
K. J. Howell,
Nurse,
Red Cross.

MEMORIAL TO HALIFAX DEAD AT THE TEMPLE

Notwithstanding the cold Saturday and Sunday, goodly crowds gathered to hear Brigadier and Mrs. Morehen on Saturday night and Sunday.

The Saturday evening was profitably spent at No. 2 with Ensign Hargrave and her brave soldiers.

The Sunday was spent at the Simcoe Street Temple. In the afternoon the Brigadier conducted both a dedication and enrollment services.

The evening service took the form of a memorial service to the Halifax dead, when one of the valued officers of the Salvation Army, in the person of Mrs. Ensign Cromwell, lost her life, though her nine months' old baby was saved.

All the addresses of Brigadier and Mrs. Morehen were much enjoyed, and they were invited to come back as soon as possible.

DYE MAKING SUCCESSFUL.

British Chemists Succeed in Meeting Needs of British Manufacturers.

London, England. — The manufacturing of dyes in Great Britain, and supplying the British trade, which heretofore has been dependent almost entirely on Germany, has proved very successful according to the report of a company subsidized by the government for that purpose.

The production of dyes continues to be limited by the shortage of certain materials but the supply has been increased during the year and the variety of dyes extended. Cooperation among dye manufacturers is urged to increase the output of dyes and the need of further capital is emphasized by the fact that recently published accounts of five of the German dye manufacturing firms, show assets amounting to 35,000,000 pounds, including cash resources of ten millions.

"A man should always think before he speaks." "I'm not sure," replied Senator Sorghum. "It seems to me some of us would be better off if we didn't think up speeches, but just got up and recited a good piece of poetry."—Washington Star.

Coal Delivered To Homes On Sunday Relieved Fuel Need

When the mercury volplaned to 25 degrees below zero on Sunday morning it brought no serious alarm to Peterborough homes. Gotham, only forty-five minutes from the coal fields, may shiver and shake under the first effects of a temporary fuel famine, Toronto people may clamour for relief as they regard the empty civic bin, and some of Peterborough's homes may have been uneasy as they realized their short allowances, but no one suffered from sheer want of coal. Six or seven urgent cases were reported to Mr. Robert Hicks, who provided them with supplies on Sunday. Chief Thompson stated this morning that Mr. Hicks assumed unquestioningly every complaint that was turned over to him by the city. In the meantime the city had been selling its car of egg coal, relieving urgent cases, and there are hopes of receiving a shipment of mixed sizes that was ordered recently. This morning Ald. Dobbin held a conference with Mayor Duffus and Ald. Stratton to consider a list of wood contracts that are available. It was decided to close arrangements with two men for a total of ninety cords, which will be offered to the public if the deal is completed.

In short, the fuel situation is fairly satisfactory. There is no suffering, thanks to the manner in which supplies have been husbanded by a system of doling out the supplies for immediate relief. Had it not been for the successful operation of this plan and the fact that one dealer has had certain supplies available, there is little doubt but that many homes would have experienced actual distress.

Food Board Will Revoke Licenses Of Two Firms---Price List For Fish Issued

NEW YORK, Dec. 17.—The Federal Food Board's policy in the matter of protecting the consuming public from profiteers and the scarcity of food necessities will be felt here for the first time when two wholesale grocery concerns on the east side will lose their business licenses and seven hundred and fifty thousand pounds of fish will be placed at the disposal of retailers. The board also announced the wholesale price list of the various kinds of fish in market.

The grocers who will be deprived of their right to continue business are Herman Dworkis, of No. 292 East Second street, and Goldberg & Cohen, of No. 205 East Fourth street. Both firms were tried on Tuesday at the Federal Food Board's headquarters, No. 220 West Fifty-seventh street, for selling sugar in combination sales and at a price in excess of that established by the Board. They were tried before John Mitchell, chairman of the Board, and Arthur Williams, city Food Administrator. Recommendations of these two members of the Board then were forwarded to Washington for Mr. Hoover to pass upon, and the reply was received last evening.

Fish Supply is Large.

The big supply of whiting and ling, it was stated by George T. Moon, chairman of the Fish Committee of the Federal Food Board, would be ready for disposal this morning, and there would be additional shipments of fish from time to time to cover the situation for at least the next two months. If the supply should be exhausted more readily than is expected, he said, the dealers would be so advised in order to prevent any misconception arising in the minds of the public as to prices and quantities.

Mr. Hoover approves of the revocation of the licenses of the two wholesale firms. Dworkis' license is to be withdrawn until March 1, 1918, and that of Goldberg & Cohen until January 15. At the expiration of that time, if the dealers have complied with the Board's demands, new licenses will be issued.

The suspension of their licenses means that the dealers virtually will be put out of business, Mr. Mitchell said. In fact, he doubts if either of the firm will open up after the suspension period has ended.

Must Make Restitution.

In both instnces the dealers confessed to the violation. This fact made the Board more lenient than it might otherwise have been. Dworkis must close his store and keep it closed until the suspension term has expired. He will not be able to operate in any other district because the Board will refuse to grant him a license.

He also must refund all sums charged in excess of the price fixed by the Board for sugar since October 8, 1917, and repurchase every article of food, except corn meal, sold in combination sales with sugar, at the price paid by the customer. He is compelled to advertise this offer in English and Jewish papers, and the advertisement is to be approved by the Board before publication.

Petrograd Banks Closed

(Special to the Toronto Star and the Peterborough Examiner).

PETROGRAD, Dec. 17.—All banks were closed to-day. News from the south, received here, indicated that the civil war was extending. The public's acceptance of the announcement of the formal signature to the armistice between Russia and Germany has been "satisfactory," according to Bolsheviki officials. The armistice is to continue until Dec. 30 (Russian style, which is January 12, by Gregorian reckoning), and both sides agreed not to carry on military transfers from the Baltic to the Black Sea—except such as were already begun up to the signing of the protocol.

A BIG RUSH AT MONTREAL

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

MONTREAL, Dec. 17.—There was a tremendous rush and some congestion at the polling booths here to-day caused to some extent by women voters who turned out here practically every woman entitled to a vote. In some constituencies late this morning there was organized obstruction to prevent women voting. Unionists supported with aid of police former wedges to get women into the poles. Deputy returning officers in some constituencies refused to put the women's ballots in the box, claiming they had been challenged. It was 12 below zero and voters kept out in the cold suffered severely. Soldiers under 21 were refused in some cases, although they are entitled under the law.

AVIATION HAS LOTS ITS ROMANCE.

Attentive readers of the war news must have noticed that the despatches describing the work of the aviators on the various fronts no longer deal to any such extent as in the past with single combats, man to man. This means that aerial warfare, like that on land, has developed in an unexpected direction and is fast losing its picturesque and romantic features.

The fliers, nowadays, do comparatively little of the solitary hunting for solitary antagonists that gave them fame as "aces." Instead, they work in carefully organized groups, the members of which are expected to show, not independence and initiative but the ability to carry out with exactness plans minutely laid out for them by superiors who never quit the ground.

Each member of the group has an assigned part and place in its operations, and usually they are divided, some flying at a great height, some at a moderate one, and the rest up only a few hundred feet. In other words, they have "flanks" just as do terrestrial fighters, but the flanks are up and down, not at right and left. They must be guarded none the less on that account, and sometimes they are "turned," with the familiar disastrous results.

Aviation is become a "service" like another, and its principle is co-operation. Thence will come military results, but not much, or at any rate not so much, of fame for individual aviators.—New York Times.

EDDIE COLLINS TO ENLIST.

CHICAGO, Dec. 15—Eddie Collins, star second baseman, for whom President Comiskey, of the White Sox, paid the Philadelphia Americans $75,000 three years ago, expects to enlist in some branch of war service soon, according to B. B. Johnson, President of the American League. Johnson has had several communications from Collins concerning enlistment, but said that one he received yesterday left little room for doubt that the Chicago second baseman will not wear a baseball uniform next season.

"Has he any head for business?" "Not a bit! He even figures the solitaire that he gave to his fiancee as an asset, instead of a liability!"—Life.

CHRISTMAS DECORATIONS

Jos. Longo's Charlotte Street Fruit Store All Decked in Holiday Dress

Mr. Simons, the manager of the Jos. Longo & Co.'s fruit and fish store, 230 Charlotte street, has decorated his premises very prettily for the Christmas trade. The window and interior of the store has been hung with colored festoons, bells, and other holiday decorations appropriate for the season. The Christmassy effect is quite novel and charming, bright, cheery and merry, as old St. Nicholas could make it.

The store is packed with Christmas fruits fresh from foreign growers, and at most moderate prices. Splendid California oranges for the holiday table, and grapes, as well as Malaga grapes, grape fruit, lemons, apples, tangerines, bananas, figs, dates, nuts, relishes, etc. There is also a display of fine hot-house vegetables, tomatoes, cucumbers, onions, lettuce, celery, cauliflower, etc. Choice canned goods, jams, jellies, marmalade, catsups, sauces, prunes, olives, table raisins, and other delicacies. Step in and see the store in Christmas dress. dtf.-141

LIEUT. HILLIARD DEAD FROM WOUNDS

Mr. G. B. Hilliard, Lakefield, received word on Saturday that Lieut. Geoffrey Crozier Hilliard, formerly reported seriously wounded, has died of wounds.

Lieut. Hilliard was a student of the Grove school, late of Royal Military College, from where he enlisted with the Royal Canadian Dragoons. Throughout his school career he won considerable distinction as an athlete. While in England Lieut. Hilliard transferred to an infantry battalion.

UNWRITTEN LAW' IN ENGLAND

Belief that American Plan in Murder Cases has come to Stay.

London. — Little doubt now exists that the "unwritten law" has come to stay in England. The hearing of the third case within two months in which this defence was offered has just been held in Nottingham, and for the third time the result has been acquittal. The defendant in the Nottingham case was a young soldier. His lawyer cited the recent case of Lieutenant Malcolm, and said:

"While the unwritten law is not recognised in England, the provocation in the case justifies the court in being lenient."

At the present time there are three murder cases awaiting trial in which it is expected that the unwritten law will be pleaded as at least a partial justification.

ASKS FOR PROTECTION OF THE COURT

Canadian Press Despatch:

HALIFAX, Dec. 17.—Inquiry into the Immo-Mont Blanc Commission was resumed this morning. Before the evidence was resumed Mr. Burchell, counsel for the Immo, read an affidavit of his own, stating that he had been retained by the owners of the Immo and the Norwegian Consul to act on behalf of John Johannson, a Norwegian seaman, whom it was intended to call as a witness. The man had been in hospital, but had been removed from there to the City Police Station as a prisoner, though suffering from injuries to his leg, arm and eye. The affidavit was a lengthy one, and stated that eventually a New York physician had examined the man and found his injuries were dangerous and needed attention, Johannson being finally returned to the hospital. Mr. Burchell applied for the protection of the Court for Johannson. Mr. Burchell felt the treatment of the man was instigated by persons desiring to injure him and false and malicious statements calculated to injure him had been sent out from Halifax.

Elections In 199 Constituencies

Canadian Press Despatch:

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 17.—Polling is actually taking place to-day in 199 Canadian constituencies, returning 202 members to the House of Commons. Twenty-nine acclamations and four deferred elections make up 235 seats constituting the House. Generally fair election weather prevails in all parts of Canada, though snow-drifted roads and pavements are everywhere. West of Manitoba it is milder and inclined to thaw, but in all the eastern parts of the Dominion it is cold and bright. A very large vote is expected in all the provinces. Both Government and Opposition are expecting victory, but many people think that the result may be indefinite till the soldiers' vote is known and applied. Premier Sir Robert Borden will be here to receive the returns to-night. Sir Wilfrid Laurier is in Winnipeg. Most of the other leaders on both sides and the Cabinet Ministers are in their respective constituencies.

MISS VARNEY AS WITNESS DENIES KEYES SLAYING

DEDHAM, Mass., Dec. 17.—Denying that she had murdered Mrs. Pauline Keyes in Brookline, on June 10, Miss A. Harriet Varney, a graduate nurse, on trial for that crime, based her relations with George H. Keyes and told how he had guided the police to her.

Frankly but tearfully admitting that she had lived with Keyes as his wife on various occasions in New York and Providence hotels after he had put a strange powder in her claret lemonade the first night they met, the attractive young woman said that not until after the murder did she know that Keyes had obtained a divorce from his first wife, a tall woman with white hair, and had married Pauline Biesenbach, his stenographer, who was small and had blonde hair.

"He always told me he would get divorce and then marry me," she testified. "After he had beaten me because I would not go on the streets for him and still not marry me, I went to his house in Brookline on June 12 to tell his wife the whole miserable story. I asked a woman I saw there if Mrs. Keyes was a tall woman with white hair, and she said no; that she was small and a blonde. She was not at home."

On the day Mrs. Keyes was shot and killed Miss Varney said she had had luncheon with Keyes and then had done some shopping for her sister and had gone to a hospital, where she spent the night.

Miss Varney said she was in bed her sister's home the night of June 35, when Keyes knocked at the door. "I did not know he had detectives with him," Miss Varney testified. "He said he had come for his dog, and after I had put on some clothes I went to the barn with him. There he whispered to me that he was under arrest and that I must not talk."

Her direct testimony ended dramatically.

"Miss Varney," her counsel asked her, "did you on June 10th kill Pauline Keyes?"

Holding her head erect and speaking in a voice that carried to all parts of the court room, she replied:

"I did not."

Says British Attack Failed

Canadian Press Despatch:

BERLIN, Dec. 17.—British troops on the Italian front yesterday launched an attack against the Austro-German lines south of Monte Fontanal Secca, but it broke down before the Teuton positions, the German War Office announced to-day.

BRAN AND SHORTS PRICES ARE FIXED

Food Controller and Millers Co-operating—Farmers to Have Preference.

OTTAWA, Dec. 14. — The Food Controller announced to-night that he had fixed the prices for bran and shorts at $24.50 and $29.50, respectively, per ton in bulk, f.o.b. Fort William, effective December 17. The margin of profit to dealers may also be fixed.

Prices of food at Western points will be the fixed prices, less freight to Fort William.

At Eastern points the prices will be the fixed prices, plus the freight from Fort William.

The Millers' Committee is acting in co-operation with the Food Controller, and preference in the distribution of supplies will be given to the farmers.

PREMIER CALLS AIRMEN CHIVALRY OF THE ARMY.

London. — "The Chivalry of the Army," is the title bestowed upon the British air forces by Premier Lloyd George in a tribute he paid to them in a recent speech in the House of Commons. The premier was moving a vote of thanks to the British armies and navy. Of the aviation service, he said:

"The heavens are their battlefields, they are the cavalry of the clouds. High above the squalor and the mud, so high in the firmament that they are not visible from the earth, they fight out the eternal issues of right and wrong. Their struggles there by day and night are like a Miltonic conflict between the winged hosts of light and darkness.

"They fight the foe high up and they fight him low down, they skim like swallows along the ground, attacking armed men in their trenches. They scatter infantry in the march and destroy convoys. Every flight is a romance, every record is an epic. They are the knights of the war, without fear and without reproach. They recall the old legend of chivalry, not merely by the power of their individual exploits, but by the nobility of their spirit, and among the multitude of heroes we must continuously thank the chivalry of the army."

"HE HAD NOT AN ENEMY."

Pickering News Editor Thinks This Is the Worst thing That Can be Said of a Man.

The Pickering News says: The worst thing that can be said of any man is that "he had not an enemy." It is a very desirable thing for a person to be on friendly terms with every other person. Such a man never creates any trouble in the community in which he lives. No person can say a word against him. But when we find such a man it is quite safe to assume that while he has never created any trouble in the world, he has never accomplished any good. Let one but read the biographies o fall the men in the world who have accomplished anything and we will find without exception they have enemies. The man who brings about reform has all the forces of evil against him. He is proclaimed a "hypocrite" and an enemy of personal freedom. The statesman who may be the savjour of his country, may have half the nation opposed to him.

No matter in whit sphere a man may be employed, if his activities are directed towards the betterment of his fellow men he will find enemies opposed to him. A man who is afraid to be associated with any good work, for fear he may annoy or displease some person is a coward and unworthy to be called a man. The worst thing that could be carved upon his tombstone is "He died without leaving an enemy."

REFUSES TO CANVASS TO BECOME AN IMMORTAL

Joffre Says He Has No Right to Follow Custom of French Academy.

(Correspondence of the Associated Press from Paris.)—Belief that Marshal Joffre would be the next person elected to the French academy has been entertained by the public for months but his reported declination to follow a rule of the academy by announcing himself as a candidate appears to create a situation resembling a deadlock.

The thirty-four "Immortals" now composing the academy are said to be unanimously in favour of Joffre as the first of the six new members to be elected. Everyone has talked about the eventuality— everyone but Joffre, and it appears to be essential that the reticent hero of the Marne speak up if he wants to become an "Immortal." It is the rule of the academy that aspirants for membership declare their candidacy and it has been the tradition that they should call upon the members to solicit their votes, much in the same way as a candidate for a political office. This Joffre has not done and it is said that he will not do it.

"The marshal has never had any ambition to become an Academician," said a close friend of Joffre. "In fact he asserts that he has no right or title to the honour. Several of his friends have urged him to propose his candidacy but he considers that there is no personal consideration in the matter, that if he were chosen it would be simply in honour of the army and that, consequently, personal solicitations or expressions of personal preference in the matter are not in order."

The question now is whether the illustrious company will sacrifice its traditions in order to choose the marshal for one of the vacant seats.

A PRAYER IN TIME OF WAR.

Thou, whose deep ways are in the sea,
Whose footsteps are not known,
To-night a world that turned from Thee
Is waiting—at Thy Throne.

The towering babels that we raised
Where scoffing sophists brawl,
The little antichrists we praised—
The night is on them all.

How should we seek to Thee for power
Who scorned Thee yesterday?
How should we kneel, in this dread hour?
Lord, teach us how to pray!!

Grant us the single heart once more,
That mocks no sacred thing,
The Sword of Truth our fathers wore
When Thou wast Lord and King.

Let darkness unto darkness tell
Our deep unspoken prayer,
For, while our souls in darkness dwell,
We know that Thou art there.
—Alfred Noyes, in The Churchman.

RECIPE FOR WAR BUTTER

One pint sweet milk.
One pound butter.

Warm butter until soft and easily worked. Heat milk blood heat. Place both in a deep dish and beat ten or fifteen minutes with a revolving egg beater, or till all the milk has been absorbed by the butter. Add salt to taste.

This is delicious and is an easy way to make two pounds of butter from one.

Filipino Women.

Women in the Philippines, from Filipino to Ifugao and from Kalinga to Moro, have a lot to say about the way things are run.

My first realization of the different status of Philippine womanhood came on the Pacific steamer on which I has returned to the United States. A young Filipino wanted to wrestle with some of the Japanese on board. But his wife was with him, and she feared she would lose a husband in the melee She vetoed his desire with considerable ease and perfect effectiveness. If she had been a Chinese, Japanese or India of the same class her husband would have wrestled as long as he wanted to or could, and the woman in the case would have kept her mouth shut. In Turkey a man doesn't mention his daughters. But in the Philippines in several cases I have observed that the woman holds the purse and the gavel.—Christian Herald.

The Man in the Navy.

It is probably true that most of us think of the navy as an adventure and not as a career, says James B. Connolly in Collier's Weekly. Yet the navy will take a young man, feed and clothe him, give him a good all around training and while he is yet in middle age retire him with at least $60 a month for the rest of his life. No matter how low his rating has been, that $30 a month is certain after his thirty years of service, while if he has shown moderate intelligence and ambition he can count on close to $100 a month, and this without his having ever been a commissioned officer. The years after his retirement he may spend as he pleases—go into business, get another job and make another wage on top of his pensions. He can go to jail if he prefers. Whatever he does, always there is that sheet anchor of a pension to windward.

Society Islands.

The consular district of Tahiti embraces all of the islands in the south Pacific ocean that are included in the Society, the Tuamotu and the Tubua archipelagoes, the Marquesas, Gambier and Maretiri groups and the island of Rapa, a total of more than 200 islands and islets belonging to France and known as the French establishments in Oceania, or more commonly known as the Society islands. The total population is estimated at 33,000 made up of about 26,000 natives, some 3,000 Chinese and about 4,000 of all other nationalities, including Europeans and Americans. The inhabitants are unevenly distributed throughout the various groups, leaving many of the islands uninhabited.

What's In a Name?

"What a narrow street that is!" said the visitor being shown about the suburban town by a citizen.

"Yes, it is narrow," replied the citizen.

"And in wretched condition. See the holes in the pavement!"

"Yes, it looks bad."

"And dirt everywhere. What is the name of that street?"

"That's Grand avenue.'

His Might Object.

A physician says, "Girls in feeble health should take a tramp through the woods or fields every day."

But suppose a tramp should object to being taken through the woods or fields every day by girls in feeble health?. There are two sides to this argument.

A Real Employee.

"Do you see that young fellow over there?" said the manager of the factory. "He's made up his mind that some day he is going to get my job away from me."

"Is that so? I shouldn't think you'd keep him around here then."

"Great Scott, man! I'd be mighty lucky if every fellow in this plant had the same idea.'

In No Hurry.

"Your self control is remarkable You have been trying to get that telephone number for about twenty minutes, yet you have not lost your temper."

"Don't give me credit for being patient until you know the facts in this case. I've been trying to call up my dentist and tell him I would be down in a few minutes.'

Culinary Engineer Wanted.

"Yes, we've gone to housekeeping My wife has bought a machine to mix the bread, another to stir the cake, a fireless cooker and a whole lot of other devices. And now we need just one thing more."

"What's that?"

"A machinist who can cook."

Not Appreciated.

"Why are you in prison, my good man?" asked the sympathetic visitor.

"I wanted to do a deed of kindness, mum, but de law didn't see it dat way."

"No?"

"I wuz told dat a certain millionaire's money wuz a burden to him, an' I tried to lighten his burden."

Extremely Polite.

He was a man noted for his Chesterfieldian address, and he had been very ill.

"You were at death's door," remarked the doctor as his patient began to mend.

"Really, doctor?" came the reply. "So you happen to know whether I—er—left my card?"

Grinding Sand.

The invention of a machine to grind sea sand, too smooth to be of use in its raw state, has enabled great quantities of it to be utilized in brick manufacture in Virginia.

Big Turkey Ranches.

Exclusive turkey ranches are found in the unsettled foothill regions of California and in parts of Arizona and other western states where 1,000 or more turkeys are raised each season. The establishments are located where the range is unlimited and the natural food of the turkey, such as grasshoppers and other insects, green vegetables and the seeds of various weeds and grasses, is abundant. Advantage also is taken on these ranches of the turkey's relish for acorns, and where these are plentiful but little grain need be used for fattening in the fall. The large flocks of turkeys are managed much like herds of sheep, being taken out to the range early in the morning and brought home to roost at night. They are herded during the day by men either on foot or on horseback and by dogs especially trained for the work.—Indianapolis News.

Her Great Comfort.

Donald and Charlie, two boys of eleven, went for a hike the other day, and when the noon luncheon hour arrived failed to appear after an absence of two hours, causing Donald's mother to become worried, fearing an accident had happened to the boy, who is always prompt at meal times, even if not on other occasions. But the father ate his luncheon calmly, being wise to the ways and wanderings of boys of eleven, and unworriedly started for his office at 1 o'clock, when the wife remarked to him, her brows furrowed with care, "What shall I do if Donald doesn't come?"

"I'll tell you what you do," said her consoler. "Now, if that boy doesn't get back in an hour from how you call me up at the office, and I'll tell you not to worry."

How Watches Vary.

Theoretically, says a jeweler, the best watches of today are perfect, but actually they both gain and lose time every day. Even if the good watch does not vary one second at the end of the twenty-four hours, the expert insists, it has both gained and lost in that time. If it is wound in the morning it runs fast and toward the next morning runs slow, thus equalizing the time. He says the best watches should be wound twice a day and then at only two-thirds of the capacity of the mainspring, thus preventing either binding or extremes of strong or weakened spring. The balance wheel was expected to equalize differences of mainspring tension, but really this is not the case in what is called perfection.

Knots in Boards.

We find knots in the boards which we notice in a lumber pile or in any other place where boards happen to be because the smaller limbs which grow away from the larger limbs of trees grow from the inside as well as the outside of the tree.

When you see a knot in a board it means that before the tree was cut down and the log sawed up into boards a limb was growing out from the inside of the tree at the spot where the knot occurs, says the Book of Wonders.

You will also find that the wood in the knot is harder generally than the rest of the board. This is because more strength is required at the base of a limb and in the part of the limb which grew inside the tree than in other parts, for the limb must be strong enough to support not only the limb itself, but also the smaller limbs which grow out of it.

Eye Strain and Its Dangers.

Never allow children to read or do any form of fine work unless there is a bright, steady light, says a medical journal. Working by firelight or in the dusk causes such a strain on young eyes that they never quite recover, and weak or defective vision is the result. Notice whether a child holds books and work very close to the eyes, and if so consult an oculist, so that the child may be fitted with suitable spectacles.

Liked Them Short.

"Do you think that under any circumstances a minister is justified in using another clergyman's sermon?"

"Well, yes."

"Indeed, sir! Please state the circumstances."

"If it was a very short sermon."—

A Marvel of Memory.

That Italian prodigy of learning, Ignatius de Rosal, made the boast that if any one could repeat a line from any of the four great poets of Italy he would follow it by reciting 100 lines following in due order of succession, and on a trial being made he actually accomplished the feat.

Poor Place For a Will.

"I was reading in the paper," said the fat plumber, "about a man who had his will tattooed on his back."

"Gee," the thin carpenter exclaimed "I'd hate to have my will on my back."

"Why?"

"Because many a will is broken by the courts."

Would Rather Not Go.

"So you were late to school, Bessie?"

"Yes, mamma."

"Why didn't you run, dear?"

"Because you told me never to deceive, mamma."

"But how would that deceive, my child?"

"It might give some one who saw me running an idea that I was anxious to get there, and I wasn't."

Time For the Lecture.

"You're not going so early?"

"Yes, indeed! I have had a fine time at your party, but if I am to get any sleep at all tonight I've got to go now to give my wife a chance to tell me all the breaks I have made while here."

PISTOLS, POISON AND POKER LOOM IN WOMAN'S TRIAL

MINEOLA, L. I.—Poison, poker and pistols figured prominently in the trial of Mrs. Irene Zuckerman in the Nassau County Court, on a charge of assault in the second degree, with her butler, Armand Delfard, as the principal prosecuting witness. Mrs. Zuckerman is twenty-two and exceptionally attractive. She is the wife of Maurice Zuckerman, a wealthy silk petticoat manufacturer, who has one of the largest country homes at Cedarhurst. They have been leaders in the social life of that section, and when Mrs. Zuckerman was arrested one night last summer at the home of her butler, in Inwood, after several shots had been fired, there was a sensation.

Attired in a black velvet suit that hugged her tri mfigure closely, with great furs and a saucy black hat, with a single bold feather, Mrs. Zuckerman evinced much interest in the jurors who were selected to try her.

Says She Borrowed $280.

"I had not been a butler in Mrs. Zuckerman's home two weeks before she had borrowed $280 from me," the butler testified. "She said I could have it any time, and then when I asked for it she said I couldn't have it. I told her she would pay me or I would ask her husband for it, and then he would want to know what she did with the money and I would have to tell him about the poker games and other things.

"She told me she would blow out my brains if I told her husband, but I was not afraid, and when she would not give the money to me I told Mr. Zuckerman and he paid me and then I took my wife, who was cook, and left their employ. But I did not tell Mr. Zuckerman one-tenth of the things I should have told him."

Then followed a recital by Delfard of th eincident at his home, when Mrs. Zuckerman, accompanied by Mrs. Helen Cohen, member of another wealthy family, called.

"I opened the door a little and Mrs. Zuckerman wedged her foot in. Unable to get her foot out, I opened the door suddenly and she fell in. She had an automatic pistal and I fell on her quickly and seized the pistol, but she held on to it while we wrestled out on to the porch and into the yard, where the trigger was pulled several times, but I was holding the barrel away from me and the bullets went wild.

"When I disarmed her Mrs. Buckerman played 'dead,' but when I sent my wife for a policeman she jumped up and said I dare not have her arrested, that Wilbur Doughty, the Republican leader of Nassau County, and Judge Raisig, of Cedarhurst, would not see her go to jail. She also said that if I did have her arrested she would 'get me' for it. Then she begged for the pistol and said she wanted to kill herself. I told her to wait until she gave bail. I knew she would try to shoot me if I gave her the pistol."

Elsie Schwartz, a maid in the Zuckerman home, told of the incidents which prompted Mrs. Zuckerman to go to the butler's home.

"Mr. Zuckerman and his wife had had a quarrel," she testified, "and I was serving the dinner. When I gave Mr. Zuckerman a portion of meat he looked up at his wife and said:

"'Is there any poison in this?'

"Mrs. Zuckerman broke into tears and ran upstairs and got her pistol. She telephone for a taxicab and went over to Mrs. Cohen's home and then to Armand's house."

Prunes can be treated to sweet pickle just as peaches or other fruits.

Apples are good when baked with the cores in, and there is not so much waste.

Fried mush should always be served very hot with butter and syrup.

The secret of good cranberry sauce is quick cooking and very little water.

POPE GLAD BRITISH OCCUPY JERUSALEM

Remarks They Grant the Greatest Liberty to Religions in Their Possessions.

ROME, Dec. 15.—The Pope expresses great personal interest in what he calls "the liberation of Jerusalem," recalling many incidents of injustice against Catholics in Jerusalem and Palestine dealt with by him when he was substitute Secretary of State under Cardinal Rampolla during the pontificate of Leo XIII.

"It is a good thing that Jerusalem fell into the hands of the British," the Pope is reported to have exclaimed. "They are accustomed to grant the greatest liberty to all religions in their possessions."
